western lines, and perhaps its proportions will embrace the railroads of the entire United States. Kline said:

"This is the crisis between capital and labor, and we may just as well fight it out right now."

Ready To Walk Out.

Los Angeles, Sept. 28.—"The moment it is ascertained that the railroad officials refuse to meet our System Federation, the men will be ordered to walk out," said V. I. O'Leary, international organizer of the boilermakers, here today. "This may be known at any moment."

Wm. Atkinson, vice-president of the boilermakers, made a similar statement. He said that no strike had yet been declared and the men in the shops are merely awaiting orders.

Friseo Getting Ready.

San Francisco, Sept. 28.—Efforts to secure an interview with E. L. Reguin, president of the shopmen's federation on the Harriman lines west of the Mississippi, as to the impending strike situation, failed here today owing to the fact that Reguin could not be found. He was not at work at the Southern Pacific shops, and his family claimed to have no knowledge of his whereabouts. It is believed that Reguin is preparing the program for action in the impending crisis.

October 10 Story Book.

10 Story Book for October has a number of first rate sketches "from grave to gay, lively to severe," but not so very severe. This magazine is intended to furnish a bright little "pick-me-up" for busy men and women, or weary travelers. Its stories are original, originally illustrated. This month "The Riddle of the World" (a woman's heart) carries the reader from New Orleans to the pyramids of Gizeh, with action (not overdone) all the way. There are some funny stories. There is nothing just like 10 Story Book. Ten cents at the news stands.

WHOLESALE FRAUDS AT THE DALLES

The Dalles, Or., Sept. 28.—Evidence that fraud has been resorted to in the attempt to defeat the appropriations made by the last legislature for the University of Oregon has been discovered here. A representative of the state educational institution was in the city today. He had a photographic copy of one of the referendum petitions, supposed to contain the names of 100 citizens of The Dalles, who want the appropriation bill passed by the legislature referred to a vote of the people. He submitted the list of names to several prominent business men, and a careful investigation, with the aid of the city directories, developed the fact that only two men whose names appear on the petitions ever lived in this city, and both are now dead.

The names of J. W. French and Hugh Gourlay are on the paper, Mr. French, a prominent banker, died four years ago. Mr. Gourlay died in 1902. None of the business men to whom the petition was submitted ever heard of any of the other 98 alleged residents of The Dalles whose names the paper contains. Further evidence of fraud is shown by the names of streets which are set opposite the signatures. Several addresses are given as "thirty-fourth" and "forty-fifth" streets. The numerically named streets do not run higher than Seventeenth.

"BABY MINE" DELIGHTS AUDIENCE

"Baby Mine" at the Grand last night drew a capacity house, and the splendid acting of some rather difficult parts justified all that was said in praise of the company, for it was certainly first class. The play is a series of ludicrous situations following fast and yet faster on each other's heels; all strung on a slender thread scarcely strong enough to hold them together, but so unexpected, so surprising, so ludicrous, that their utter impossibility was overlooked. Marjorie Cortland as Zoie, the frivolous, yet loving little wife, had an extremely difficult part, but she lived it, and her little white fibs, told to protect herself from an inordinately jealous husband, were the motif of the play, for it was due to them that the ludicrous combinations arose. The little story sent her husband, who had left her, that there was a baby in the house, told only for the purpose of bringing him back, necessitated the acquiring of a baby, and in the effort to make certain of one, three were acquired, which of course was embarrassing, and led to a series of fibs, each of which resulted in more trouble. It was a laugh producing play, nothing more, but it was that all the time. The entire company was exceptionally good, and the big audience did not get its collective face straightened until the curtain was down, and its individual members had an opportunity to get back to the real conditions of life, by waiting for the street cars.

THE GIRL IN THE TAXICAB AT THE GRAND

THAT SOUNDS A LITTLE AWKWARD, BUT THE GIRL IN THE TAXICAB WILL BE THERE SATURDAY NIGHT SURE.

"The Girl in the Taxicab," which comes to the Grand opera house September 30, was first produced in Paris under the title "Le Fils a Papa," which might be rendered "Like Father Like Son." The piece created one of the greatest sensations the French metropolis has ever known and ran for more than 1000 nights. It was originally written by Anthony Mars, that past master in the art of intrigue. The American adaptation, made by Stanislaus Stange, holds the record for the long runs of any similar play in New York, Chicago and Boston. The locale has been changed from Paris to New York, but the play retains all the humor and atmosphere of mid-night life, which made it so popular abroad.

Mars, the author has long been known here and in Europe for his clever and amusing entertainments. He was only 21 when, in connection with Bisson, he wrote "Surprises of Divorce," and, although he will not reach the half century for another twelve months, he has to his credit an average of a play a year.

In the author's opinion "The Girl in the Taxi" is by far the cleverest and funniest piece credited to his facile pen. It contains more wit and humor, more interesting and amusing characters and more ludicrous, yet possible complications and embarrassments than half a dozen of his other plays combined.
