GIRLS EXPECT ACQUITTAL OF THE CHARGE

(UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.)

New York, July 7.—Expecting acquittal of the charge of attempting to murder Millionaire W. E. D. Stokes, for which they are on trial here, Lillian Graham and Ethel Conrad today are laying plans for a vaudeville engagement that will "knock 'em off their seats." After hearing Stokes in court tell how the two girls fought with and wounded him in their flat when he called to get some letters he had written returned, Lillian Graham today said:

"I have four other letters besides those produced that Stokes wrote me. When they are read they will take the starch out of his story. They will show why he was so anxious to get the letters from me. Stick around, kid; those letters are worth waiting for."

"Ethel and I are going into vaudeville after we are discharged here. I am writing a sketch which will work in the courtroom scene and some of Stokes' theatricalisms. I guess I'll call it 'One Man in a Boat' and make it a farce. It ought to be a scream."

BOYS' AND GIRLS' AID SOCIETY

The Boys' and Girls' Aid Society of Oregon is doing a state wide work. Every dollar it receives for maintenance goes for that purpose, but its scope has to be governed by its receipts. Marion county has contributed its share of delinquents and dependents to the society and many of the children committed have turned out well. Superintendent Gardner calls to mind some of the older cases and among them a young girl who was taken from her father against whom serious allegations had been made. This girl is now married, has two children and is prospering, her husband holding a good position in another town. One of the most notable commitments from Marion county and perhaps one of the most notable throughout the entire state was that of five children taken by legal procedure from their father by the society. This case was investigated by the superintendent personally, who found the family living not far from the railroad track in the city of Salem. The shack was composed of two rooms, one used as a bedroom and the other as a kitchen and dining room. The family consisted of a boy 14, a girl 12, a girl 11, boy nine and a baby one and one-half years. On investigation it was found that this family all slept in the one dirty bedroom. The father and two girls on a double bed, the baby in a baby buggy and the two boys on the floor at the foot of the bed. The kitchen and dining room were in a frightful, filthy condition, in fact, Superintendent Gardner says it was one of the most filthy places he ever saw. Some of the ladies of the church had assisted this family and made the primary complaint, having cared for one of the girls who made a confession which caused them to believe a crime had been committed. This confession was repeated to the superintendent at the court house and the father was arrested and is now serving a life sentence in the penitentiary. The mother had sometime before deserted the family and her whereabouts were unknown and she has not been heard of since. The children are now growing into manhood and womanhood, are in good homes and in spite of the difficulty the officers of the home have experienced in fitting them for placement in family homes they are all doing well with the exception of the baby and he is still an inmate of the Receiving home, not being bright, it is doubtful if a permanent home can be found for him.

Everyone who visits the Cherry air on Saturday should help the society by buying a tag as in doing so they will help a very worthy cause and assist to keep down taxation for it is a well known fact that if a child is taken in time and placed in the proper environment, it will become a good and useful citizen in place of a criminal, filling jails and demoralizing society.

their royal robes, were at the head of the procession. Following telegram was read to the king from the Portland Commercial Club:

To the Cherry Fair Greeting:

Rex Oregonus, king of the Rose Carnival, sends greetings to Royal Ann of Oregon's most luscious product. May it all go off with a Bling.

The Motorists in Line.

The motorists started to parade their flower-covered vehicles at 2.30, and about 40 machines were in line. Ten thousand people lined the streets for the whole distance of the parade, and many of the rigs were cheered and cheered again. This feature of the Cherry Fair was never before so beautiful.

The great events of tomorrow are the baby parade, at 10.30 a. m., and the comic screamer of all nations with take-offs on everybody and everything at 7 p. m. in the evening.

PORTLAND MAN MURDERS WIFE AND SUICIDES

(UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.)

Portland, Or., July 7.—Apparently angered because his wife compared him unfavorably with a former husband, Christopher Darrow, aged 45, a carpenter, today shot and fatally wounded her, then committed suicide by blowing out his brains, at their home on Northrup street. The tragedy was witnessed by only their child, a boy of three, who was found standing over his mother's body crying "Poor mama," when the police burst into the room.

Mrs. Darrow was shot through the head, and little hope of her survival is held out at St. Vincent's hospital.

CANNOT BE TRIED ON DIFFERENT CHARGE

Los Angeles, July 8.—Attorney Lecompte Davis opened the arguments for the defense in the McNamara cases today. He openly charged that each member of the prosecution was a lawbreaker. Davis declared that the district attorney's office had virtually admitted that illegal methods had been resorted to in bringing John J. McNamara into this state. His argument was that Governor Johnson had been illegally advised when he issued extradition papers and that other necessary legal formalities had been overlooked.

Davis argued in support of the contentions made yesterday by the defense that John McNamara could not be tried on the charge of destroying the Times building when he had been extradited in connection with the dynamiting of the Lewilyn Iron works.

ANYONE CAN READILY SEE THE DIFFERENCE

(UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.) Chicago, July 7.—Mrs. Bridges, asked the difference between motherhood in ordinary and that in "Absolute Life," said:

"The mother in Absolute Life has a true insight into her own conscience, and would not think of bearing a child until she had been purified." She defined Absolute Life as "the elimination of bad things and living as God would." She said she had not lived in See's "Junior Commonwealth" because "there was too much perversion in me."

Opium Under the Coal.
