HOLLYWOOD

THE GEM OF OREGON

There have been subdivisions before, and there will probably be subdivisions after Hollywood is sold, but there never has been a better one, and there never will be one quite as good as Hollywood, for the reason that no land in the state is as fine as we are offering for sale.

This place is close to town and is divided into convenient sizes and is cheap. None of these points, however, compare with its chief characteristic, which is the richness of the soil.

Oregon, in all its richness and productiveness, would not amount to much had not some of the big ranches been cut up into small holdings. It is the members of families that count, not the number of acres that make up a country.

Offers homes to a large number of families, just at the outskirts of Salem, just a mile east of the Fair Grounds, and at a price per acre far less than a cheap lot would cost.

For fruit, berries or garden truck Hollywood has no equal in this or any other part of Oregon. You don't have to take our word for this; ask any old-timer if he knows the George Savage Farm; that's Hollywood—and he will tell you that you make no mistake buying there.

It won't be long the way things are going that way before a car line will pass Hollywood, and then the land there will sell readily at two and three times what you can buy it for now.

Hollywood Is Divided Into Five and Ten Acre Tracts

And is being offered on easy terms at $175 per acre and up. It costs you nothing to see Hollywood, and you miss the best opportunity yet presented to the people of Salem if you overlook this tract. Five tracts sold last week.

We have autos and rigs ready to go out at any hour.

been stronger than religious association. Mrs. Felicita Rees and Mrs. Stephen Bridges, mothers of the girls, declared their daughters were living in See's "school" with their full permission.

"We have absolute life and cannot sin," the mothers explained.

The girls' contention was similar to that of their mothers.

"Nobody in the 'Absolute Life' can sin," they explained. "We believe such things as Mr. See believes. We cannot understand why the law should interfere."

Mildred's father has not been won over by these arguments, and was angry when he learned where his daughter was and threatened to kill the leader of the cult. He alleges that See has hypnotized his wife and daughter.

See is separated from his wife. In his school, which he called the Junior Commonwealth, he had a score of boys and girls ranging from 3 to 25 years. He is teaching them the principles of the "Absolute Life," which he says was shown him in a revelation.

The children, he says, are being purified and eventually will be beyond the power to sin.

Portland, Ore., Jan. 7.—Mona Rees, whose name is connected with that of Evelyn Arthur See, fountain head of the "Absolute Life" cult, which is being investigated by the Chicago authorities today, formerly lived in Portland.

According to friends here, the young woman is 22 years old. She left Portland several years ago for Chicago where she joined her mother.

SAYS STREET IS LEFT IN DANGEROUS CONDITION Salem, Or., Jan. 6, 1911.

Ed. Journal: Referring to the city marshal's recent instructions to the police officers to read up on the city ordinances, this evidently has not been taken very seriously either by the chief or his men. I refer to the menace to travel maintained by the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company on Chemeketa street, in front of the city hall, namely the large pile of gravel in the middle of the street, left night after night, without warning lights.

Yours, truly, GEORGE S. WHITE.

PRESIDENCY SENATE SPEAKERSHIP HOUSE STILL UNDECIDED

Indications are that the presidency of the senate will not be determined today, but a deadlock is the matter stands. The lines are strictly drawn between Bowserman and Selling, and no chance of a compromise. The speakership fight was given a new turn by Abrams and Reynolds going over to Eaton, and trying to take all of the Reynolds following with them. The claim is made that the assembly faction in Marion county advised this to secure the chairmanship of ways and means for Marion county for themselves. The Eastern Oregon strength is divided between Rusk and Thompson. McKinney going out of the fight. Rusk has the support of the Multnomah delegation solid, except Rashlight, who, it is said, will not qualify. Indications are there will be no caucus, but the election will be fought out in the open house on Monday upon organization of the legislature. The fight is being transferred to Salem.

