SALEM AS THE MODEL MORAL CITY.

Salem is getting a lot of good advertising during the present prohibition campaign.

The most radical advocate of Oregon Dry in 1910 does not attack Salem as a moral city.

The Georgia whirlwind lady could not get hold of a single, glittering, hard cold fact of crime caused by a Salem saloon.

The prohibition parade managers could not get ragged children to show as the products of the Salem saloons.

Salem has no poor or ragged people caused by saloons.

Rev. Clarence True Wilson charged that for each of the fourteen saloons in Salem (population 18,000) there was a blind pig running loose.

But, like some other dry statements, there was no fact to sustain his accusation.

A blind pig is supposed to have a government license, and that can be easily proven from the internal revenue collector.

But no such proof is offered that Salem has a single blind pig.

Truth is, there is not an unlicensed, unregulated liquor dealer at Salem.

The dry parade could find none of the conditions of vice, crime, poverty or immorality charged up to the liquor traffic generally existing at Salem.

If they had they would have paraded those conditions.

Would it not have been fair to admit that Salem, as an University city, is a clean, decent sort of place?

Uninformed and reckless prohibition agitators do slander Salem, and represent it as a perfect hell hole of the Rum Demon.

A merchant in the interior of this state listened to one of these rampant defamers of our stainless flag and refused to allow his sons to come to school at Salem.

There is more drunkenness in his shrimp of a dry town in one week than in Salem in a year.

Professors in Willamette University, who are prohibitionists, have many times admitted to the writer that moral conditions surrounding young people at Salem were better than at so-called dry college cities, like Eugene and Corvallis.

It seems the W. C. T. U. is no longer an organization to create better moral conditions by education.

It has become the propagandist of the national Prohibition party.

Frances Willard believed more in Christianity and education than she did in making men good by law.

She did not divide up her faith in God and salvation through Christ with a constitutional amendment to legalize manufacture and sale for medicinal purposes.

The salvation of society was to be accomplished through the home, the church and the school house.

That was the faith of Frances E. Willard, but the organization she formed now believes more in a state constabulary than it does in God and the Bible.

During the recent state fair there were in one week over 50,000 visitors in Salem.

In spite of the fact that they were about one-half people from dry counties, there were only 48 arrests for drunkenness during the state fair week. Not three were Salem men, and three-fourths were from surrounding dry counties.

Now don't say that anyone can get drunk at Salem and not be arrested.

The regular Salem police force arrest a drunken man on sight, no matter who he is.

During the state fair week five special policemen were employed, and especially instructed to arrest any person who got drunk.

In all that week, with 50,000 visitors in town, the whole police force arrested only 48 drunks, and most of them outside bums.

Not as many as there are shooting and cutting affairs in a week in some of the large dry counties of the South.

On the day that there were more than 5000 German people in the city from all over the state—the second day of the state fair—there was not a single arrest of one of them for drunkenness.

The Salem system of dealing with the liquor traffic is unique—combining regulation and revenue.

The license is $600 for saloons, $300 for restaurants and $200 for drug stores.

There are 13 saloons, one drug store and one cafe that have licenses from the city. No more licenses are issued for the present.

No other government licenses are held at Salem, hence there are no speak-easies, blind tigers, dives or blind pigs.

A license is revoked permanently upon a second violation, and no liquor business is allowed to be opened in that place again.

There are no gambling devices, back rooms, boxes, dancing, music, minors, women, back doors, side doors, or Sunday business allowed.

There are clear, open windows, with full view of the bar, and you can look off the sidewalk clear through to the rear end of the saloon, with no place for drunks to lie down, or loaf or sleep on the premises.

Salem saloon keepers are nearly all men of families, men of property, responsible in a business way.

No license is allowed to be transferred unless the applicant produces documents to show that he has a good business character, is a man of good habits, and is not a law breaker.

The professional prohibition agitator objects to these regulations, and wants saloons to be conducted by the worst class possible.

He knows that one dive will do more to make sentiment for prohibition than forty well-conducted saloons.

The prohibitionist prefers to drive every honest and responsible man out of the business.

He prefers to inaugurate an era of bootleggers and to drive the liquor business into the hands of a criminal class.

KILL THE BIPARTISAN MACHINIE.

The voters of Oregon owe it to themselves to kill off the Bi-Partisan machine in Oregon politics.

That is the most vicious combination in the evolution of politics in any state in the Union.

It is an old game in New York, where Platt always had Tammany as a side partner in vicious deals.

