U. S. STEEL MUST SHOW COST SHEETS SHOWING COST OF MAKING STEEL

HUNCH IS GIVEN BY SCHWAB CARNEGIE SOON LEARNED WANTED OUT OF BUSINESS

Schwab Says He Outlined the Formation of the Trust, or What Led to It at a Dinner, at Which Morgan Was Present, and That the Latter Became Interested—Schwab Offers to Submit Cost Sheets to Committee, and Says That the Trust Should Not Object to Doing the Same.

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.]
Washington, Aug. 4.—The United States steel corporation must produce its cost sheets, showing the actual cost of making steel, and furnish this information to the Stanley house investigating committee.

This was decided on today when the committee went into executive session following testimony by Charles M. Schwab in which the steel magnate said that the various companies in the trust furnished full details of the cost of production in various plants to each other.

Offered Cost Sheets.
Schwab offered to furnish the committee the cost sheets of his Bethlehem plant. He asserted further that the steel corporation ought to furnish similar information willingly. His statement profoundly impressed Chairman Stanley, who questioned him closely on this point. The committee held a brief session and decided to call on the trust to furnish the cost sheets.

Schwab told his version of the forming of the steel trust. He asserted that the idea was laid before the manufacturers in a speech which he delivered at a dinner in New York. He branched off to speak of the tariff, saying that the present schedules were not too high.

When asked by members of the committee to explain why steel sold for less in Europe, Mexico and South America than in the United States, his answers were evasive.

Schwab Testifies.
Washington, Aug. 4.—Charles M. Schwab, first president of the United States steel corporation, appeared today before the Stanley investigating committee here. He remarked that he wanted to clear up a matter that had been the subject of grave misrepresentation and that he was glad to be able to tell all that he knew about the formation of the trust. Prior to the organization of the corporation, he said, cut-throat competition was ruining all steel manufacturers.

How Trust Was Organized.
In 1899, Schwab testified, when he was president of the Carnegie Steel company, he attended a dinner of steel magnates in New York. J. Pierpont Morgan and Edward H. Harriman were at the dinner, he said. There were about 80 other guests. Schwab said he made a speech in which he pointed out that the steel manufacturers should have

The Seattle Recall.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 4.—Petitions for the recall of Mayor Dillon and Councilmen Blaine, Steiner, Wardell and Kellogg, will be filed next week. The recall association claim many more names now than are necessary for the filing, but want to give citizens an opportunity to sign.

The city controller has asked the finance committee of the city council to make arrangements for checking the petitions, a work which must be done within ten days of the filing.

a central organization. The object of the organization, he said, was to increase economy in manufacture and distribution. He recommended that all mills exchange cost sheets. He was interrupted in his testimony by Chairman Stanley, who asked if he would recommend that each concern lay bare details of its cost of operation to its business rivals.

"Not only could they do this," he smiled, "they do it now."

Morgan Questioned Him.
He said that at the recent conference in Brussels he recommended that all independent concerns follow this practice. He asserted he was willing to submit the cost sheets of his Bethlehem plant to the committee. He said there was no reason why the trust should refuse to do the same.

After the dinner was ended, Schwab continued, Morgan asked him to go with him to his house and as they went along the money king asked him to re-outline his plan for a central organization.

Morgan further asked, Schwab testified, whether he could get a price from Andrew Carnegie to put his plants into the organization.

Is the Nude Immoral?

Tacoma, Wash., Aug. 4.—The future career of H. F. Sturgis, as a painter depends largely upon the decision of Judge Arnston in court tomorrow on the question whether the creations of Sturgis' brush are works of art, or whether they are immoral or obscene. Sturgis is out on $250 bail today, following his arrest by the police, who allege that the artist obtained the services of several Tacoma women and girls to pose for him in the nude. Sturgis has retained an attorney, and will bring art critics from other cities to testify that the pictures from his brush are no more immoral than those painted in the nude by the artists of greater renown.

TWO ROADS NOT ONE TO PORTLAND

Mass Meeting Last Night Was Enthusiastic in Indorsing Plan to Build Highway on Each Side of the River

WEST SIDE HAS THE MONEY

It Makes the Surprising Showing That Most of the Money for the Road is Already Promised—The East Side is Also Wideawake and the Result Will Be a Magnificent Road on Each Side of the River, Connecting Salem and Portland.

Two beautiful highways—one on the west side of the river, and one on the east side, forming a loop, so to speak, in connecting Salem, the capital city, with Portland, the metropolis of the state, was the plan favored last evening by the delegates assembled at the house of representatives to discuss the building of a Salem-Portland highway in favor of which a campaign was launched a month or so ago by Governor West.

