

THE CHURCHES' INTRUSION INTO POLITICAL ARENA

(Mida's Criterion.)

Largely without being aware of the injury to the cause of true religion, the church is being used throughout the whole country as a lever to work political or mercenary schemes of individual agitators.

The rule is that the church as an institution bears the brunt of the suffering, while the agitators, regardless of everything but their selfish aims, or their zeal for the issues of so-called temperance, which is really intemperance of the most pronounced character, mount higher and higher on the good name and influence of the church.

These agitators are of several types, one of which consists of those zealous for the promotion of summary legislation and deem every and any means legitimate to accomplish their object.

Another class consists of men of too limited ability to succeed in the pulpit, who find they can make an easy living by their glib tongues and artful and insinuating ways on simple and good-hearted people.

Another type of agitator seeks to attain political preferment by using his organization and the church so that he can be foisted into political office of some description, and is often successful in this.

These classes seek for their own ends to involve the church in affairs political, which the laws directed against personal liberty certainly are.

Such action is not only fraught with great danger to the church but to the State as well.

These organizations generally originate in church edifices loaned for the purpose by the pastor or trustees under the pretense that the object is a moral one. It thus becomes identified with the church to its detriment and loss of prestige, for the effect is to drive out the worshippers with liberal views, leaving behind to maintain the church only a narrow minded coterie. Another way in which the church will suffer is that having taken up the carnal weapons of politics, it cannot screen itself by the sanctity of its proper sphere, and must take as well as give blows in the rough arena of politics.

Already this question is being more and more agitated that if the church is to become a political as well as an ecclesiastical power, it should not be allowed to have exemption from taxation on its edifices and real estate, but should pay its share of the public burdens, not screening itself on the pretext of its sacred commission, which it has deserted.

Those who are leading the church out of its sphere are eager to deprive by law the nation, the state and municipalities of the enormous revenues derived from liquor, but they do not so much as lift their little finger to lighten the burden of taxation that would ensue by even hinting that the church should pay its proportion on its costly buildings and valuable real estate holdings.

This dragging in the church under false pretenses into the arena of State or political affairs is distinctly opposed both to the letter and the spirit of the Constitution of the United States and that of every individual State, which forever divide the two spheres of church and State, which redounds to the safety, permanence and integrity of the nation and its several constituent States.

Anything that seeks to combine what the Constitution under the wise counsels of the founders has set apart is clearly to be deprecated and resisted to the utmost by all patriotic citizens, irrespective of creed, race or party, and as such the Criterion raises its voice against the desecration of the church by its intrusion into civic affairs, and warns it that it will certainly suffer in efficiency and prestige by its departure from the policy laid down by the fathers of this nation.

WHEN TEDDY CAME

ation, passing through the long lines of craft, which dipped their colors to the returning chieftains and then fell into line in order. The Androscoggin, with Colonel Roosevelt on the bridge, sped up the Upper Bay and following close along the Jersey side of the Hudson river, proceeded to the stake boat, anchored off 59th street.

All the piers along the Jersey and New York side of the river were decorated and packed with people to cheer Roosevelt, while every boat that was passed on the river sounded its welcome. It was a continuous ovation along the entire river front, and Colonel Roosevelt was compelled to lift his hat many times and bow to the commuters on the passing ferry boats who manned the rails and cheered him enthusiastically.

At 59th street the Androscoggin rounded the stake boat and headed down stream, followed by the other boats in the parade. As the Androscoggin proceeded the rest of the fleet passed in review, the vessels taking a heavy list to starboard as the thousands on board strove to get another and closer glimpse of the national hero. Nearly every one of the crafts carried a brass band, which played as the cutter passed on toward the battery.

The Land Ceremonies.

While the harbor pageant was taking place, Battery Park, where Colonel Roosevelt was to land, and Broadway and Fifth avenue, along which he was to pass, were filling. It is estimated that in Battery Park alone, where the formal welcoming took place, 150,000 persons had gathered.

