Some of the Freak Bills Are Killed

GOVERNOR'S PRIVATE SECRETARY'S SALARY IS FIXED AT $3000—EUGEN ARMORY BILL GETS LONGER LEASE OF LIFE.

The Nolta Sunday closing bill, which would close all theatres, amusements and stores except those that sell food on that day, met with an untimely death today in the house through being indefinitely postponed. Chairman Helzel of Marion, head of the revision of laws committee, announced that most of the Nolta bill provisions were embodied in present laws. There was no date on the bill.

Among the dozen or more other bills sent to the house yesterday through indefinite postponement was the Carpenter bill imposing strict regulations on moving picture shows in wooden buildings.

A lively little scrap arose over the senate bill to make the salary of the governor's secretary $3000. There was a minority and majority report, the former recommending only $2000. The secretary has been receiving $3000 compensation per year, but $1800 of it came from acting as secretary of various state boards. The McArthur state board of control bill, which passed yesterday takes away these secretarial duties and salary that went with them.

Jewelling of Linn, and Hughes and Johnson of Marion, fought the $3000 figure, claiming that the secretary was a mere figure head now, on the ground of economy and that the duties were not worth it. Hagood, Upton, Hughes Helzel and LaCourrette contended that the office was one of responsibility, dignity and arduous labor, and that Oregon would be disgraced in the eyes of the nation if the salary were less than $3000. The majority report was overwhelmingly adopted.

The bill providing for a $50,000 National Guard armory at Eugene was about to be killed on the military committee's recommendation, when Parsons of Lane came to the rescue and had it referred to the ways and means committee.

The Nolta bill providing for the use of voting machines at all elections was placed on the calendar despite the adverse report of the committee on elections.

There was a majority and minority report on the Reames bill to regulate fishing on the Rogue river, but after a lively debate, the majority report recommending passage was adopted, with the understanding that the bill will be discussed in committee of the whole before coming up for passage.

Among other bills killed by indefinite postponement by committees were the following:

By Carpenter, requiring owners of timber lands to provide a fire patrol.

By Schuebel, authorizing citizens to trap, shoot or otherwise kill wild animals and game at any time on their own land.

By Gill, providing that state officers may have printed upon an election ballot a title of 12 words.

By Murnane, providing for the registration of and licensing of Oregon music teachers by a state board.

By Upton, providing the use of repeating and automatic shotguns while hunting.

About a dozen bills were voluntarily withdrawn from the calendar by their authors. The recommendation of committees on a large number of bills for passage were adopted by the house.

MORGAN HAD THE GOODS GOT THIRTY DAYS

Officer Frank Flake proved himself a clever policeman last night, when he arrested Dick Morgan, on the charge of being intoxicated. After making the arrest, it was found that Morgan had in his possession two valuable tools belonging to a local garage, which were identified this morning by a member of the firm.

Morgan, who is an inoffensive appearing individual, was brought before Justice Webster, and, upon the recommendation of his counsel, pleaded guilty to simple larceny.

"Dick, you are not a bad appearing fellow," said Justice Webster, "and I don't want to be severe with you. The least I can do is to sentence you to 30 days in the county jail, which I will do at this time."

Morgan's eyes filled with tears while the justice was talking, and everybody in the court room believed as the judge did, he was not a bad man by any means.

NEARLY KILLS ROCKY TO TELL THE TRUTH

Jekyll Island, Feb. 7.—Symptoms of throat spasms 12 minutes after the examination had started this afternoon abruptly ended the questioning of William Rockefeller, Standard Oil magnate, by Chairman Pijo, of the house money trust investigating committee, and of the committee's attorney Samuel Untermyer, of New York. Rockefeller, apparently, was suddenly stricken speechless, and Attorney Untermyer refused to continue in questioning the witness.

Some recent weather is a pretty fair imitation, if not the real thing, of an early spring.

Princess Elizabeth of Roumania May Wed Prince of Wales

WHO will be the wife of Edward Albert, prince of Wales?

That is the question millions of people in general and about two dozen handsome young peeresses in particular would like to know.

There are just hundreds of girls—girls with royal blood in their veins, too—who would jump at the chance to have this young man for a life mate.

He is not very handsome and he's not very rich as kings go. The young fellow is to the same negative degree not so very brilliant in conversation. Yet there are many royal blooded girls curious to know how deeply he holds his friendship for them.

