OREGON SUPREME COURT DECISIONS

Kingsley v. Kressley and Greenough, Multnomah County.

Decided November 7, 1911. E. D. Kingsley, respondent, v. H. J. Kressley and Thos. L. Greenough, appellants. Appeal from the circuit court for Multnomah county. The Hon. C. E. Gatenben, Judge. Argued and submitted Oct. 18, 1911. E. C. Spencer and W. E. Farrell (Wilbur & Spencer, W. E. Farrell, and Wm. T. Muir, on brief) for respondent. A. King Wilson and Roscoe C. Nelson (A. C. Emmons, Wilson & Neal; W. J. Makellin on brief) for appellants. Eakin, C. J. Affirmed.

This is a suit to remove a cloud from the title to real estate arising by reason of a written option to purchase real estate given by plaintiff to defendant. Kressley. The material parts of the writing are as follows:

"Witnesseth: That the party of the first part, for and in consideration of the sum of two thousand ($2,000), the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, does give and grant to the party of the second part, until April 15, 1909, the sole, exclusive and irrevocable right and privilege of purchasing that certain tract or parcel of land situated, lying and being in the county of Multnomah, state of Oregon, and more particularly bounded and described in that certain deed from Rosanna Richards, et al to A. L. Mills, recorded in the records of deeds of Multnomah county, state of Oregon, in book 336, at page 463, and for the agreed price of one hundred and thirty-five thousand dollars ($135,000) to be paid, if the said party of the second part shall elect to purchase hereunder, in the manner and form as follows, to-wit: Two thousand dollars ($2,000) on the execution of this instrument, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged: Eighteen thousand dollars ($18,000) on or before April 15, 1909; The further sum of ten thousand dollars ($10,000) payable on or before July 15, 1909; The further sum of ten thousand dollars ($10,000) payable on or before October 15, 1909; The further sum of ten thousand dollars ($10,000) on or before January 15, 1910; The further sum of twenty thousand dollars ($20,000) on or before January 15, 1911; The further sum of sixty-five thousand dollars ($65,000) on or before April 15, 1914.

All payments made after April 15, 1909, shall bear six (6) per cent interest, payable monthly, beginning from April 15, 1909, and all payments of principal and interest shall be made at the First National Bank, of Portland, Oregon. Upon the payment of fifty thousand dollars ($50,000) on account of principal, together with the interest thereon, then due the party of the first part shall execute, together with his wife, to the party of the second part a deed of warranty against the acts of said grantors of the premises above described, and the party of the second part shall execute to the party of the first part a first mortgage on that portion of the premises lying between the county road and Willamette river, securing the payment of two promissory notes, one of which shall be for twenty thousand dollars ($20,000), due on or before January 15, 1911; and the other for sixty-five thousand dollars ($65,000), due on or before April 15, 1914, both payable at the First National Bank of Portland, Oregon, and bearing six (6) per cent interest, payable semi-annually, which notes and mortgages shall constitute the last two payments under the contract above mentioned.

In case the said party of the second part shall not, on or before April 15, 1909, pay the sum of eighteen thousand dollars ($18,000) as above specified, then this agreement shall thereupon become at once null and void, and the party of the first part may and shall retain to his own use and benefit the said sum of two thousand dollars ($2,000) and until the payment of said sum of eighteen thousand dollars ($18,000) this contract shall constitute an option, only, to purchase on the part of the party of the second part.

And after the said sum of eighteen thousand dollars ($18,000) has been paid, the party of the second part hereby covenants and agrees to purchase said real property upon the terms and conditions above mentioned. It is further mutually understood and agreed by and between the parties hereto that the party of the first part shall furnish an abstract of title showing he has a fee simple title, free from all encumbrances except the right of way of the Northern Pacific Railroad company, and the county road in and to the above described premises, at the date of the execution of the deed above mentioned, to the party of the second part. And if said abstract of title shall fail to show such fee simple title in the party of the first part on the date above mentioned, and if said party of the first part shall not within a reasonable time thereafter obtain such fee simple title in himself, he shall return to the party of the second part, the sum of two thousand dollars ($2,000) deposited as aforesaid, and this agreement shall thereupon become at once null and void.

It is further mutually understood and agreed by and between the parties hereto that the party of the second part may enter into and have possession of the above described premises upon the execution of this agreement, and retain possession thereof so long as he complies with the conditions above mentioned. Plaintiff alleges that defendant Kressley failed and neglected to make the payment of $18,000 on April 15, 1909, and on that day notified him that he was unable to do so, and abandoned the option. Defendants, in answer, besides certain denials, allege that plaintiff failed to furnish an abstract showing that he had a fee simple title to the land, and as a second defense, that, prior to April 15, 1909, the time of payment was mutually consented to be modified and changed so as not to require the payment of the $18,000 on the 15th of April; and that the defendants, within the time agreed, tendered to plaintiff all payments which were to be made under the modified contract. Defendants, on May 28, 1909, had the option recorded and thereafter have been claiming some interest in the premises thereunder.

