

KONDON'S CATARRHAL JELLY

Instantly Relieves and Cures Catarrhal Sore Throat

Do not neglect Catarrhal sore throat. It will never get better of itself. Unless treated in time it becomes chronic, leads to loss of voice, foul breath and serious complications.

Kondon's (in sanitary tubes) gives quick relief. Snuff a bit of this aromatic, soothing, healing jelly well into the nasal passages. Take a small portion internally, leaving in the throat as long as possible, rub the throat well with the jelly—you'll find almost instant relief. Get a 5c or 10c tube today of your druggist or send penny postal to us for free sample.

WINDUP OF GREAT CONTEST

The Capital Journal's gigantic contest is now a matter of history. All that remains is for the young ladies mentioned at the top of the column to call and claim their own. All the prizes are ready to be turned over to those who have won them by their popularity and industry.

The contest closed in a blaze of glory and good humor and enthusiasm at 11 o'clock Saturday night. Candidates and their friends thronged the office all day long and the contest department was taxed to its utmost to handle those who had votes and subscriptions to turn in. At 11 o'clock sharp the ballot box was closed and no more votes allowed to be deposited except those that came in through the mail and bore the post mark of December 18. The ballot box was placed in a vault and later turned over to the judges appointed to do the counting, who took it to the Ye. Liberty theater and broke the seals, opened the same and the final count commenced.

The room was packed to the door with candidates and their friends waiting for the final announcement. The counting of the votes was a tedious task for the judges and clerks and was carried on in full view of anyone present. Great care was taken by the judges in counting the votes and two Burroughs adding machines were used to insure absolute accuracy.

The popular Burroughs adding machines used by judges and which were used to facilitate the count in the Capital Journal contest.

Contest Deserved.

The successful contestants are named today as the result of the official count made by these distinguished gentlemen, acting as judges, and who have no motive in the contest other than to accept the invitation of the management to make a thorough and complete canvass of the votes. The mere mention of the names of these gentlemen is assurance enough of their integrity. These gentlemen are well known and highly esteemed by their business associates and with all whom they come in contact as thorough and honest business men.

When the announcement of the winners was made shortly after 4 p. m., Monday, the names of the winners were greeted with approval on all sides. The interest was intense all during the count, and the best feeling prevailed among all those present.

Every ballot voted was carefully scrutinized by the judges and those present expressed themselves as highly pleased with the manner of arriving at the result.

Big Vote Cast.

The aggregate vote cast in the Capital Journal contest is the largest ever polled in a similar contest in the city, if not in the whole northwest, and ran high in the millions.

The conditions of the contest were so easy that it proved attractive from the start, votes were not allowed to county auditors, or on large orders of job work or office supplies and printing. Contestants were not asked to compete against any societies, lodges or organizations, such as church or band, entering the name of some popular young lady, and then the organization working for her with the understanding that the prize won should be given to the organization.

No certain candidates were given advance information concerning the contest or allowed to work from three to four weeks, securing subscriptions before the prizes or names of the contestants were announced, as has been the case in some contests.

Realizing that the candidates entered from outside the city of Salem would have a hard time in competing with the city contestants, the territory covered by The Capital Journal was divided into three districts which assured the different contestants that the prizes would not all be won in the city, which would undoubtedly have been the case if the territory had not been divided. This arrangement proved more than satisfactory, as can be seen by comparing the city and the country districts, and before a week had passed—before the first announcement of the votes—thousands of men, women and children in Salem and the surrounding territory had entered into friendly rivalry, seeking votes for their favorites.

Nip and tuck they fought for two months, each vote adding to the interest of the contest. At no time from the casting of the first ballot was it possible to pick the winners, so close was the battle. From time to time many persons took a guess at the possible winners, but the opinion was hardly expressed before another big batch of votes was recorded and their choice was found among the lower ones. Thus it went throughout the whole contest, first one and then another forging ahead.

But it was just as the manager of the contest expected—the reserve of the various candidates played the most important part, and was the deciding factor in determining the winners.

Everybody Satisfied.

That there should be no disappointment, and that the efforts of the willing workers should not go unrewarded, even though their candidates did not win the grand prize, the officials of the contest divided the territory into five districts and offered prizes for the most popular lady of each. This increased the interest in the contest and resulted in satisfaction for everybody, which was the chief desire of The Capital Journal.

Slowly at first the votes began to come in, then increased gradually for a while, until when the workers got thoroughly warmed up they rolled in in such numbers that the totals soon amounted to enormous figures. The friends of the contestants desired to see them win and insisted on making the fact public by voting for them and getting their friends to do likewise, and the smallest boy or girl was just as powerful as his elders in boosting his favorite candidate. More than one man stole an hour or two from his office at intervals during the contest to make a personal canvass for some friend, and many a dinner dish was left unwashed while the women of the household went calling and incidentally looking for votes.

Winners Feel Proud.

The winners may well feel proud of the fact that they have run one race in a thousand and have come out with the deserving honor of having outrun and outclassed workers who have themselves done exceedingly well and would, under ordinary conditions, have had enough votes to win.

The honor attached to winning is considered by some of the candidates as being worth many times the value of the prize itself. Friends of the contestants have boosted them all along the line, and nothing seemed too hard for them to do where a subscription was gotten and the votes given to the favorite.

