The Buying Power of $1.75. A little money sometimes buys a good deal. For instance, take the subscription price of The Youth's Companion for a year—$1.75. If all the good reading in the 52 weekly issues of the paper were published in book form, according to its kind, it would make about 20 volumes of fiction, science, essays by famous writers, household management and economics, sports and pastimes for boys, natural history, anecdotes, humor, etc. The serial stories alone would fill several volumes. Among these is Ralph Payne's great story of the Boxer Rebellion in China, "The Cross and Dragon." Another is by J. W. Schultz, who was adopted by the Blackfeet when a boy. It is called "The Quest for the Fish-Dog Skin." Another is a glorious girl's story by C. A. Stephens, called "Julia Sylvester." It is the story of a "Merter" girl in the pioneer days of Oregon and Washington—and that is only part of the serials. It will cost you nothing to send for the beautiful Announcement of The Companion for 1912, and we will send with it sample copies of the paper. Do not forget that the new subscriber for 1912 receives a gift of The Companion's Calendar for 1912, lithographed in 10 colors and gold, and all the issues for the remaining weeks of 1911 free from the time the subscription is received. Only $1.75 now, but on January 1, 1912, the price will be advanced to $2.00.

HE WALKED TO HIS DEATH WHILE ASLEEP

Getting up from his bed while apparently in a state of somnambulism, Frank Webster, an inmate of the Mite School, this morning deliberately walked to an open window and leaped to his death below, falling some 30 feet and breaking his back. Webster was 17 years of age, and together with eight other boys was sleeping in the dormitory. About 2 o'clock—at least that is the hour fixed by the superintendent—he arose from his bed while asleep, and without disturbing or awaking any of the other boys, went to the window and leaped out. About 4 o'clock one of the other boys had occasion to arise and desiring to determine the state of the weather looked out, and saw Webster's dead body lying on the ground below. Dr. Van Winkle was called and after an examination, stated that the boy's back was broken in the fall and that death had come instantly.

LECTURED ON MANUAL TRAINING

Grant R. Bonnell, of the manual training department of the high school, gave a most interesting talk at one of the high school sessions of the Institute. His subject was "Manual Training in the Schools". He gave the reasons why it should be there, how it should be presented, what subjects should be taken up and the end to be accomplished if manual training is to be all it should be. The teachers were exceedingly glad of this opportunity to learn more of this new school work and listened with the closest attention. Mr. Kirk's name appears on the principle program for this hour's work, subject to be selected, but as it proved, the speaker as well as the subject was well selected. This is Mr. Bonnell's first year in the high school, where he is proving himself and his work to be as popular as it was in the grades last year.

BRYAN IS KEEN AFTER PRESIDENT

ASKS HIM TO SHOW WHO ENDORSED AND RECOMMENDED WHITE, AND WHY HE PREFERRED A TRUST DEMOCRAT TO AN ANTI-TRUST REPUBLICAN.

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE] Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 19.—Reiterating his challenge to President Taft to make public the influences which secured the appointment of Chief Justice White, of the United States supreme court, William J. Bryan, in his publication, the Commoner, says: "President Taft: You appointed White chief justice, who 13 years ago took the trusts' side in the trust question."

"You appointed him over the head of Justice Harlan, who had served longer, with more distinction, and who had taken the people's side on the trust and other questions."

"Who asked you to give the trust Democrat preference over the anti-trust Republican?"

"Make public the recommendations, written or verbal, which Justice White received, and which were transmitted to you. Let the people know the interests which dictated your appointments."

"You appointed Charles E. Hughes associate justice, after he had interpreted your platform to suit the trusts, and he proceeded to join White and fulfill your promise to amend the anti-trust law by weakening it."

"Publish the written and verbal recommendations upon which you appointed Hughes. Let the people see how many trust magnates united to secure his appointment. Publish all the written and verbal recommendations. Let the public see how completely you have turned the highest court over to the trusts."

"You now say the trusts have what they want, that there shall be no change in the law. Having aided the trusts to make the law to suit them, you now propose to prevent the people from amending the law in their interests. Tell the people why anybody but a trust magnate should endorse your position on the trust question."

"A vote to approve the Taft policies is a vote for the trusts."

SNODGRASS REPORTED SHOT BY FAN

HE IS MISSING AND HIS TEAM MATES ARE UNEASY BUT POLICE LAUGH AT THE STORY OF HIS BEING SHOT.

Philadelphia, Oct. 19.—Great excitement was caused here today by a report that a baseball crank had shot Fred Snodgrass, the New York Giant outfielder, who spiked Frank Baker of the Athletics in the New York game. For hours the whole police force sought Snodgrass, who had left the other members of the Giant team in company with a stranger when the team went to attend a theatrical performance.

Snodgrass came to the Giants three years ago from California. He was originally a catcher, McGraw picking him from a college nine. As a backstop he was a failure, but this year he was retained as a regular Giant outfielder on account of his hitting ability.

Snodgrass is a daring base runner. He denied he had tried to spike Baker, declaring they are the best of friends. He said he had never played "dirty ball," and that Baker was playing his position incorrectly or he would never have been hurt. This statement added to the wrath of the Quaker fans.

Knowing that several baseball "bugs" had threatened to get even, the police at first feared that Snodgrass had been decoyed away from his team mates and that someone had wreaked summary vengeance. At 5 o'clock Snodgrass had not been found. It was reported he had left for New York.

The police laughed at the rumors that the Giant outfielder had been shot, declaring that if it were true, they would know of it. Snodgrass' team mates, too, called the report absurd, but they joined in the search and McGraw and his Giants all admitted they would feel better when they saw the big outfielder again.

He who searches for a mare's nest will always find it.

TRAVELING SALESMAN AT THE GRAND

James' Forbes' comedy, in four acts, "The Traveling Salesman," will be the offering at the Grand opera house on Monday, October 23. In this, his latest effort, Mr. Forbes has reproduced life "on the road" as successfully as he depicted life "behind the scenes" in "The Chorus Lady." The story of "The Traveling Salesman," the scenes of which are laid at Grand Crossings, a village in the Middle West, opens on Christmas Day. The first act shows the interior of the railroad station, with the meeting of the principal characters, Bob Blake, the traveling salesman, and Beth Elliott, the pretty telegraph operator. Beth owns a piece of apparently worthless land, which suddenly acquires value, since it is necessary to a scheme of improvement planned by the railroad company. Blake's employer tries to defraud the girl of her property through a perversion of the law governing the sale of lands for unpaid taxes. Of course, Bob Blake comes to the rescue. The second act transpires in the drummers' room in the Elite Hotel, and here is played the most laughable poker game ever conceived by a playwright.
