

UP-TO-DATE MINSTRELS TONIGHT

LEW DOCKSTADER WITH A COMPANY OF ALL STARS TO SET SALEM LAUGHING TONIGHT AS IT NEVER LAUGHED BEFORE.

Lew Dockstader and his "Twentieth Century Minstrels," as he is pleased to term the organization now under his control, is to be the attraction at the Grand Opera House tonight.

Dockstader has always been a great favorite on the Pacific coast, and his coming will be hailed with delight by his many personal friends, as well as by his admirers, especially so, as this will be the first minstrel show of the season. While it has grown to be the fashion to decry to a certain extent this time-honored form of entertainment there is still existing, especially among the older members of any community, a lurking sentiment in favor of the minstrels, a tiny spark which is easily fanned into a flame when "minstrel day" arrives. While Lew Dockstader is undoubtedly the most popular minstrel man who ever stepped on the stage, he no doubt owes his vogue to the fact that he has not cared particularly for the traditions of minstrelsy, and has tried to be up-to-date and progressive in everything that he does. For instance, in his show this year the proverbial semi-circle of the "first part" has been abandoned, and the company appears at the rise of the curtain as members of a swell colored organization known as "The Bossum Hunt Club," and they are seated at tables on the lawn in front of the club house, anxiously awaiting the arrival of Dockstader himself. This scene is such a distinct departure from the ordinary minstrel first part that it may prove to be a bit shocking to some of the old timers, but it is said there is plenty of fun in it, and that it also permits the introduction of some good singing by the vocal contingent of the organization. Dockstader claims that his entertainment is a minstrel show with a plot, and a well developed story is told, one quite as consistent as is to be found in any of the modern musical comedies. The second part of the Dockstader show, instead of consisting of a number of vaudeville features, as used to be the custom, is a continuation of the first part, and the "plot" is carried out to a logical conclusion. While Dockstader himself forms a big part of the show he is not the only one, however, and it is promised that he has gathered together an exceptional band of singers, dancers and recitists. Among the most important members are: Carroll Johnson, Eddie Mazier, Happy Naulty, Charles Falk, William Brandts, Frank Farron, Allen Campbell, Charles Raymond, Thomas Hughes, William Smith and about 80 others. During the morning of "minstrel day" a street parade will be given, starting from the theater at high noon.

Prices, $1.50, $1.00, 75c and 50c.

Call For Bids.
Notice is hereby given that the undersigned will receive bids up to 5 o'clock p. m. on Monday, May 1st, 1911, for the improvement of 13th street, from the North line of Ferry street to the South line of Marion street, with concrete pavement, according to the plans and specifications adopted for such improvement. The council reserves the right to reject any and all bids and waive any and all irregularities in the manner of submitting bids in the interest of the city.

SHOWS HOW MODERN GENIUS IS LIGHTENING WOMAN'S WORK AND POINTS OUT THE MANY VAST LABOR SAVING DEVICES

Not every woman realizes that a revolution is surely taking place in all matters that effect the running of the home. One of the most marked features of this movement to make conditions satisfactory for the housekeeper is the interest recently displayed by the State Federation of Women's Clubs.

The New Experiment Stations.
In several states, notably in New Jersey and Connecticut, experiment stations have been established for trying out labor-saving machines of all sorts, and testing various food preparations. Hundreds of inventions have been patented for lightening the labor of dish washing, cleaning, cooking, etc., but only a few are adequate for the demands made upon them, or are built on a scale that fits them for average homes. Many labor-saving machines are so large and expensive that they are suited only for hotels and clubs, where they have long been installed, others are too complicated in their construction, so are easily put out of order and rendered useless.

The Average Housekeeper
Has neither time nor money to use in finding out which of these inventions will lighten her labors, and give her the leisure she covets for reading and social intercourse. She reads about the proper proportion of proteids and other elements that should be supplied by her table if her family is to be properly nourished, but, without any special training in domestic science, most of such information fails to give her practical help in laying out her table money to the best advantage.

The Club Woman.
Just here the club experiment station steps in. Manufacturers of meritorious articles that they wish to sell to women are only too glad to send a sample to the station free of charge, knowing that, if it stands the test and is endorsed, club women all over the state—and their non-club friends—will be informed of the fact, and will buy when they are assured of the value of the machine, food or other domestic article. Women can consult the committee in charge about any domestic problem and get practical, trustworthy information. On the other hand, manufacturers will, it is hoped, learn from the reports of the club station just what sort of articles are most likely to answer the requirements of the women in their home state, and presumably those of others all over the country.

Ninety Per Cent Houseworkers.
Ninety per cent of the women in this country do their own work, and are vitally interested in any machinery to lighten their labor, or save the drain upon the husband's earnings made by the increased cost of all kinds of commodities. The study of expense is a feature of prime importance, that is embodied in all reports made from the new stations. Just as the sewing machine has superseded hand labor in the making of clothes, will other household machinery do away with domestic drudgery.

The Obsolete Broom.
The vacuum cleaner is the most important labor-saving device for the home that has so far been produced by man's ingenuity, and the time is not far distant when the broom and other dust-raising instruments will be as obsolete as the farmer's hand scythe. In the quaint little city of Rahway, New Jersey, whose history dates back to Revolutionary days, a community of master workmen, engaged in making famous music boxes, have now turned their skill to making Regina vacuum cleaners. When one can produce a double suction, hand operated cleaner, so simple in construction that there is nothing to get out of order for less than the cost of one spring house cleaning, that uncomfortable function will soon be unnecessary.

In Large Communities
In communities large enough to support them laundries and bakeries do much to ease the burden of the housekeeper, but in more sparsely settled sections, each family must depend upon its own resources. Intelligent women are making use of every domestic appliance that will help their business of home running. Motors of various sorts are used to run churns, as well as threshing ma-
