

MORE LAND TROUBLE IS IN SIGHT

Expected Ballinger - Pinchot Public Land Controversy Will Be Revived.

[UNITED PRESS LEADERS WIRE.] Washington, Nov. 27.—"There's going to be some fire works on the hill this winter," said a western senator who dropped into town the other day after having casually inspected the now famous Ballinger-Pinchot controversy, from afar.

"I didn't get near enough to the row to stop any of the shells, but you can put it down now that there will be plenty of them flying around the capitol this winter," he remarked. "And say," he added, "I would not have the president's job right now for a lot of money."

Everyone is awaiting word from the White House and wondering what Taft will do.

Here's the situation: Last summer several newspapers criticized Secretary of the Interior Ballinger for his wholesale restoration of the Garfield conservation withdrawals of public land. The cry was taken up at the National Irrigation Congress at Spokane, where ex-Governor Pardee, of California, charged that Ballinger had delivered the west into the hands of the water power trust and was repeated by Pardee, Francis J. Heney, and others at the Conservation Congress at Seattle.

Then L. R. Glavis, a land office agent who had been investigating some Alaskan coal claims which he believed to be fraudulent and in the interests of which Ballinger had once appeared as attorney, went to the president with what he thought was evidence that Ballinger was trying to rush the claims to patent despite testimony that they were illegal. The president exonerated Ballinger in an open letter and fired Glavis. Glavis then made his charges public.

The reason for naming the row the "Ballinger-Pinchot controversy" is that Chief Forester Pinchot was trying to run the department of the interior. Now Ballinger expresses the belief that Pinchot has inspired the attacks on him in the press. The fact is that Pinchot and Ballinger have not been pulling well together in the official harness for some time. Each suspects and mistrusts the other.

In dealing with Pinchot, the president is confronted with the fact that the chief forester is looked upon by the country as the expression of the Roosevelt principles of conservation of the natural resources of the country. He is regarded by many persons especially in the west, as the one man who stands between the "interests" that are said to be trying to monopolize the public resources, and the people.

On the other hand the president has Ballinger, his own selection, as secretary of the interior. He turned Garfield out in order to put Ballinger in, and if he were to sidetrack Ballinger now it would be a reflection on the wisdom of his choice. Then, too, there is Frank Hitchcock, postmaster general, who ran the Taft campaign. Hitchcock is a friend of the secretary of the interior and is said to be largely responsible for his selection as a member of the Taft cabinet.

Taft's way of doing things is different from Roosevelt's and the men whom Taft has put into office are of a distinctly different type from those who surrounded Roosevelt. Ballinger can be said to represent the Taft type. A lawyer, conservative, with perhaps a little leaning toward "property interests," he is regarded by Taft as one of the ablest men in the administration. Pinchot is the "live wire" of the Roosevelt policies.

Those who try to "dope out" in advance what will happen, think that Taft will make one more effort to bring Pinchot and Ballinger into harmonious relations with each other. They predict that he will get Ballinger and Pinchot together and slap each on the back and say, "Look here, you are both zealous for the conservation of the natural resources of the country. You are both good fellows, but you go at it in a different way. This sort of thing is disturbing to my administration. You both are working toward the same end. Get together. Forget it and pull in one direction."

There is little doubt that Taft would like to do this, but most people think the matter has gone too far for this kind of settlement. Ballinger is too thoroughly angry for one thing, and Pinchot may not like to be patted by the same hand that a few minutes before patted Ballinger's back.

If the president fails to bring Pinchot and Ballinger together, he will probably ask congress to investigate. Congress will probably investigate anyhow and so, by requesting the investigation, Taft would pass an uncomfortable situation over to the capitol.

Congress will also take some action as regards the general policy of conservation. This will be separate and distinct from the Ballinger investigation and will revolve around several bills that have been introduced for the purpose of placing the Roosevelt conservation policies on the statute books. A bill calling for the leasing by the government of water power sites and coal lands and giving the federal government power to regulate the charges for products therefrom, is in preparation.

The approach of Christmas excites a storekeeper as much as the approach of election excites a politician

It isn't difficult to strengthen a weak stomach if one goes at it correctly. And this is true of the heart and kidneys. The old-fashioned way of dosing the stomach or stimulating the heart or kidneys is surely wrong. Dr. Shoop first pointed out this error. "Go to the weak or ailing nerves of these organs," said he. Each inside organ has its controlling or "inside nerve." When these nerves fail then those organs must surely falter. The vital truth is leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. A few days' test will surely tell! Sold by Capital Drug Store.

A politician's idea of the original sin is for a man to forget to register.

Tickling, tight coughs can be surely and quickly loosened with a prescription druggists are dispensing everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And it is so very different than common cough medicines. No opium, no chloroform, absolutely nothing harsh or unsafe. The tender leaves of a harmless, lung healing mountainous shrub gives the the curative properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. Those leaves give the power to calm the most distressing cough and to soothe and soothe the most sensitive bronchial membrane. Mothers should, for safety's sake alone, always demand Dr. Shoop's. It can with perfect freedom be given to even the youngest babes. Test it for yourself and see. Sold by Capital Drug Store.