The state of Oregon has been honeycombed with this bi-partisan scheme and every state institution is full of it.

Men who have no principles or convictions but who mask as Republicans and Democrats enter into partnership.

The partnership is a scheme to divide the spoils and emasculate the voters who are holding positions under the deal.

That accounts for Republicans in the State departments in this campaign fighting parts of the ticket.

The political gamblers even take into consideration the fatalities that beset the paths of public officials.

The Bipartisan Machine plans to capture the whole state government and put Oregon under the heel of a tammany combination.

Voters who want clean progressive government should support the Republican nominees of the Direct Primary law.

HOMER DAVENPORT'S NEW BOOK.

There is a world of humor in "The Country Boy," and then some.

This volume is the story of his own life in the Waldo Hills and at Silverton.

All the old "first families" figure in the book with sketches and descriptions.

Coolidge and McClaine, the old mill dam, the covered bridge and Auntie McMillan are all there.

The Silverton band, Homer's dog "Duff," the horse "Old John" and the Good Templars' lodge are all there.

There is no better native humor written than Homer's account of taking the village bells to a country dance, when "the hens breathed heavily on the back axle."

His final departure for San Francisco, where he won fame, as the world's greatest cartoonist, is a fitting conclusion of the book.

FROM CRADLE TO GRAVE INGERSOL'S MASTERPIECE

Born of love and hope, of ecstasy and pain, of agony and fear, of tears and joy dowered with the wealth of two united hearts—held in happy arms with lips upon life's drifted foot, blue-veined and fair, where perfect peace finds perfect form—rocked by willing feet and wooed to shadowy shores of sleep by siren mother, singing soft and low—looking with wonder's wide and startled eyes at common things of life and day—taught by want and wish and contact with the things that touch the dimpled flesh of babe—lured by light and flame, and charmed by color's wondrous robes—learning the use of hands and feet, and by the love of mimicry beguiled to utter speech—releasing prisoned throats from crabbed and curious marks on soiled and tattered leaves—puzzling the brain with crooked numbers and their changing, tangled worth—and so through years of alternating day and night, until the captive grows familiar with the chains and walls and limitations of a life. And time runs on in sun and shade until the one of all the world is wood and wca, and all the lore of love is taught and learned again. Again a home is built, with the fair chamber wherein faint dreams, like cool and shadowy vales, divide the billowed hours of love. Again the miracle of birth—the pain and joy, the kiss of welcome and the cradle song drowning the drowsy prattle of a babe. And then the sense of obligation and of wrong—pity for those who toil and weep—tears for the imprisoned and despaired—love for the generous dead, and in the heart the rapture of a high resolve. And then ambition with its lust of pelf and place and power, longing to put upon its breast distinction's worthless badge. Then keener thoughts of men, and eyes that see behind the smiling mask of craft—flattered no more by the obsequious cringe of gain and greed—knowing the uselessness of hoarded gold, of honor bought from those who charge the usury of self-respect, of power that only bends a coward's knees and forces from the lips of fear the lies of praise. Knowing at last the unstudied gesture of esteem, the reverent eyes made rich with honest thought, and holding high above all other things—high as hope's great throbbing star above the darkness of the dead—the love of wife and child and friend. Then locks of gray, and growing love of other days and half remembered things—holding the withered hands of those who first held his, while over dim and loving eyes death softly presses down the lids of rest. And so, locking in marriage vows his children's hands and crossing others on the breasts of peace, with daughters' babes upon his knees, the white hair mingling with the gold, he journeys on from day to day to that horizon where the dusk is waiting for the night. At last, sitting by the holy hearth of home as evening's embers change from red to gray, he falls asleep within the arms of her he worshipped and adored, feeling upon his pallid lips love's last and holiest kiss.

RING WORM AND DANDRUFF

They Are Each Caused by a Pesticiferous Germ.

Ring worm and dandruff are somewhat similar in their origin; each is caused by a parasite. The germ that causes dandruff digs to the root of the hair, and saps its vitality, causing falling hair, and, finally, baldness. Without dandruff there would never be baldness, and to cure dandruff, it is necessary to kill the germ. There has been no hair preparation that would do this until the discovery of Newbro's Herpicide, which positively kills the dandruff germ, allays itching instantly and makes hair glossy and soft as silk. Take no substitutes. There is nothing "just as good." Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. One dollar bottles guaranteed.—J. C. Perry, Druggist.
