

Its up to the Co-Eds at Eugene

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE] Eugene, Ore., Oct. 21.—Eugene is a city perennial if the dresses worn by the University of Oregon co-eds can be taken as a faithful indication. Miss Ruth M. Guppy, dean of the women students, has started an active campaign to have her charges eschew the festive peek-a-boo, low necks and toy-like low shoes that leave the necks and ankles of the pretty co-eds exposed to the wintry gusts.

"No man could possibly live with the amount of winter clothing affected by the Oregon University co-eds," declares Miss Guppy.

She is trying to get the girls to hide the graceful lines of their throats behind Robespierres or any other covering that will afford protection of near protection, and to encase their dainty ankles in "can't-get-wets," or any other shoe that advertises anti-saturation virtues. So far no voice of protest has been heard, but—!

Darrow's Trial Is Postponed for a Month

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE] Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 21.—Attorney Clarence S. Darrow, charged with jury bribing, appeared before Judge Dinmore, in department No. 19 of the superior court today. He was represented by Attorney H. J. Gelsler, of Karl Rogers' office, who asked for a continuance until November 25. Today's session was merely a formality to fulfill the law. The continuance was granted without opposition from District Attorney John D. Fredericks. The district attorney said the state would probably be ready to proceed on November 25.

Shoe Trust Is Shut Out of Canada

OTTAWA, Can., Oct. 21.—The government tribunal appointed under Canada's trust laws today decided that the United States Shoe Machinery company is a combination on the restraint of trade. There is no appeal from this decision, which effectually shuts the shoe trust out of Canada.

Under the decision the trust is liable to cancellation of all its patents in Canada and to a fine of $1000 daily for every day it attempts to do business in the country.

Lipton Invited to Take Part in the Yacht Races

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE] San Francisco, Oct. 21.—Invitation to attend the Panama-Pacific exposition in 1915, and to take part in the international yacht race to be held here then, was extended to Sir Thomas Lipton today by members of the exposition board of directors. The advice of the famous yachtsman was also asked in handling the races.

Strong Company Here to Play the Old Homestead

The Deman Thompson's "Old Homestead company" arrived from Portland this morning and its members are registered at the Marion Hotel. The company carries 20 people, together with a carload of scenery and mechanical effects. From all reports the company is a very good one and well deserving the patronage of the Salem theatre-goers. Deman Thompson's "Old Homestead" is a standard attraction, and should not be classed with shows of the type of "Uncle Josh Perkins," which played a recent engagement here.

The Turks Shelled the Fort

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE] Sofia, Oct. 21.—The Bulgarian fort of Kavarna was bombarded today by Turkish warships. The custom house, it is reported, was destroyed and a number of dwellings and shops badly damaged. Kavarna lies 28 miles northeast of Varna on the Black Sea.

THE OCTOBER AMERICAN MAGAZINE.

A few months ago The American Magazine published an article entitled "Old Age at Forty," which was an account of the various hard conditions under which laborers work in the steel industry. The United States Steel Corporation appointed a committee to investigate the truth of the article, and its truth was well substantiated. As a result, the Steel Corporation has taken steps to remedy some of those hard conditions and an account of what it is doing appears in the October number of The American Magazine. In the same number appears the story of Charles B. Towns, a great expert in the treatment of drug and alcohol fiends. The article is entitled "Fighting the Deadly Habits," and it is full of practical suggestions of great interest. Another notable article is entitled "The Physics of Baseball," in which Hugh S. Fullerton records many of the remarkable phenomena of the game; as for example, the fact that the differences in atmospheric pressure between Denver and New York makes it possible for a baseball player to throw a baseball much further in Denver than in New York. "Where Stage Villains Are Real" is an account of a remarkable theatrical production given twice a year by convicts in the State Penitentiary in California. "Funny Face" is an account of an interesting monkey by Stewart Edward White. "What Makes a Bad Play," is Walter Pritchard Eaton's contribution to the theatrical department. "Our Predecessors" is an article on Women by Ida M. Tarbell. Fiction of unusual vitality and interest is contributed by Dr. Henry Van Dyke, Inez Haynes Gillmore, Edwin Balmer, Zona Gale, and H. G. Wells. The departments, "In the Interpreter's House," "Interesting People" and "The Pilgrim's Scrip," are full of good reading and valuable ideas.

New Articles Filed.

The following named articles of incorporation were filed today with C. D. Babcock, corporation clerk at the state house: M. E. Orser Company, Portland, change of name. Greely-Henley Plumbing company, Klamath Falls, $10,000. Oxbow Lumber Company, Eugene, $10,000. Mrs. I. C. Hastler, Grand Island Neb., has something she wishes to say about Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. "My three children had a very severe attack of whooping cough and suffered greatly. A friend recommended Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, and it did them more good than anything I gave them. I am glad to recommend it." Sold by Dr. Stone Drug Company.

An Illinois Woman Now Living in Iowa Praises the Mausoleum—Her Adopted Home Town Built a Mausoleum Last Year.

Mrs. F. H. Chichester, of Sheffield, Iowa, was delayed in Rockford, Ill., last Wednesday in making train connections to reach her girlhood home at Lee, Illinois. While at the Hotel Nelson her Iowa home happened to be mentioned and Mr. Austin asked her if she knew anything of the Mausoleum that had been recently built there and she seemed to be most delighted to inform him that her husband was among the first purchasers of tombs, and that while a little doubtful at first yet she had been completely reconciled to her husband's purchase of tombs and as the building neared completion she had become enthusiastic and induced many of her friends to buy tombs.

She was very emphatic in her endorsement of the mausoleum and was asked how the company had carried out its agreement with the Sheffield people.

"I can say this much," she said, "The mausoleum is a beautiful building and is better in all respects than the people of Sheffield expected it to be. Indeed from expert opinions of the building itself it was most substantially built, and so thorough was the supervision of the structure that it really had to be put up right and according to the plans and specifications filed with the cemetery board."

"Was there any criticism of the company at all by the people?" "None except in the most kindly way. I think everybody thought the Mausoleum company met every one of its obligations in the fullest manner and the general satisfaction on the part of those who bought tombs would indicate that the company had done its part acceptably to all."

"Do you own tombs in the mausoleum at Sheffield?" "My husband was one of the first subscribers and that gave us considerable advantage in the selection of tombs and we did get our tombs located very close to the main door of the mausoleum."

"How do the people regard mausoleum burial in Sheffield, now?"

"I could only say that those who did not subscribe for tombs, and as far as they have expressed themselves, regret that they did not subscribe and especially is this so where a death has happened in a family that did not buy tombs."
