OHIO'S NEW CONSTITUTION.

Here are some of the features of the new constitution which will be submitted to the people of the state of Ohio for their approval or rejection.

Legislation may be secured and the constitution amended by the initiative and referendum. Five of the six supreme judges must concur to set aside a law as unconstitutional.

Women are given the right toyote. All candidates for state offices are to be nominated by primaries; United States senators are to be nominated by the people, and a presidential preference vote is to be taken. All appointive positions are put under civil service rules. The legislature is authorized to remove all state officers, including judges, on hearing.

The legislature is authorized to regulate the issue and sale of corporation stock. The legislature is authorized to regulate bill-board advertis-

Incomes, inheritances, franchises and minerals in situ are to be taxed. The Torrens system of land transfer is to be adopted. (Under the Torrens system, a land-owner takes proof of his title to an official, who, being satisfied of its validity, registers the land. Thereafter the state guarantees the title and the land can be sold only by recording the transfer on the registrar's book), Appeal litigation is to be restricted; except in felony cases there may be but one trial and one review. Jurors need not agree unanimously in civil suits.

Capital punishment is to be abolished.

HIS LIFE A DOUBLE SUCCESS.

April 26 there died in the city of Chicago one of the very few successful men who have ever lived.

Reference is here made to the late Dr. D. K. Pearsons, the fine souled philanthropist, who lived 92 years.

Having accumulated a fortune of $7,000,000 by real estate investments, he started when 80 years of age to give it away. He helped endow more than 50 small, struggling colleges, because he believed the small college afforded the poor young people the best chance. He also gave largely to charity and for 50 years aided young men to get an education.

Dr. Pearsons gave away every dollar of his big fortune, re-serving only a small life annuity to keep soul and body together till death.

He was doubly successful. Many men have known the satisfaction of making money. Few have known both the joy and the pride of the victor in making a fortune and the pride and joy of the philanthropist in giving every bit of it away. He was twice successful. He lived a completed life.

Death when it comes to most men finds them with unfinished plans, or, if their plans are successfully worked out, there yet remains the problem of the successful administration of their affairs when they shall be dead. They "heap up riches knowing not who will gather it."

Which is a rare accomplishment,

They know the lawyers will gather some. And they fear lest the heirs may dissipate the remainder.

Dr. Pearson was his own executor.

He successfully administered his estate while living. And he had the pleasure in the disbursement of his wealth, of seeing the good it would do. His money went where he wanted it to go, and for the good the one successful giver. Success?

Success is like a pyramid.

Broad at the base, broad as the thronging millions who live their little day and win or fail. Towering upwards, its form narrows and scattered along-its sides are the few who have been fairly successful.

At its top-their bright figures lit up with the pure sunshine of merited fame-are the very few who have lived a complete and successful life.

ANSWER IT HONESTLY.

Are the Statements of Salem Citizens Not More Rellable Than Those of Utter Strangers?

This is a vital question. It is fraught with Interest to Salem It permits of only one answer. It cannot be evaded or ignored. A Salem citizen speaks here, Speaks for the welfare of Salem. A citizen's statement is reliable. An utter stranger's is doubtful. Home proof is the best proof.