Two hundred feet from the entrance to the building of Department of Docks and Ferries, on the western seal wall of the battery, had been erected the stand on which Colonel Roosevelt was to be received by Mayor Gaynor. On this stand were gathered 250 of the most notable men of America, including senators, cabinet members, governors of states, representatives and professional and business men.

About the stand were 200 massive pillars, gaily decorated and joined by garlands of flowers. In the space thus marked off stood 3,000 distinguished guests. Near the reception stand was a private stand erected for Mrs. Roosevelt and her personal friends. This box was loaded with rare roses and orchids. The great Whitehall building, the customs house and the other buildings facing Battery Park were festooned with decorations. The park was so packed with spectators that the police were compelled to close the side-streets and prevent the entry of others fearing that in a panic hundreds might be precipitated over the sea-wall into the bay.

Nearly every person in the great assembly wore the official badge, a silvered coin, bearing the profile of the ex-president in bask relief. The medals worn by the members of the reception committee were silver, dangling from a blue and white ribbon, the official colors of the city of New York. The badge of the Rough Riders was pendant from a yellow ribbon, the cavalry color. All were suspended from a bar which showed the coat of arms of New York, the American eagle and the name of the association. A single gold medal of like design was presented to Colonel Roosevelt.

Promptly at eleven o'clock, the Androscoggin, at the head of the returning committee came ashore. The Androscoggin was followed in turn by the other cutters, which disembarked their passengers, while the remainder of the fleet hurried back up stream to unload their passengers, that they might take part in the land reception, up town.

Mrs. Roosevelt and her party proceeded at once to their private box, which contained only Mrs. Roosevelt, Nicholas Longworth and wife, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Cowles and son, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. T. Douglas Robinson, Monroe D. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Aloop, Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., Miss Alexander, Mrs. Alexander, Kermit, Ethel, Archie and Quentin Roosevelt and Miss I. S. Hagner.

As soon as Mrs. Roosevelt and her party had taken seats, Colonel Roosevelt and the Reception Committee advanced over the platform to the receiving stand. This 200 feet walk was raised six feet in the air, so that Colonel Roosevelt passed above the heads of the assembled thousands, giving them all a good look at him.

As he came from the pier house and advanced toward Mayor Gaynor who was waiting for him with outstretched hands, Colonel Roosevelt was given the loudest vocal greeting it had ever been his fortune to hear. From massed hands there came the roar of music; from the thousands of throats came one hurrah that lasted for several minutes.

Among those on the reception stand were Governor H. B. Quinby, of New Hampshire; Governor Franklin Fort, of New Jersey; U. S. Senator F. P. Flint, of California, and Charles P. Neill, Commissioner of Labor; Lawrence O. Murray, Comptroller of the Currency; Sen. H. C. Lodge of Massachusetts; Congressmen Hamilton Fish, Henry M. Goldfogle, William Sulzer, Herbert Parsons, W. W. Cocks and C. V. Farnes, of New York; Congressman John W. Langley of Kentucky; Edward R. O'Malley, attorney general of New York; A. M. Cheney, superintendent of banks of New York; Gifford Pinchott, former chief forester; Dr. L. S. Rowe, of the American Academy of Political Sciences; Gen. Luke Wright, ex-secretary of war; Fire Commissioner Waldo, Dr. Booker T. Washington and others equally prominent.

In addition to the reception committee which escorted Mr. Roosevelt to the stand were Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, Secretary of the Navy Meyer and Capt. Archibald Butt, the president's personal aide, the latter bearing a personal letter to Colonel Roosevelt from his successor in office.

As soon as the terrific cheering ceased sufficiently for his voice to be heard, Mayor Gaynor, in the name of the people of New York and speaking as a representative of the American nation, welcomed Colonel Roosevelt back to his home.

Colonel Roosevelt responded extemporaneously and was given close attention, though few of the thousands could hear a word he said.

The Land Parade.