West Confident.
There were fully 200 delegates present. They represented committees and towns scattered throughout the valley and they were enthusiastically singing a song from the time that State Treasurer Kay rapped the meeting to order until a motion was put to adjourn. While nothing in the way of plans or specifications was done, the offers made by the delegations were so strong and earnest that Governor West after the meeting concluded said: "I have no doubt now as to the eventual success of the project. We will have two broad, beautiful, permanent highways; of that I feel assured."

Money Raised.
Delegates representing sections and towns located on the west side of the river showed where all of the required money for the construction of the road on that side of the stream had been raised but $7,000. This balance they predicted could be easily raised. While not able to show that any money so far had been raised, the delegates representing the east side of the river were enthusiastic, and if they entertained any doubts upon anything connected with the building of the highways, it was not on the subject of raising the money. Sentiment existed universally among the people of their section in favor of it, and the money would be forthcoming.

Governor West Talks.
Governor West was the first speaker of the evening. His address was short but to the point. He pointed out the necessity of a road between Salem and Portland, and maintained that if one was constructed and made a model highway that it would serve as a stimulus to further good road work in the state of Oregon. He cared not a rap, he said, which route was taken whether the east or the west side, all he wanted to see done was the building of the highway, and it would please him immensely if one was built on each side of the river.

When the fall came there would be plenty of convict labor for the building of the road, he asserted, and it would cost the people nothing beyond feeding the men, and 25 cents a day for each man. He cited the roads built by convicts so far, as evidence that good roads could be built by convict labor, and with but little expense.

Other Speakers.
Grant Dimick favored the plan of two roads, and believed they could be built—believed the people were ready for them. C. T. Prall, of Portland, spoke in the same optimistic vein. County Judge Dunbar stated that the board of county commissioners of Marion county stood ready to lend as much support to this highway as it had to any other highway

Spokane Paralyzed.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 4.—All mills and plants and the street car system, dependent on electrical power were compelled to suspend operations today, owing to the burning out of the main cable of the Washington Water Power company. The newspapers suspended the publication of early editions as a result, and it was believed no newspapers would be issued this afternoon.

A short circuit caused the cable to burn out. The loss to the company and to commercial institutions will total in the thousands.

built in the county and stated that he would be able to make contracts with the Oregon Electric and the Southern Pacific for the conveyance of the material at a low freight rate. County Judge Beattie, of Clackamas county, gave the same kind of assurance, and so did W. Muir, who prior to coming to the meeting, had discussed the subject with the county judge of Polk county. Mayor Lachmund, Scott Laughrey, of Dallas; H. H. Cline, of Yamhill; Judge Hayes, of Oregon City and George F. Rodgers, of this city, also made booster talks in favor of the road.

THE HOUSE ACCEPTS SENATE AMENDMENTS

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.]
Washington, Aug. 4.—The house today agreed to accept the senate amendments to the reapportionment bill, and the measure will now go to the president for his signature. It is predicted that this will be attached, although the measure is regarded in some respects as a Democratic bill. Although the Democrats secure gains in representation in the South, it is pointed out that the gain of six members from New York should tend to balance up matters, and it is believed there will be no hesitancy in signing the measure.

The most important amendment is that which permits re-districting by initiative and referendum, instead of by legislative action in states where these laws are in force.

Will Bury Him in Frisco.

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.]
San Francisco, Aug. 4.—On instructions from the widow of the deceased, the body of the man, a defaulting banker who killed himself in jail here while awaiting extradition to Illinois, was today removed from the morgue to an undertaking establishment where it will be prepared for burial here.

Chicago, August 4.—The International Harvester company is preparing to install a scientific system of "studying" employees for evidences of incipient tuberculosis. Those afflicted will be treated by the corporation's physicians.

ADMIRAL TOGO GETS GLAD HAND

DOCKS ARE LINED WITH CHEERING CROWDS WHEN THE DOUGHTY OLD SEA FIGHTER LANDS—IS GIVEN AN OVATION.

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.]
New York, August 4.—Admiral Togo, of the Japanese navy, arrived here today. Attired in the uniform of an admiral in the Japanese navy, with the Order of the Rising Sun glittering on his breast, Togo was the recipient of cheer after cheer from the great crowds which lined the entire route. The doughty sea fighter shank from the battery of cameras which was leveled at him, admitting that he feared them more than he did the scream of shells or the thud of 12-inch projectiles.

