MARGARET ANGLIN TO APPEAR HERE IN GREEN STOCKINGS

THIS IS A RATHER STARTLING ANNOUNCEMENT, BUT THE LADY HAS OTHER GARMENTS IN HER WARDROBE REPERTOIRE — AND THE STATEMENT APPLIES TO THE TITLE OF THE PLAY, NOT TO THE LADY'S GOWNING—IT IS A GREAT PLAY, GREATLY PLAYED.

Would you know Margaret Moore if you saw her name in print? Probably not, but if Margaret Anglin had not changed her name, you would be as well acquainted with that celebrity as you are with Margaret Anglin today.

It is supposed by those who don't know that actresses always change their names—pick out pretty ones, when they start their stage careers with an eye to the future, an eye that has a vision of an electric lighted name over a theater entrance.

Miss Anglin was told at the very beginning that she ought to change her name. She changed it to Moore. Anglin is a good name, of course, and the family of that name enjoyed much distinction in Canada. At the time of her birth, the famous actress' father was speaker of the house of parliament, and it is perhaps of some significance that she began life in the official residence of the First Commander of Canada, as the speaker is called.

As her family was indifferent, not to say opposed to her going on the stage, it may be that this was an influence in Miss Anglin's decision to adopt the name of Moore. However, it was not long before she was advised by an experienced friend to revert to Anglin. "Much more distinctive," said the counselor, "and as Anglin you stand out alone, while there are multitudes of Moores."

Miss Anglin left the Loretto convent near Toronto, when she was 17 years old, and went directly to New York to enter the Wheatcroft Dramatic school, whence she ultimately graduated. She passed immediately into the Empire Stock Company and for a few years, with some notable interruptions, she was a member of that organization, finally becoming its leading lady. After one year in the rarified atmosphere of Broadway Miss Anglin's ambition overcame her discretion, and believing that it would be slow climbing, beginning as she was with one, two and three-line parts, she took to the road, engaging herself to a small traveling company. Lest there be some misapprehension that this organization traveled over a path of roses, ultimately reaching the goal of wealth and fame in a Broadway theater, be it said, and by Miss Anglin spoken, that they did no such thing.

After a strenuous training and much travelling, Miss Anglin was ready to return to the step-by-step, line-by-line system of reaching the top of the ladder. When she returned to New York she secured a position with James O'Neill's company, and had not been with him long before she was playing Ophelia in "Hamlet," Virginia in "Virginia," and other important leading roles. This was the experience and opportunity which she desired, and the following year she was fortunate enough to become a member of E. H. Sothern's company. Now came greater ambition, and she determined to be an actress-manager. She organized a company to tour lower Canada, persuaded that the name of Anglin would serve as a magnet. It did, but the public expected much from that source, and though Miss Anglin herself was not depreciated, still neither her company nor her productions were all that her artistic sense would lead her to hope for.

"It was in my native city that I had a very brief and cutting review. The notice read: 'Last night at the Opera House, Miss Anglin's company played 'As You Like It' as they liked it.' 'Which is your favorite character?' is an inevitable question that pops out while 'As You Like It' is under discussion.

"Oh, Rosalind, by all means! Shakespearean roles are the best of all—at least I would rather play them. When I consider the wonderful parts that Shakespeare wrote for men, I could almost wish that I were a man. His women are in such a small minority. Of course the reason is that there were no actresses in Shakespeare's day. Then, 'reflectively,' I think of the parts Shakespeare wrote for those boy actors who played the women roles."

"Next to Shakespeare I really don't care what I play, so long as it is interesting, and has some intellectual quality. I don't think I should ever relish farce. But comedies—light or serious, are delightful. Only one grows tired of them sooner than of the serious plays."

In reply to the question whether she would continue to play "Green Stockings," the comedy in which she is now appearing, next season, the actress said: "Only in my repertoire. Mr. Mason's comedy has made such a splendid success that we would not be justified in abandoning it altogether. But I hope during the present season not only to produce a new play by Henry Arthur Jones, but also to give several performances of the 'Antigone' of Sophocles and the 'Medea' of Euripides."

"I have long felt that there should be a balance between emotional acting and tragedy, such as the actors of European repertoire theaters secure. The change from one place to the other keeps the actor's mind fresh and flexible. It is impossible to create and play one style of part year after year without becoming indifferently well 'set' in one's mental attitude. It is impossible to say how refreshing it is to make the change from the bleak plateau of tragedy to a comedy so full of twists and turns down pleasant by-paths, always gay, ever sparkling. And the way in which the critics and the public have received me in this new guise has justified my belief."

