THE BEGINNING OF AN ERA.

THIS IS, perhaps at this hour it would be better to say has been, "Home Industries Day" in Oregon. From the interest expressed in it by all the newspapers of the state it has, no doubt, been pretty generally, and heartily celebrated. There have been numerous meetings, many speeches, but better than all a pretty thorough discussion of the subject and its principles by those who can best make it a success, the great mass of plain everyday average citizens. It means much. In fact it is based upon the same foundation as is the big idea of protection to American labor of the Republican party, without the handicap of a tariff.

Indeed, to carry the comparison further, if Oregon was an independent country, instead of being one of a confederation of state that cannot bar one another's goods or interfere with interstate traffic, it could, to enforce the consumption of its own products and create a market therefor, place a tariff on all goods made outside the state in order to encourage and build up our own industries.

As this cannot be done, the only way to accomplish the same results is by getting the people to understand how much it means to them and to the state, to have the goods we use manufactured in the state, and to encourage home industries by purchasing their products. In other words getting the people to do voluntarily what such a law would perforce compel them to do.

The principle should be carried really further than this. The duty of a Salem man when he requires anything is the purchase of the Salem manufacturer of that thing, other things being equal, if the article is made in Salem. Citizens of every other community owe the same duty to it.

If it is not made in their town, then purchase the Oregon made product in preference to any other, price and quality being practically the same.

This, not because we have any ill-feelings or enmity against our sister states, but entirely as a matter of self-interest. We want the people here, and we want a happy, prosperous, industrious, steadily employed people.

From present indications, the Balkan states will go Uncle Sam one better in the size of their Thanksgiving turkey.

If the big European Powers conclude they want a piece of white meat or a wing or drumstick, that Turkey carving job is liable to present anything rather than a Thanksgiving assemblage.

The timetable on the S. P. has been changed, which can be seen by perusing the same in The Capital Journal today. However, there is another way. Just go down to the depot, and the smiling agent, who is a Darling that way, will tell you to a minute how long the train has been gone.

Tobacco users. In the horse editor's opinion, are excusable for not demanding Oregon-grown tobacco, so long as they get cigars like "La Corona," for instance, imported tobacco, but manufactured in Oregon.

That special carrying the Elks to Oregon City last night was certainly a credit to Salem, for many of her best citizens were there, and Salem's best is in the cream-let anywhere. There was lots of others who wanted to go, but went down, and saw the happy crowd pull out, as being the next best thing to going along.

It costs Oregon a tremendous sum to take care of her insane—but she takes care of them well, and provides for them generously, and yet does it on a per capita basis very cheaply. Nearly 2000 people to be watched,

We want big Saturday night payrolls in Oregon, instead of sending our money east, to swell the payrolls there. Now we ship our Oregon grown wool, millions of pounds of it, east. A few pounds of it, for which the Oregon grower gets perhaps a dollar or two, comes back to Oregon in the shape of a suit of clothes or overcoat worth from $15 to $50. The added value, the difference between the dollar or two and the fifteen or fifty dollars, has gone to eastern factories, and eastern labor, instead of to our own factories and Oregon labor. This is but one of many conditions that now exist, and which "Home Industries Day" is calculated to impress upon our minds, and assist us in correcting. We want this added value to our own products, added here in Oregon by Oregon brains, skill and labor. Then we will have the perfected goods, and the money, too. Oregon now has less than three-quarters of a million people, yet she can easily sustain ten times that many, and when once we get the habit of using Oregon goods and insisting on them, the time will be not far distant when our population will be rapidly approaching the last suggested figures. Once the matter is well under way, it grows, like compound interest, by what it feeds upon—the demand calling for still more workmen, the working causing a still greater demand.

It is well for all of us to consider seriously this made in Oregon proposition and to each do his or her part in building up Oregon industries by our patronage, not by fits and starts, but steadily, everlastingly and persistently insisting on all occasions on the Oregon made goods, the Oregon grown products if they are to be had.

Here in the United States we are as if we were one great family, related by mutual interests. Our first duty is to our own immediate family, our home town; then to our nearest relative, the state, after that to those less near.

The Capital Journal believes in the principle back of this movement, and so believing, urges a long persistent push of the home industry wagon, until it reaches the top of the hill. Then we can all ride down the other side, and simply help hold the brake.

guarded and cared for; truly a job of herculean proportions.

With a new superintendent in charge of the pen, and he of the military cast, things move along smoothly out there. Still, those five who are not interested in the prison management after Friday, December 13, will get no more benefit from the change than the average office-seeker will from that made November 5.