The party was met by the mayor at the entrance to the city hall and taken into his private office to escape the frantic cheering of the crowds that packed the park.

Later Mayor Gaynor returned the admiral's call at the latter's apartments at the Hotel Knickerbocker. The hotel decorated with the flags of the navies of the world, was patrolled by scores of police and detectives, assigned to guard the Japanese here during his stay in New York. Other policemen were stationed along the streets and kept the crowds back half a block from the hotel in every direction.

IT IS THE AMERICAN IDEA CALLED "THE UNWRITTEN LAW" THAT SAVED ANNA LANGLEY

After the Examination by the Coroner's Jury, the Little 19-Year-Old, Self-Made Widow Is Held Under $100 Bonds—Insists on Being Taken to View Corpse and Breaks Down Pitifully as She Views Her Work—Is at Home With Her Mother After a Marital Failure That Ended in a Tragedy.

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.]
San Francisco, Aug. 4.—Free, but in a state of complete collapse after one of the most strenuous ordeals that a woman ever passed through, Anna Langley, the girl-wife, who yesterday was confined in the city prison with a murder charge against her name, today lies at her own home, in the very room in which she slept as a child, exhausted, but with hope in her heart, for the first time in more than a year.

After the morning's ordeal in Police Judge Deasy's court, the girl was taken direct to the coroner's inquest, where the horror that she had reported, was again to be gone over. Then, after minutes that seemed years, came the verdict of the jury: "James Langley came to his death from a gunshot wound, the shot being fired by Anna Langley, his wife, while she was temporarily insane as a result of continuous intoxication and abuse on the part of her husband."

"Oh, Jim! my poor Jim!" was the wailing cry of Anna Langley when she viewed the remains of the husband she shot, after a long period of brutal treatment, at a local undertaking parlor today. Accompanied by her father and mother, at her own request, although near collapse from the tremendous ordeal which she has been through the last few days, she was taken to see the body of the man for whom she had sacrificed so much before her endurance reached the limit.

Father and mother stood by silently weeping, as the unfortunate girl sobbed and cried out incoherently in sorrow for the tragic end of her dream of happiness. She was taken away in an almost complete state of collapse, and is under the constant care of a physician.

Today, lying in her little white bed, weak and unstrung, but pitifully happy, she awaits the final hearing before Judge Deasy on Saturday. Only her mother, her priest and the family doctor are allowed to talk to her. The hopeful spirit, the supreme nerve with which she met her long ordeal yesterday, is gone. Instead the little girl her mother knew before she ran away with handsome Jim Langley seems to have come back. She is afraid. She does not seem to understand that she is free, because of her victory of the spirit yesterday.

"I don't know what Anna will do, when it is all over—if she is free," said the girl's mother. "I don't know whether she will go back to work, even. She is not able to think of work now. All of a sudden she has gone to pieces. She is just the little girl that went away from me—it seems such years ago. So I am content not to think about the future at all. When it is all over, when she is well and strong again, we can begin all over."

"That is what she said to me yesterday, when she came home, crying like a baby: 'Mamma, if I can only begin all over again and make it different.' I feel that it is going to be different, now that she has come back."

Anna Langley will have her preliminary hearing tomorrow morning before Police Judge Deasy. It is a foregone conclusion that she will be held for trial before the superior court, Judge Deasy holding that her future is a matter for a jury to decide. The ball of $100, under which she was placed yesterday, will remain as it is.

"The ball will not be changed by me," said Judge Deasy today. "It is really unnecessary to release the girl on her own recognizance, as the family could easily have raised $5000 or $10,000 bonds if required."

Langley's funeral will be held Sunday under the auspices of the order of Moose, of which the deceased was a member. The remains have been removed to an undertaking establishment, and the services will take place there.

Died from the Wound.

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.]
Pasadena, Cal., Aug. 4.—Police-man Clarence W. Peck died today in the Pasadena hospital as a result of a bullet wound received Monday night at a fire when Policeman W. L. Colby's revolver dropped from its holster, the bullet striking Peck in the chest. Colby also was wounded.

Russia Is Mediator.

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.]
Berlin, Aug. 4.—With Russia acting as mediator, according to reports here today, in the Moroccan imbroglio between Germany, France and England, prospects of a satisfactory settlement without recourse to arms, are brighter.

O. W. & N. May Build.

Tacoma, Wash., Aug. 4.—Renewed activity on the part of the Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation company near the city limits is believed to indicate the intention of that company to construct its own line to Portland and abandon the use of the Northern Pacific tracks.