Immediately following the speeches, the police formed a cordon about Colonel Roosevelt and the Reception Committee and had literally to fight their way to Broadway, where the land procession was formed. The parade was a small one. First came a company of mounted policemen, picked officers who rode magnificent horses and rode them like centaurs. They were followed by the Mounted Band of Troop C of Brooklyn. Then came 100 of the Roosevelt Rough Riders, clad in the uniforms they wore at San Juan Hill. They were mounted on the horses of Troop C and received a continuous ovation as they rode past in the parade. Behind the Rough Riders came 3500 Spanish war veterans. Following came the Seventh Regiment band, on foot, proceeding the open carriage in which sat Colonel Roosevelt, Mayor Gaynor and Chairman Cornelius Vanderbilt. Behind came the fifty open carriages containing the members of the Reception Committee.

Broadway seemed a solid mass of people as the little parade drove up. New York was never great on decorating, but every building along the street was decked in bunting, while every man, woman and child in the vast multitude seemed to be waving an American flag. The reception was spontaneous. People cheered themselves hoarse. Colonel Roosevelt smiled broadly, bowed continually to right and left and tipped his hat constantly.

Fifth Avenue, from Washington Square to 59th street, had been assigned to various clubs and organizations, which lined the sidewalks and acted as a human wall to hold back the massed thousands. Behind the uniformed organizations were jammed a living sea of people, while every window along Broadway and Fifth Avenue was filled to overflowing with people who desired to get a better glimpse of a former president.

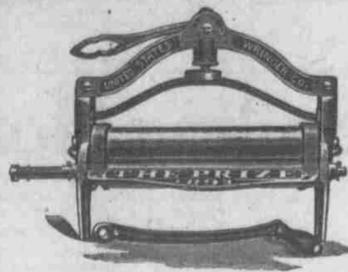

From the Battery, the little cavalcade passed up Broadway, in which every office building was jammed with spectators to Fourth street. It turned over Fourth street to Washington Square, wound through the square beneath the massive granite arch erected to the memory of the first President of the United States and passed into Fifth Avenue.

The vista up the avenue that greeted the former president's eye brought him to his feet, hat in hand, the Roosevelt smile broadening almost into a laugh of delight. For miles ahead, as far as the eye could see, was packed such a gathering as never assembled on New York streets. Uniformed organizations, with bands blaring, stood at attention. Here and there flowers were thrown into the street as the president passed. Thousands of men and women waved flags and cheered. This hearty ovation continued the whole length of the drive up Fifth Avenue. It was noticeable that the homes of the "predatory rich" along society boulevards were all thrown open, every window framing a crowd that gathered to witness the triumphant procession.

At 59th street and Fifth Avenue, the procession halted and disbanded, and America had, for the day, completed its welcome to its foremost private citizen.

Among the organizations in line on Fifth Avenue were the "Roosevelt Rooters", the Army and Navy Union, the Brooklyn Republican League, the United Hungarian Societies, the Tart Societies, the Red Men, the Northside Chamber of Commerce, the Hamilton Club of Chicago, the Republican Club of New York, the Illinois Club of Los Angeles, the Roosevelt Enthusiasts of Houston, Texas, delegations of Red Men from Houston and Philadelphia, and Minnesota Doctor Famous.

Discovers Simple Remedy for Appendicitis.

Minnesota physicians and surgeons are becoming famous the world over. A Minnesota physician, a graduate of German Universities, has discovered a simple remedy for treating appendicitis without operation, although perhaps in very rare cases, operation may still be advisable. This physician deserves the gratitude of the entire world by conquering this wide-spread disease. The remedy, called Alder-I-ka, is composed of buckthorn bark, glycerine and other simple ingredients scientifically compounded.

Because Alder-I-ka COOLS the diseased parts and DRAINS OFF all impurities, which no other medicine can do, ONE DOSE instantly relieves stomach or bowel trouble. The drug store of J. C. Perry's reports large sales and wonderful results.

Almost any doctor will tell you, if your bowels do not move each day, or if you have wind or gas in your stomach or bowels, or a heavy feeling after eating, you may very likely get Appendicitis. By taking Alder-I-ka just once each week, Appendicitis can gain no foothold.

A valuable book, showing many pictures of the curious little Appendicitis, and telling how Appendicitis is caused, and how you can easily guard yourself against it, can be secured free for a short time at the above druggists. You should read this book and take no chances.