Sheriff Rand, of Baker county, is a candidate for U. S. marshal. As Ed grew up in Hood River, he is, of course, the best in the box, and has many friends in that section who will be pleased to see him get it.

The horse editor's breakfast this morning was toast made from Oregon bread, made from Oregon flour, bacon made from Oregon porkers fattened on Oregon grain, eggs laid by Oregon hens of pioneer stock, but the coffee and sugar, well, we had them just the same.

He whose pocketbook is full is liable to carry a drowsy conscience.

We hear the ill fortune of our enemies with much pleasure.

Will Hold Series of Meetings

With a view to developing a greater interest in educational matters in the community, President Kuntz has arranged a series of meetings to be held during the next four weeks at the various school buildings of the district. The plan is to secure co-operation of teachers and parents by means of holding these meetings so that teachers and parents may become acquainted, and thus a higher degree of efficiency may be attained.

As part of the plan a general meeting will be held later at the high school at which it is the intention to extend an invitation to everybody in the school district.

The community meetings will be held on the date and at the places indicated below: Englewood, this, Thursday evening; Lincoln school, next Monday evening; Park school, December 6; Richmond school, December 11; Highland school, December 18; Garfield school, December 20.

As the Richmond and Highland are new and have never been formally dedicated, the meetings at those schools will be in the nature of a housewarming.

CAR SHORTAGE IS FELT IN OREGON

It is next to impossible to procure much-needed extra cars for the branch lines throughout the Willamette valley and Western Oregon generally, owing to the car shortage that exists over the entire country.

A letter from Toledo has been received at the office of the State Railroad Commission, and that office intimated that it would be a difficult matter to satisfy the Toledo people, although the office is doing the best possible under the circumstances. Cars have been ordered from the East, but even this does not avail. The only remedy that promises relief is the construction of new cars, which are being built as fast as the factories can turn them out.

What Writers For the Press Should Know

By CHARLES R. MILLER, Newspaper Writer and Lecturer

EDITORIAL writing for which PREPARATION IS MADE ONLY BY READING NEWSPAPERS is pretty certain to be without background and in such cases the guidance of fixed principle is too often lacking.

THE PURPOSE OF AN EDITORIAL ARTICLE IS INSTRUCTION, ADMONITION AND ADVICE—THEY SHOULD BE GIVEN WITH AUTHORITY, AS BY AN EXPERT—AND A NEWSPAPER WRITER SHOULD STRIVE DILIGENTLY TO QUALIFY AS AN EXPERT UPON A WIDE VARIETY OF TOPICS. AN EDITORIAL WRITER SHOULD READ MUCH, TALK MUCH, THINK MUCH, TRAVEL WHEN HE CAN, CONVERSATION WITH THOSE WHO KNOW A GOOD DEAL MORE ABOUT THE SUBJECTS TALKED OF THAN HIMSELF IS NOTABLY PROFITABLE.

It is vital that writers for the press should have such A GENERAL KNOWLEDGE OF LAW and legal principles as a layman can attain to.

Since the law relating to trusts is likely for many years to come to be a frequent subject for editorial writing, it would be a first rate preparation for a student to make a careful comparison of Justice Peckham's construction of the anti-trust law sixteen years ago with Chief Justice White's opinion in the oil and tobacco cases. INTERNATIONAL LAW, TOO, SHOULD BE STUDIED DILIGENTLY.

Will Have Big Rally Wednesday

What is expected to be the biggest rally and noise-making expedition ever held in the city is slated for next Wednesday night, on the evening preceding the big Thanksgiving game. All the details will be carefully worked out, and the people of Salem may expect to witness the biggest effort ever made in the history of old Willamette at letting the public know there was to be something doing.

The racket will start about 7:30 and may be expected to continue well into the evening. Among the principal events on the program will, of course, be a gigantic bonfire, which will be built on the athletic field.

Some men are modest enough to admit that they only know everything worth knowing.

Subscriptions Show Journal Is Appreciated

That in the newspaper business, as well as in all other lines, "nothing succeeds like success" is evidenced by the very gratifying increase of the circulation of The Capital Journal. The new management has had charge of the paper for just about a month, but in that short time the increase in the number of subscribers has necessitated the addition of four new carrier boys. This shows that the efforts of the new management towards publishing a better paper are not only appreciated, but it also serves as a source of encouragement to the management to endeavor to publish the best paper possible.
