There has been some complaint to the police of "mashers" becoming too numerous in the vicinity of the Oregon Electric depot and about the lobby of the state house, and consequently the largest officer on the force, Jack Welch, can be seen meandering about the depot now, and just praying that some smart Aleck will accost some woman or girl. Officer Welch has a fist like a picnic ham, and the force of six mule kicks behind it, so beware, Mr. Masher. Chief Shedeck says he will not tolerate anything of the kind, and those found getting funny will be given a dose they will not forget soon.

Portland concern, declaring that when the time comes for the fellows "who have squatted on the water rights at Oregon City to show their earnings they are so ashamed that they go to other countries to sell their bonds."

Describes Joseph's Ancestry.

In a witty rejoinder to Joseph's speech Dimick accused the Multnomah senator of inconsistency in his political principles.

"Why, you one-legged, one-lunged Progressive," taunted Dimick, "you came down here to Salem last July and swallowed the Progressive platform. You, you were there stronger than garlic (with apologies to the garlic). You remember what was in that platform, and yet you come here to this legislature and attack every measure for the promotion of the rights of the people or of the rights of labor."

When the resolution to congratulate the people of Ireland on home rule was up yesterday Joseph laid claim to Irish ancestry. Joseph also frequently when attacking measures advocated by Dimick, tells him that he wears his headlight behind. Dimick came back strong today:

"My curly-headed friend from Ireland," said he, "you make me wonder in what part of Ireland Jerusalem is located."

"You're all right, Dimick, except that your headlight is on behind," interrupted Joseph.

"Your headlight is out," retorted Dimick. "Why, the only light you ever had was an Israelite, and now you want to make it burn with Emerald Ile."

Patton Bill Downed.

With Butler, Kiddle and Barrett opposing Patton's bill providing for the transfer of prisoners to the penitentiary from the counties of the state by guards sent out from the prison instead of by the sheriffs, the senate downed the bill at third reading, but Patton announced that he would move for reconsideration.

Senator Butler declared that the economy cry attached to the bill was a false alarm, and that the bill would increase expenses by creating new positions and cause droves of leaches and hangers-on to flock about the prison looking for jobs.

Senator Kiddle added that the sheriffs in the counties represented by him considered the trip to Salem a very valuable in an educational way for officers in the distant counties of the state. Senator Barrett said he wondered that the framers of the bill didn't go further and make a provision that after the sheriffs have rounded up the prisoners that they be turned over to the governor to be sentenced.

Senator Farrell supported the bill, declaring that the fees allowed sheriffs for bringing prisoners to the pen are unfair. McCulloch voted against the bill, but said that there is an evil in the present system because it allows the sheriffs to bring along unneeded deputies "just to see the sights."

Exempt Fair Grounds.

Senator Bean's bill to exempt fair grounds from taxation was reported on favorably by the committee having it under consideration, but in a slightly amended form. Several bills were indefinitely postponed by the adoption of unfavorable reports of committees. Among these were the following:

By Moser, to amend the vehicle laws. House concurrent resolution relative to the revision of the method of taxation; house bill by McDonald relating to sale of drugs; house bill by Bonebrake to regulate sale of poisons; house bill by Howard relating to teaching sexual hygiene in schools.

New Bills Introduced.

The following bills were introduced and given first reading:

To reimburse the people of Weston, Oregon for the maintenance of normal schools. By Dimick, regulating the breeding of horses. By Stewart, providing a bounty on rabbits in Harney county; by Farrell, relating to securities. By Butler, to amend section 2599 Lord's Oregon Laws. By Hollis, for the disqualification of judges in districts of only one county. For the amendment of section 2574, Lord's Oregon Laws. By Burgess, relating to the duties of parents and guardians in regard to the yearly school census.

An invitation from the Portland chamber of commerce was read inviting the legislature to a banquet to be served on Lincoln's birthday.

Glasses or spectacles are often necessary. The child's eyes need attention, so that by correcting the difficulty in its early stages, glasses need not always be worn.

Elderly people require glasses to see clearly, and to ease the strain on their eyes as age comes on.

