RESERVATIONS NEAR HOME AWAITING OPENING.

The prospective opening to settlement of two Indian reservations, one in Minnesota and theother in North Dakota, has brought a crowd of applicants to the land offices to take chances on the raffle of farms which the government is about to hold.

When settlers will gather from all parts of the country in front of a land office and stand in line for days and weeks in the hope of winning something in a gambling game, in which the prizes are permission to pay $1.25 an acre for 160-acre farms, it does look as though there must be a considerable amount of land hunger and a great scarcity of land.

Yet it is a safe assertion that every one of these applicants from a distance had to pass over large stretches of unused land to reach the land office, and much, if not all of this land, is better and more conveniently located than the land which is to be

In all the states the tax laws are so drawn that land held out of use is not taxed as much as land which is being put to some productive use.

In this way land owners are encouraged to hold land out of use on speculation, while land improvers are discouraged.

So, in a country big enough to furnish farms for all the farmers in the world without exhausting its supply, there is nevertheless such a scarcity of available land that the opening of a reservation causes a rush from all over the country for a chance to get a farm.

The remedy is obvious.

A reversal of present taxation methods is necessary.

The total exemption of labor and labor products from all kinds of taxation and the placing of the entire burden on land values, would at once cause the opening of all this unused land

Land owners who are putting their land to its most productive use would, under this change, experience a considerable lightening of tax burdens.

Land owners who are holdingout of use on speculation, would find their taxes increased, and would at once realize the desirability of either improving the land themselves, or letting others

There are reservations close by that need opening.

And there are thousands of acres of land in Eastern Oregon better than any of it open for settlement, that can be had any time.—American Economic League.

WHY CONGRESSMAN MOORE IS PROUD.

The American Economic League has the following on the subject of "Pride:"

Most people would hardly feel proud at being shown up as easy marks.

But there is a congressman from Philadelphia, named Hampton Moore, who believes that should be a source of pride.

The occasion was a discussion in the house on the cotton

Here reference was made to the oilcloth manufacturing firm of Thos. Potter Sons & Company, of Philadelphia, a concern enjoying the benefit of 145 per cent tafiff protection, but which nevertheless boasts of selling its products in thirty different foreign countries in free competition with the product of foreign labor.

Of course, it sells to the foreigners at a lower price than to Americans.

Mr . Moore, on hearing this, remarked:

"Should not that be a source of pride?"

If the foreign purchasers of Potters' oilcloth know the price that must be paid for it here, and know how Americans insist on keeping up that 145 per cent duty under the impression that the firm cannot compete with foreigners, they must have some opinions to express which would make a sensitive person feel as proud as the victim of a gold brick swindle must feel on learning the true nature of such a transaction.

Congressman Moore thinks such a victim ought to feel proud if he should hear that the person from whom he bought the "gold" brick at an exorbitant price had sold thirty other bricks to different people, but at a price no higher than their intrinsic
