ATTORNEY-GENERAL ANSWERS QUESTIONS

If Attorney-General Crawford's construction of the law is correct, it does not lie within the power of incorporated towns or cities, under the home rule amendment, to authorize the sale of liquor on Sunday.

A request for information on this subject came from the mayor of North Powder. The attorney-general holds that, while the home rule amendment gives incorporated towns and cities the right to regulate the liquor traffic, that the amendment was adopted, subject to the criminal law of the state, and that there is a penal statute providing that it shall be unlawful to sell liquor on Sunday.

Answering the city recorder of Sumpter on the question whether if a mayor was elected at any other time than at the regular city election he would hold his office for two years, the attorney-general replies in the affirmative.