Broadway Jones Is Allright

Coming up to every expectation aroused by the interesting and suggestive title, "Broadway Jones" entertained a fair house at the Grand theatre last night. The play is very Co-hoesque. It is on the move all the time, snappy funny at every turn, but with too numerous "cuss" words that could have been eliminated without spoiling the effects of the situation, for it is not necessary to be coarse or vulgar to be either witty or entertaining.

Ralph Morgan, as Jackson Jones, known as "Broadway" is the type of player to take such a role, to exactly fit the imagination of one who reads the play. As the broken spendthrift who has gone through with a fortune of a quarter of a million dollars and contracted an immense debt, he retains his nerve and cheer, living on the generosity of his many friends and the hope that a miracle will happen to restore his lost fortune. The miracle happens when Peter Pembroke of the Consolidated Chewing Gum Co., comes to buy the Jones Chewing Gum plant, which "Broadway" does not know he owns because he has forgotten to open a telegram brought him when he is in a highly nervous state over the announcement of his engagement to an elderly widow, Mrs. Gerard.

The play opens with the announcement of his engagement which has developed from an acquaintance of 10 minutes at a midnight dinner given by "Broadway." Robert Wallace, "Broadway's" friend, proves his guardian angel in the trying affair which has aroused all New York. The role of Wallace is taken by John Webster, who is probably the best actor in the cast.

The Company is well balanced. Grace Morrisset and Edith Luckett, as Clara Spotswood and Josie Richards, respectively, both play well, but the play is essentially one of male characters. Frederick Maynard, as Judge Spotswood, attorney for the Jones company, played a strong role.

As a result of last night's performance, a Cohen play can get a big hearing in Salem at any time it comes to town.

Everyone Is Enthusiastic Over Nordica

The applications for reservations for the Nordica concert are coming in with a rush that shows the widespread interest in the event, which may rightfully be regarded as one of great musical importance.

That the public of Salem and its vicinity are greatly interested in the coming of the greatest dramatic soprano in the world is evidenced by the heavy sale of seats and the unprecedented number of inquiries and requests for reservations that have been received from surrounding points.

In addition to its musical importance, the Nordica concert promises to be one of the most brilliant social events of the season, as judging by present indications, the diva will be greeted by an audience that will be a truly representative one. Nordica's great beauty and magnetic personality, aside from her wonderful voice, made a tremendous appeal to the general public, as well as to the recognized music-lover and the student, which is possibly the reason for the unanimous interest and enthusiasm that are evident regarding her coming.

The date of the Nordica concert is February 12. The prima donna will be assisted by Rummel, the distinguished violinist, and Romayne Simmons, pianist.

"Blue Sunday."

Prof. C. S. Longacre, of Washington, D. C., International Field Secretary of the Religious Liberty Association, and W. H. Martin, of Portland, religious secretary of the Northwest, will speak in the Grand opera house in this city on Thursday and Friday nights of this week, against a Sunday bill which has been introduced into the legislature. These lectures will be free and promise to be of special interest. Much opposition is raised to this Sunday bill, and thousands of protests are being sent to the committee which has the bill in charge. The bill savors of the old-time spirit in the early Puritan days, when the Sunday Blue Laws were so obnoxious. Both these lecturers have a wide experience, and have been successful in defeating scores of religious bills which have been introduced by religious societies into the legislatures. Religious liberty is at stake and many interesting features will be developed in this contention that is now before the people and the legislature.

The lectures will begin at 8 p. m., and the Portland quartet will render special songs.

Much interest is taken by guests in a big crowd which can be seen hopping about the colonades in the lobby of the Hotel Marion. The bird, although not related to him, being a bird of another color, bears the same name as that of the genial and obliging manager of the hostelry, Jack Crowe. "I've seen canary birds, parrots, red birds and about every other sort of the flying species in hotels during my travels," said a salesman last night, "but darn me, if I ever saw an overgrown black bird like that making himself so much at home."

WATT SHIPP'S STORE IS AGAIN BURGLARIZED

The sporting goods establishment belonging to Watt Shipp, on North Commercial street, was entered some time last night, and over $350 worth of revolvers were stolen. The officers have no material to work upon in the investigation of the case.

This is the fifth time Watt Shipp's store has been robbed. The burglars last night forced a storm door, and, although braced by a heavy timber, forced the inner door. They then ransacked the inside show cases of the most valuable revolvers in the store, and were so bold as to crawl through a small window into the