This fever of speculation is all because Prince Edward Albert will one day be king of England and is just about now due to be picking his future queen.

Further than that, there have been rumors—very disquieting to about one dozen and eleven girls in particular—that the Princess Elizabeth of Roumania is designated by providence to be Edward Albert's mate.

Prince Edward Albert was born June 23, 1894. He is now in Oxford. The Princess Elizabeth was born on Sept. 29, 1894. Her royal highness is the second child and the eldest daughter of the crown prince and princess of Roumania. Her father, the Crown Prince Ferdinand, was created prince of Roumania in 1880 on the renunciation of his rights to the throne by his brother, Prince William, who had owed his rights to the renunciation of the position by his father. The latter was Prince Leopold of Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen, elder brother of the king of Roumania.

The crown prince married Princess Marie, daughter of the late Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, better known as the Duke of Edinburgh. He was the brother of King Edward VII, grandfather of the Prince of Wales. Therefore the Prince of Wales and the Princess Elizabeth are second cousins.

Princess Olga, grand duchess of Russia, has always been considered the leading candidate—if an eligible young wisp of royalty can be a candidate for marriage—among all the two dozen, for in her case it is an open secret the match would be one of pure love. The prince and the grand duchess are known to have had a love affair since boyhood.

But there are political elements, diplomatic relations and all sorts of factors based on policy that hedge about a future king in his choosing of a bride. He may not be able to choose the one he loves for a wife, even though she has the principal requirement of royal blood.

Others who are named by the international students of royal affairs as leading candidates are Princess Helena of Teck, Princess Alexandra, Duchess of Fife; Princess Victoria Louise of Prussia, Princess Victoria of Teck and the Princess Maud of Fife.

Possibly the most impressive political strength lies behind the unspoken bid of the Princess Victoria Louise, daughter of the Kaiser of Germany. The marriage of the Prince of Wales to this young woman would be one of the greatest political alliances in Europe's latter day history. For years the question of war between England and Germany has boiled up continually. Despite the oft repeated assurances of both ministries, the bugaboo will not go down. But a German queen on the English throne—under that condition the prospect would be different.

Significance has been placed upon the chance of this match, owing to the prospective visit to England of the Kaiser and Kaiserin next spring. The princess will be with them.

All England has been deeply interested in this forthcoming visit, having, as it does, the potency of uniting the two countries with a powerful bond. But all England is also interested in the pretty love story concerning the prince and Grand Duchess Olga. And to complicate matters come now the latest story of a love intrusional affair between his royal highness and the Princess Elizabeth of Roumania.

For pulling power with the average legislator give the cake to a pretty, saucy young woman.

Every new criminal statute adds to the work and expense of courts and lawyers, and the taxpayers' burden.

New York Shudders In Fear of Salt And Pepper Attack

TO literally salt and pepper a great city into submission is the form of strike possibility evolved out of the recent waiters' controversy in New York.

The sensational plan to make the power of the men who juggle plates and spill gravy felt by all the wealthy diners out in Gotham made New York gasp. Not only was the plan to salt and pepper the city into helplessness suggested, but overt threats of possible poison were forced upon the public. At least, threat of poison was the construction the restaurant and hotel owners put upon a startling utterance by one of the strike leaders.

In the evolution of the hideous plan Joseph J. Ettor and Arturo Giovannitti, who some time ago became prominent as leaders of the Lawrence (Mass.) mills strike, had a leading part. They put the plan of attack into words, offering it as good advice to the waiters. These two men have had a thrilling experience as labor leaders. Because of their movements in the strike at Lawrence last summer they were charged with complicity in a murder, were tried and acquitted.

Thus when the labor disturbance involving the New York waiters and the garment manufactory employees broke out simultaneously the pair gravitated naturally to the center of the stage in that city. They have come to be popular strike leaders and, in fact, the idols of a large portion of discontented workers.

Ettor was first to sound the warning for the waiters that thrilled the public. In a speech before the strikers he said: "Go back to work with your minds made up that it is the unsmart thing in the world for capitalists to eat food prepared by your union."

The subtle threat was widely accepted as having the most sinister meaning possible, and the restaurant owners seriously considered having the agitator prosecuted criminally.

