

AN AFTER ELECTION VIEW OF ROOSEVELT POLITICS

One Paper Serves It Up in the Language of Artemus Ward's Epitaph on an Energetic Friend--"He Undertook Too Much, and He Did It"--Newspapers Handle the Colonel as Though They Considered Him Among the "Can't Come Backs" as a--Was.

New York, Nov. 10.—Commenting on the result of the elections, the New York newspapers generally regard it as a rebuke to Theodore Roosevelt and a death blow to his ambition and his new nationalism.

The World says: "Theodore Roosevelt and new nationalism have gone down to their Waterloo. Mr. Roosevelt will not be the Republican candidate for president in 1912. When the World made Mr. Roosevelt the issue in this campaign, he gladly accepted the challenge and spread himself over the political map from the Rocky Mountains to the Atlantic Ocean. He elbowed Mr. Taft and the Republican administration aside while he conducted a skyrocket campaign for a third term and his own political apotheosis.

"Mr. Roosevelt has been speaking for many weeks. Now the people have spoken and they have repudiated Rooseveltism. And wherever Mr. Roosevelt has been beaten, he has been beaten by Republican votes.

"Instantly a reaction set in, big with a threat of revolt, but the more he was protested with and opposed, the more headstrong and violent Mr. Roosevelt showed himself. He could brook no question of his infallibility and bore himself as one whose word was necessarily a fiat with the people. The rude awakening has now come. None of Mr. Roosevelt's reflections today can be more bitter than the perception that his old sagacity in divining the hearts of the people had failed him so disastrously.

World Repeats Saying.

"The World repeats now what it said time and time again during the campaign. A Republican victory would have been a Roosevelt victory, and a Republican defeat is a Roosevelt defeat. When the Republican convention in 1912 looks for this mysterious Moses whom Root has so eloquently described, it will not look in the direction of Oyster Bay."

The Brooklyn Eagle says:

"Artemus Ward once wrote an epitaph on an imaginary character. 'He undertook to do too much and did it.' Mr. Roosevelt undertook to do too much and did it, and the effort has for a time at least undone him. The result, education to other men, should be so to the ex-president. We are not sure that it will be. His disposition is not docile. His temperament is with difficulty cooled. His ability to see, not in his stars, but in himself, the causes of defeat and disappointment has, to be sure, not heretofore been tested, but the resentment of the man, even under hitherto unsuccessful opposition, has created the belief that for the defeat which he has encountered he will hold others responsible and himself quite free from blame.

Colonel Made Too Much Of.

"Let him make no mistake as to the meaning of the verdict in this state. In the up-state counties the drop of Stimson below Hughes' figures, is three that of Dix below the Chanler vote. Republicans stayed at home. It was not disapproval of their party's candidate. Mr. Stimson was rather above the average. They had no reason for their ap-

THE PITIFUL ENDING OF A GREAT CAREER

COUNT TOLSTOI RENOUNCES THE WORLD AND WILL END HIS LIFE AS A RECLUSE PRACTICALLY IN SOLITARY CONFINEMENT.

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.] St. Petersburg, Nov. 14.—The spectacle of Count Leo Tolstoi, self-exiled in his old age, has sent thrill of pity throughout the land of the czar. Every aid is being given the countess Tolstoi to induce her husband to forsake his plan of becoming a recluse, and entering upon a living death.

The great Russian novelist is in seclusion in the convent of Kyevelest, one of the severest monasteries in the world, refusing to see any of the messengers sent by his family, and obtaining consolation from his daughter, Alexandra, who is a nun. The amanuensis of Tolstoi is with him, and, rumor says, the count plans, in the winter of his life, to journey to Canada to join the colony of the Doukhebers.

Reports that Count Tolstoi has become reconciled to the Greek church, which excommunicated him after his most famous work, "The Resurrection," was published, have not been verified. The countess Tolstoi and her daughter seek to have the count return to the home which his departure has made desolate.

"The countess is not exactly as represented in the press," said a prominent Russian diplomat today. "She loves publicity, and was so flattered that, like many a woman whom Tolstoi and I have mercilessly dissected, she became tired of her reflected glory of being a great man's wife, and grew autocratic and assertive. Then the grand old man of the forest found himself hampered at the closing of details, and he has gone back to nature, with principles as firm as they have been throughout his wonderful life."

All doubt that the count's flight from home was contemplated was set at rest today by one of Tolstoi's daughters, who declared that her father made every preparation as though he intended being regarded henceforth as among the dead.

"He has refused to return or communicate with us," she said dolefully. She is stricken with grief, and has little hope of inducing him to return.

"He has taken this step because he believes it to be one more advance in his conception of his duty and a higher life. He is assuredly in his right mind. We who love him know he had no need of living a kindlier, holier life than he has done for these many years. His life has been simplicity; his nature wholly above the ordinary plane of humanity. To know him was to adore him.

"Now that he is gone we are utterly broken hearted, and our home is made desolate."

That Count Tolstoi looked not to the earth for his reward was shown recently by his refusal to accept the Nobel peace prize. That he didn't seek pecuniary reward was also shown by his refusal to copyright an unpublished novel, for which he was offered an immense sum. Money carried such slight weight in the eyes of the great writer that he objected when his wife's son raised the rents of the tenant's on the son's estate.

Grateful thousands tell it—How weak backs were made strong—Weak kidneys made well—Urinary disorders corrected. Salem people add their testimony. They gladly praise Doan's Kidney Pills.

For quick relief and lasting cures, Salem evidence is now complete. Salem testimony is confirmed; Reports of early relief substantiated. Cures doubly proved by test of time. Let a Salem citizen speak. A. J. Wood, 733 N. Front St., Salem, Ore., says: "About two months ago I began to suffer from kidney and bladder trouble. The kidney secretions were too frequent and painful in passage, causing me much annoyance. I had often heard Doan's Kidney Pills highly recommended and thinking they might prove of benefit, I procured a box at Dr. Stone's drug store. I can truthfully say that the use of one box freed me of every symptom of kidney complaint. I strongly advise other kidney sufferers to give this remedy a trial."

The above statement was given Jan. 30, 1905 and was confirmed on Nov. 20, 1909 by Mr. Wood. He said: "The statement I gave in 1906 publicly recommending Doan's Kidney Pills still holds good. This remedy cured me of kidney trouble and I have had no return attack." For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. MRS. CRIPPEN IS NOT HERE SAY THE PINKERTONS

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.] Seattle, Wash., Nov. 14.—William A. Pinkerton, head of the famous detective agency bearing his name, is in Seattle and was most emphatic in his declaration that the reports of Belle Elmore-Crippen being still alive, are all canards.

"We handled the case in this country for Scotland Yard," said Pinkerton, "and furnished a considerable part of the evidence upon which Crippen was convicted, and we know that Belle Elmore-Crippen is not in this country."

Pinkerton is the son of Allan Pinkerton, the founder of the association who provided safe escort for President Lincoln to Washington in 1861.