Upon the trial findings were made and a decree rendered in favor of plaintiff for the relief asked. Defendants appeal.

Eakin, C. J. The contract by its terms is an option. For the consideration of $2,000 paid, plaintiff granted to defendants, until April 15, 1909, the exclusive and irrevocable privilege to purchase the land. It was unilateral until accepted by defendants on that day. Until then they were in no way obligated to buy, and it was not a contract of sale. Plaintiff was bound by his offer, during the time specified, that he was not at liberty to withdraw it, there being a consideration paid for it. It is true the $2,000 was to constitute a part of the purchase price, if the sale was completed, but that sum was plaintiff's money in either case. But to have the option culminate in a contract of sale, defendants must have accepted it within the time specified, and the acceptance was to be evidenced by the payment of the $18,000 on April 15, 1909; House v. Jackson, 24 Or. 58; Clarno v. Grayson, 30 Or. 111, 120; Friendly v. Elwert (Or.) 112 Pac. 1085. Until that should be done defendants would acquire no right in the property, except that if they entered into possession they would not be trespassers while they complied with the conditions of the agreement. Their right to possession was no more than a contingent license.

As to the effect of a subsequent parol modification of an agreement of the sale of real estate, the rule is, that an agreement, required by the statute of frauds to be in writing, cannot be subsequently changed or modified as to the time of performance by any oral executory contract. There is a full discussion of this question in Neppach v. Ore. & Calif. R. Co. 46 Or. 374, and in the note to that case in 7 A. & E. A. C. 1041, from which the conclusion is irresistible that such a subsequent parol modification is void. To hold otherwise would be to open the door to the very frauds the statute of frauds was intended to prevent. However, there is an exception to that rule, and the effect that equity will not permit the statute of frauds to be used to perpetuate a fraud, namely: if there was a subsequent oral agreement for an extension of time of payment acted upon by the vendee, equity will not permit the vendor thus to induce the vendee to make a default in payment as provided by the written agreement and then invoke the statute. This was the point upon which the case of Neppach v. Ore. & Calif. R. Co. was decided. Mr. Justice Bean in that case says, that by the settled doctrine in England "that an agreement required by the statute of frauds to be in writing cannot be subsequently changed or modified as to the time of performance, or in any other respect, by an oral executory contract." In this country "it probably a majority of states" deny the validity of such an agreement, unless acted upon by the parties, and hold that a part of a contract required by the statute to be in writing cannot rest in parol. And proceeds to hold that the case before the court was within the exception named, viz.: a subsequent extension therein had been orally agreed upon at the request of and for the benefit of the vendor, although the vendee was ready to pay within the time mentioned in the written contract. In the note to that case, referred to, many cases are cited supporting the conclusion of Mr. Justice Bean, where it is said: "Evidence of an oral agreement altering the terms of a written contract within the statute of frauds, while not evidence of an enforceable agreement, is admissible to establish a waiver of the terms of the written contract, where it appears that the contract, as altered, has been acted upon by the party offering the evidence." Other cases arrive at the same result but place it on the ground of an equitable estoppel, that he who causes anything to be done or prevents it from being done shall not avail himself of the performance or non-performance which he himself has occasioned. Others hold that the statute of frauds may not be invoked to perpetuate a fraud. This is upon the theory that it would be a fraud upon the vendee—he having been induced to let the time of payment go by; by oral promise of extension of the time—to permit the statute of frauds thereafter to be invoked. But where the situation of the parties is not altered in reliance upon a subsequent oral agreement, such agreement is within the statute and must be in writing.

Applying this rule to the facts in this case, the time of the option was until April 15, when if the $18,000 was not paid "then this agreement shall thereupon become at once null and void, and the party of the first part shall retain to his own use and benefit the said sum of $2,000, and until the payment of said sum of $18,000 this contract shall constitute an option only, to purchase on the part of the party of the second part. And after the said sum of $18,000 has been paid, the party of the second part hereby covenants and agrees to purchase said real property upon the terms and conditions above mentioned."

By the evidence of plaintiff, Greenough had a talk with plaintiff on April 14, at which time Greenough was notified that the $18,000 must be paid on the 15th or the option would lapse; that on the 15th Kressley, by the direction of Greenough, reported to plaintiff that they could not meet the terms of the contract; and that they would forfeit the $2,000 and drop the matter. Upon these facts there is no controversy. Later on the 15th, Connell, representing only himself, saw plaintiff and asked for an exclusive option to sell until the following Monday, which plaintiff refused, but told him if he could find a buyer to bring him around and he would talk it over. Connell testified to this conversation and said that plaintiff told him the deal had fallen through, but that he would give him another chance; that plaintiff made one or two propositions for a new deal which he told him he was not in a condition to consider at that time and would see him in a few days. Thus it is plain that the option expired by its own terms on the 15th of April, and there was not at any time an agreement to sell between plaintiff and defendants.