Senator Ross and throughout the journey he failed to mingle with those making up its composition. Prior to leaving Portland, the delegation halted long enough to have a picture taken by a photographer. Cities Letters from Supreme Court. McCamant began his argument with the statement that it had never been contended that Ross had taken the money for which he was indicted, of stealing for his own use, but that he allowed it to mingle with the funds of his bank. He explained that a statute passed in 1907 forbade a general deposit of the educational fund and that Ross' offense consisted in allowing it to mingle with the general funds of the bank instead of placing it in special deposit, and being unable to pay it to the state when his insolvency failed. He had been guided by a decision in the Forty-second Oregon, he said, which held that this was no crime, and was ignorant of a statute passed in 1907 changing the law and that while ignorance of the law was no excuse, he had acted within the law according to his interpretation—as any layman would interpret it.

He then cited the fact that the 12 jurors who convicted Ross had signed a petition for his pardon—the last signing within the last few days; that Ex-district Attorney Manning had signed a letter recommending that it be granted and that so had District Attorney McNary; and finally that four of the judges of the supreme court who had sustained his conviction in the lower court had written a letter jointly saying that there was no moral turpitude involved in the offense and that Ross had reason to believe that he acted within the law when he committed the crime of which he was convicted and that Justice King wrote a personal letter reiterating the views held by him in his dissenting opinion, and favoring Ross.

Mayor Simon Comes to Bat. Mayor Simon, of Portland, was the next man to come to the bat and he spoke eloquently of the life of Ross. He had known him from the time he set foot upon Oregon soil—known him as a man of integrity, and honor, a man of his word. He took the same view of the law as McCamant and maintained that a pardon should be granted.

Ex-senator Fulton followed with considerable of a discourse on the law, his views coinciding with those of McCamant and Simon. He had infinite respect for the supreme court, but before this decision, had he been asked if that was the law, he would have replied in the negative. He closed with the eloquent appeal that should Ross be compelled to go to prison and serve out his sentence, that the "shame" would be on the state of Oregon.

J. E. Werlein spoke along the same lines, so did Harrison Allen, and Judge McGinn. The latter did not direct his remarks so much to the law as he did to the times which prevailed when Ross was indicted and convicted. We have all in the past, he maintained, been guilty of the same offense of Ross—it was a general understanding that bankers might take the state's money and let it mingle with the bank's general fund and take interest upon it; and it would not be fair now to single Ross out and make him serve time in the penitentiary when others were allowed their liberty who had been equally guilty.

Rev. Gilbert and Rev. Foules, the latter Ross' pastor, spoke in behalf of the convicted banker, voicing the view that he had already been punished sufficiently without having to serve out a sentence in the state prison.

Oregonian to Be Silent. Mr. McCamant concluded the remarks in behalf of Ross. In presenting the petition to the acting governor, in his first argument, he took occasion to assure him that H. L. Pitcock, of the Oregonian, was the best man to sign it, and that he had been authorized to state from him, that, in the event the pardon was granted, that the Oregonian would not criticize the action of the acting governor. He also stated that he had been given the same assurance by its managing editor, Edgar Piper, and when it came to the closing he took occasion to give the governor a few more assurances, among others that he would feel happier every day of his life when he thought of it, if he granted the pardon.

Ross a Gentleman. After giving the acting governor this assurance, he proceeded to inform the acting governor that Ross was a gentleman—a man with a very sensitive heart. Some dread incarceration in prison because it deprives them of their liberty, but Ross, being of a sensitive heart, had suffered more than that—suffered all the pains that a human soul is capable of suffering by being indicted and convicted, and that punishment, alone, should be sufficient without the imposition of any other.

Pardon Is Only Hope. He also stated in his concluding remarks that Ross' last hope of freedom lay in a pardon. The case had been taken before the supreme court of the United States on a writ of review, he stated, but he gave it as his opinion that, as soon as that court convened, that the writ would be dismissed, and that, unless a pardon was issued, that Ross would have to serve out the five-year sentence imposed.

Governor Impassive. Throughout the hearing Acting Governor Bowserman sat impassively listening to the argument, there was nothing to indicate that he was in any way impressed with the claims of wealth and influence before him, and the case itself, than he would have been had the governor's cot been filled with a bunch of laboring men, and the case itself that of some poor and obscure criminal. He listened with courtesy to each speaker, but asked no question, and when the last had been heard announced that he would pass on the case in the afternoon or in the evening.

It is quite certain this afternoon that Governor Bowserman will not act upon the matter until Sunday evening, and possibly not until Monday morning.