TACOMA LAND IS OFFERED FOR $15,000 AN ACRE

Tacoma, Wash., May 4.—The Northern Pacific railway through President Howard Elliott and the board of directors at St. Paul has agreed to sell to Tacoma 40 acres of valuable tidelift land across the city waterway in the heart of the city for the location of ocean docks and the development of manufacturing.

A price of $15,000 an acre has been tentatively discussed.

The company insists that the city bind itself never to sell the land to a competing railroad but to use it for municipal purposes.

The land is within five minutes' walk of the business center and if developed will make the most advantageous located ocean docks on the coast.

upper floors, after passing out into a common hall, pass out of the building, without going to the floor below, but this common hall is connected with stairs with the floor below, thus supplying a fire hose, should a fire occur anywhere below.

The conditions, I hold, and, by the way, is held by every fire chief of any ability, to be criminal. Some means should be provided so that the pupils could pass from the building, in an emergency, without passing into a common hall. This could be accomplished by providing spiral slides or lifting stair escapes. Two or three rooms could be connected by doors so that pupils could pass from one room to the other.

Fire drills are held in all of the schools, and the pupils march out in very little time. As long as there is no excitement, this works well, but there is where the trouble lies. If a fire should occur and fill the halls with smoke and flame, not only the pupils would lose their heads, but probably a great many of the teachers would also. It doesn't require much imagination to see the result. The doors of all the exits, except the base-

GERM LADEN DUST CAUSES CATARRH

Ely's Cream Balm Kills the Deadly Catarrh Germs—No Stomach Dosage.

Catarrh, which is bad enough in itself, often results in loss of taste, smell and hearing, and leads to serious throat and lung troubles if not promptly checked. The seat of catarrh is usually in the back of the nose, and its natural course is downward, into the throat and thence to the lungs.

Don't take any chances. If you have any symptoms of catarrh—stuffed up feeling in the head, nasty discharge from the nose, sore throat, or dry, hacking cough, get a 50-cent bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist, and begin the treatment at once.

This remedy is not a "burning out" or "drying up" process. It is simply a cleansing, healing, antiseptic Balm, taken through the nostrils back into the head and throat where it instantly reaches the seat of the trouble. That's the only way to effectually and permanently cure catarrh.

Catarrh makes you offensive to yourself and friends. Start using Ely's Cream Balm today, and in a short time you will be permanently cured of this nasty, disgusting disease. Special Agent J. C. Perry.

THE WOMEN PARADE IN NEW YORK

GREATEST SUFFRAGETTE GATHERING EVER ASSEMBLED, PARADES IN NEW YORK CITY—20,000 WOMEN AND 1,000 "BRE-VETS."

(UNITED PRESS LEARNED WIRE.)

New York, May 4.—With nearly 20,000 women and 1000 men in line, the largest suffrage parade in the history of the United States took place here this afternoon. Among the marchers were men from Harvard, Yale, Columbia and other universities. Half of the men participating were members of labor unions, and all were pledged to the suffrage cause.

The parade was headed by 100 women on horseback under the leadership of Mrs. Charles Knoblauch. Behind them came the "old guard" band, playing the Marseillaise.

Behind the band marched the members of the Women's Political Union, headed by Mrs. Harriet Blatch; their teachers and students of the suffrage cause, headed by Mrs. Florence Cabot.

Next in line, each with their own organization, came in succession the various classes of professional women —doctors, nurses, lawyers, artists and actresses. Behind these came the industrial workers—factory girls and waiters.

Following this marching army was a decorated automobile with Mrs. Cyrus Field at the wheel, in which was seated Antoinette Brown Blackwell, the only survivor of the suffrage campaign of 1848, and Harriet Stanton Blatch, Jr., granddaughter of the leader of the Women's Political Union.

Next came the different state delegations, chief among which were the Wisconsin suffragettes, led by Miss Pola La Follette, daughter of Senator Robert M. La Follette. Miss Lo Tin headed the Chinese women, and Mrs. Tillie Strindberg, wife of the Swedish playwright, carried the flag of the Swedish delegation.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont marshalled the division of the department of store clerks. Scores of banners strung forth "Women's Rights" epigrams and demands for the ballot were carried by the marchers.

After the parade there was a mass meeting in Carnegie hall, after which the suffragette leaders were assigned to various street corners, where they made speeches for "the cause."

It would surprise you to know of the great good that is being done by Chamberlain's Tablets. Dr. Darius Downey, of Newberg Junction, N. H., writes, "My wife has been using Chamberlain's Tablets and finds them very effective and doing her lots of good." If you have any trouble with your stomach or bowels, give them a trial.