There has been quite an army of fair ladies who have made it their special business during the past few months to early and late exploit the virtue of the paper. In the city and in all directions throughout the country there have been many contestants at all times during the day, afoot, on wheels or on horseback, hunting for some one who looked as though he did not take The Capital Journal, and it may be stated right here that there are but few that have that appearance now.

The contestants have all done splendid work, and some have been more successful than others; but this is due largely to the ability to hustle, possessed by the winning candidates.

All Could Not Win.

It is a fact greatly to be deplored that all could not win one of the prizes, but this is impossible, and there is sympathy in plenty for those who have put in days and hours of hard labor and at the end failed to receive a prize for which they have striven; but even then, the work has not all been wasted effort. The honest striving after success, even though the immediate object is not realized, cannot fail to do good. The enthusiasm and energy which was developed is not lost but reverts on one's character, putting iron into the nerve, encouraging one's confidence, stimulating courage and rousing an honest belief in one's ability to undertake and carry to success any task which presents itself. In addition to that, a business experience that she would obtain in no other way.

The Benefits of the Contest.

Every candidate, whether she cares to fight the battle of ballots or not, is better able to fight the battle of daily existence today than she was when she entered the contest. Though she may feel the disappointment keenly, she must realize that facing the world does not seem nearly so formidable a proposition as it did a few weeks ago. Those who are successful are deserving of congratulations and praise. They have striven hard and what they have achieved has been largely the result of untiring, unremitting worry. Early and late for nearly two months they have been piling up voting strength a few votes at a time until the ballots amount high up in the thousands. They will appreciate the prizes a thousand-fold more than they would if they had been laid at their feet without any effort on their part, and are better able to appreciate them at something of their own value.

Rest of Feeling.

During the progress of the entire contest the best of feeling has prevailed and while today's list of winners is quite lengthy, there are many other deserving workers who were not fortunate enough to have their names on the final list, but through their individual efforts have made such a record as to deserve great credit to themselves and the Capital Journal wishes to thank the candidates one and all for their laudable effort. Every candidate not winning prizes will receive her check for the commission due on the 5 per cent of total money turned in by them. In this way every candidate will be rewarded in a small way for time spent. The Capital Journal is the first paper to reward the candidates not winning. Below are the complete standings of all candidates with total votes.

Only One

There is only One Oil Heater for the housekeeper who wants the Best.

By best is meant thorough, all-around work and faultless efficiency down to the smallest detail.

This work must be performed day after day without fuss and fume and without smoke.

PERFECTION Oil Heater

(Equipped with Smokeless Device)

No other oil heater in the world has attained the high heat efficiency and the sure smokeless performance reached by this splendid achievement of modern science.

Turn the wick up as high as it will go—there's no smoke—as low as you please, there's no smell—no fume. In raising, the wick is checked before it reaches the point at which it would smoke, by the new, quickly-removed

Automatic Smokeless Device

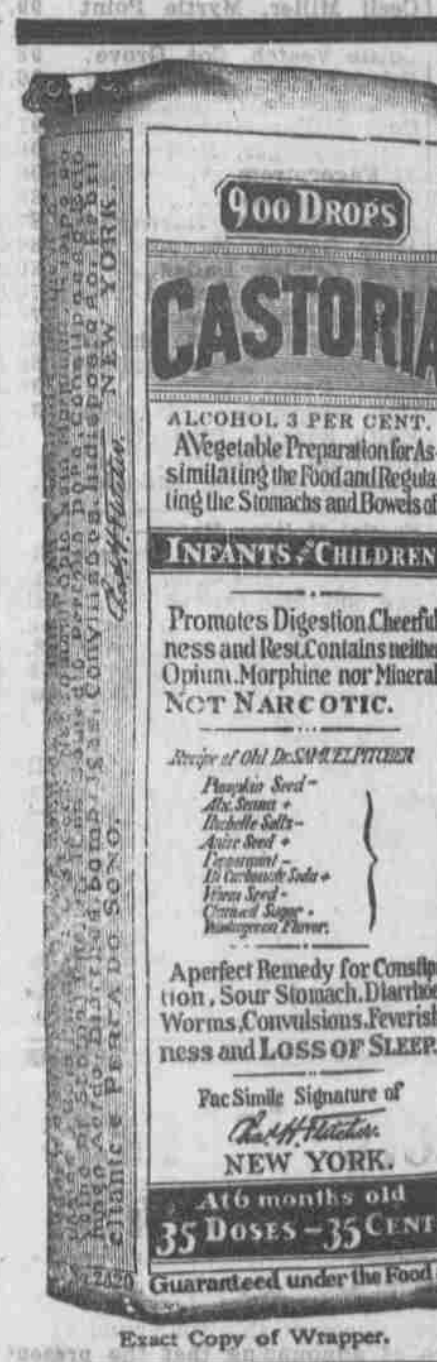

The flame is at its zenith of power, when the wick is locked, thus getting the heater's full capacity.

The heat is as cleanly as that which comes from a steam radiator—and more certain. You may have it just where you want it—beside the window—in the library—in the bath room or in the living room.

Brass font holds 4 quarts of oil—burns 9 hours. Finished in nickel or Japan. Various styles and finishes. Damper top—cool handle—aluminum window frame.