Giovannitti followed with a similar utterance, which in effect took the sting and the hideousness out of his friend's words. In a speech he told the waiters: "The waiters in Paris won their strike by subtle means. Where in a certain relish a pinch of salt was required they put in a handful. Where a mere snuff of pepper was needed they put in another handful."

While New York was still gasping over the fear of the "unsavory thing in the world" and "the subtle means" Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, another oracle of the workers, gave new advice. She told the men to make affidavits as to the character of the food sent out from the kitchen under normal conditions. The waiters as a result put forward charges that unfit food was served as a regular thing, having thick coatings of sauce to cover the signs of its unfitness, and that food rejected by one person at table was returned again to another guest with new sauce hiding its defects.

Ettor is twenty-seven years old and was born in this country. He was a sheet metal worker before he became a strike leader as a member of the Industrial Workers of the World.

Giovannitti is thirty years old. He was born in Italy, the son of a chemist. He lived in Montreal and Halifax after coming to America and gained a common school education. He entered Union Theological seminary and registered at Columbia university when he came to New York. He preached in Presbyterian missions in New York and Brooklyn and later in Pittsburgh. While in the last named city he took up socialism. As editor of Il Proletario, an Italian newspaper, and a year ago, he met Ettor and joined him in agitating under the name of the Industrial Workers of the World.

The waiters undertook their strike with the demand for a regular wage.

in general, and the Oregon state fair in particular.

Mr. Knight, secretary of the American Trotting association, spoke along the lines of the educational features of fairs, and of their immense benefit, and said that the exhibits of stock and products of farm and factory, were educational, the horse, that is the speedy horse, was one of the principal entertainment features.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Alderman made the closing talk of the evening, and was listened to with intense interest by all. He spoke fluently and feelingly of the industrial movement started in the schools, of the keen interest the girls, as well as the boys, are taking in it, of the immense beneficial results that would follow the parents and children having interests in common, getting together, of the infinite possibilities for good in teaching the young folks responsibility. "A boy may forget the responsibility his father places on him," said Mr. Alderman, "but he can't forget his responsibility for his pig getting its feed, for the pig will squeal." He interspersed a highly educational talk, with some telling witty stories, but cut his remarks short, as did all the other speakers, as many present were anxious to get a glimpse at the "third house." It was a delightful occasion that all attending will mark in their memories with a white stone.

WOMAN'S IDEAL LAXATIVE IS DELICIOUS "SYRUP OF FIGS"

GENTLY CLEANSSES YOUR STOMACH, LIVER AND THIRTY FEET OF BOWELS WITHOUT GRIPE OR NAUSEA—ENDS HEADACHE, BILIOUSNESS, GASTRITIS AND CONSTIPATION.

All women get bilious, headachy and constipated—slightly because they don't exercise enough. They don't eat by but thoroughly moved on and out of course food, or enough fruit and green vegetables. Those are nature's ways of keeping the liver and thirty feet of bowels active; but very few women employ them. The next best way is delicate, light, fruity Syrup of Figs.

Nearly all ill women can be overcome with Syrup of Figs alone. There is no need to have sick headache, backache, dizziness, stomach ache and full of gases, bilious spells, sallowness, coated tongue, bad breath, bad complexion, nervousness and depression. The surest and safest remedy is one or two teaspoonful of delicate Syrup of Figs. Try this tonight—you'll feel splendid in the morning.

When the sour bile clogged up waste and poisonous matter have been gently exercised enough. They don't eat by but thoroughly moved on and out of course food, or enough fruit and green vegetables. Those are nature's ways of keeping the liver and thirty feet of bowels active; but very few women employ them. The next best way is delicate, light, fruity Syrup of Figs.

It is simply a matter of keeping your stomach, liver and bowels clean and regular. Then you will always be well—always look and feel your best. Beach Is Acquitted.

[UNITED PRESS LEARNED WIRE.] Aiken, S. C., Feb. 7.—Accused of gashing his wife's throat in an attempt to kill her, Frederick Beach, a rich resident of this town, and formerly of New York, was formally acquitted by a jury here in Judge Spain's court, after only a few minutes' deliberation.

Beach and his wife, on the stand, both swore the attack on Mrs. Beach was committed by a negro at night in the yard of their home, and that the assassin fled as Mrs. Beach fell with a great wound in her throat. The case was mysterious from its inception, and the verdict today did little to clear it up.
