DOING GOOD WORK ON THE CANAL.

William Jennings Bryan has been down at Panama and in the Commoner publishes the following on how our government is handling things in the Canal Zone:

Schools have been opened in every town and eighteen hundred children are being instructed by fifty-six teachers.

Nor have the morals of the various communities been neglected. Nine resident and four visiting chaplains of different denominations minister to the spiritual needs of the employes of the zone, and at the larger towns club rooms are conducted by representatives of the Young Men's Christian Association.

These rooms are equipped with libraries, reading rooms, bath rooms, gymnasiums, amusement rooms, pool tables, bowling alleys, etc., and more than one-fourth of the American employes are regular members of these associations.

There can be no doubt as to the great value of the services rendered hy these club rooms.

I think it is safe to say that at no former time and under no other government have so many people-men, women and children-been transported from a temperate to the torrid zone for temporary residence, and surrounded with so many of the comforts and conveniences of home. And it is entirely proper that this should be so, for those who are making a success of this national enterprise deserve all the care they are receiving.

An excellent government hotel at Ancon, the Levoli, accommodates transient guests. Gambling and disorderly houses are not allowed on the zone, but these restrictions unfortunately are not observed in Colon and Panama, which are by treaty under the government of the republic of Panama. However, as there are no night trains excepting on Sunday, the visits to Panama and Colon are reduced to a minimum. There are fifty-four saloons in the Canal Zone, each one paying a license of twelve hundred dollars per year.

They are open from 6 a. m. to 11 p. m. on week days, and from 6

a. m. to 11 a. m. on Sundays.

Denmark is building railroads and making the uncarned increment. of the iand increased in value by them pay for the roads built. Even then, less than one-third of the increased values are taken.

The people of Oregon should have the power of taxation close in their own hands.

What they will do with it is another matter.

The reclamation of 42,000 acres of land in Oregon by the national government will be followed by nearly 150,000 acres more. The total cost will not be more than $30 an acre on an average, but will create land values to more than $100 an acre. The entire cost will not equal half that for a "Dreadnaught."

Every dollar of the reclamation fund will return to the treasury. Every dollar of the "Dreadnaught" will sink in a scrap pile.

With the assurance that Uncle Sam will appropriate $50,000 for Siuslaw harbor, and the local taxes giving twice as much more, property should go up a great deal.

The kind of property that will go up in price will not be any kind that human labor and invention will be able to produce or bring in, or take away, or destroy.

That kind of property always increases three times more from such improvements mentioned as their local cost.

In Denmark, a tax on it of one-third the uncarned increment pays back the total cost of the improvements in harbor work, railroad building, canal digging, etc.

The Port of Toledo has been formed for the betterment of Yaquina Bay.

There are magnificent opportunities lying idle all around Yaquina, waiting for better transportation and harbor facilities.

The property benefitted shouldand could pay for the improvements. The state of Oregon should loan to such ports the credit, and the land values should return the loan over a term of years.

That is being done in Denmark with profit to the land owners and the development of the entire community.

It is proposed to build by popular subscription a road from Medford