There was considerable testimony introduced as to subsequent attempts to renew or reinstate the option on new conditions, but it does not convince us that there was any new agreement made, but if made it was not in writing, and, therefore, void under the statute of frauds. The matter urged by the defendants to the effect that plaintiff was not able to perform his part of the contract, and therefore could not forfeit the agreement of sale, is based upon the theory that the agreement was an executory contract of sale. But it was not such and could only have been made by the payment of $18,000 on the 15th of April.

As to the suggestion that plaintiff could not give a title, it is admitted that defendants had an abstract of title on the day of signing the option from which they had notice that plaintiff had only a bond for a deed. At least it could not have more than this, and an abstract showing the fee simple title in the plaintiff was not due by the terms of the option until the time the deed was to be executed to the defendants, which was January 15, 1910.

As to the possession, the contract provided that the defendants "may enter into and have possession of the above described premises upon the execution of this agreement and retain possession thereof so long as he complies with the conditions above mentioned." It does not appear that defendant entered upon the possession thereunder, other than that one of the defendants unloaded some tools upon the premises at one point. The right of possession by defendants, if they had taken it, was but a mere license until they performed the terms of the contract, and on April 15 when they gave plaintiff notice that they could not make the first payment, they ended their relation to the property and surrendered their possession if they had any.

The possession of its grade and track across the premises by the United Railways is not involved here. It is not pleaded and it is not such a possession as can defeat plaintiff's remedy to quiet title against defendants and does not defeat the jurisdiction of the court in this case. If it was a trespasser on the land or has some right under the plaintiff, the decree in this case does not affect it, and its possession was only a small fraction of the premises involved here.

In a suit to quiet title, the requirement of the statute (Sec. 516) that the premises shall not be in the actual possession of another is that, if defendant is in possession, plaintiff has a remedy at law by ejectment and that action would determine defendant's right. If, however, that remedy is inadequate to grant the relief desired, equity will entertain jurisdiction even if plaintiff is not in possession. State ex rel. v. Warner Valley Stock Co., 56 Or. 283, 306; 17 Ency. Pl. & Pr. 309, 311. In Alton Marine Fire Ins. Co. v. Buckmaster, 13 Ill. 201, 205, it is stated that "The reason why the party out of possession cannot maintain

A GREAT PLAY AND A STRONG COMPANY

THE COMMUTERS AT THE GRAND TONIGHT PRESENTED BY THE ORIGINAL CAST — A GENUINE TREAT, DON'T MISS IT

It will be interesting to note the treatment given by James Forbes to the subject matter of his latest comedy "The Commuters", which is to be seen at the Grand Opera House tonight.

The refreshing originality shown by Mr. Forbes in the creation of his "Chorus Lady" and "The Traveling Salesman" leaves the local public to expect something exceptionally unique in "The Commuters". As the title suggests the plot of the play revolves around a family of suburbanites and any one at all familiar with this phase of city life will readily appreciate the humor that may be introduced into the story by one possessing Mr. Forbes' keen gift of observation. "The Commuters" is designed to furnish a contrasting study between the suburban and urban point of view and to develop amusingly the difference between the marital state and that of single blessedness. The play is in four acts and the action takes place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Brice, who reside adjacent to what may be termed any large American city. Mr. Henry B. Harris, the producing manager, is sending "The Commuters" here with the New York and Boston company which includes Harry Davenport, Amy Lesser, Florence Malone, Lillian Thurgate, Pauline Duffield, Hazel Malcolm, John Robertson, E. Y. Backus, Maude Sinclair, Minnie Williams, Karra Kenwyn, and others.

such a bill, is that he may bring an action at law, to test his title, which ordinarily a party in possession cannot do. Such a bill is only entertained by a court of equity because the party is not in a position to force the holder of, or one claiming to defend under, the adverse title, into a court of law to contest its validity; and this, as a general rule, is a test to which a court of equity will look to determine whether the necessity of the case requires its interference." And this statement of the reason for the rule is quoted with approval in Comstock v. Honnaberry, 66 Ill. 214; and Apperson & Co. v. Ford, 23 Ark. 746, 757.

Any possession of the United Railways may have, whether by way of an easement or wrongfully, cannot be determined in an ejectment action against defendants, nor can ejectment against the United Railways determine the rights of the defendants, and therefore the plaintiff has no legal remedy against the defendants and equity has jurisdiction in this form of suit.

The judgment and decree of the lower court is affirmed.
