ROBBERS CLEVERLY CAPTURED.

prove that he did not enter any house in Salem. Caladras, however, was more submissive, and practically admitted that he had knowledge of the robberies, but made the excuse that he did not realize the importance of the crime until a short time before he was arrested.

Both men seemed to care little for the evidence the officers have against them, and Cadena sneeringly replied this morning to a question "that he would like to see the officers prove anything."

Caldaras said that he has been in Salem but three days, and told Chief Shedeck that he met Cadena yesterday morning. The chief, however, has evidence to show that the two men have been occupying the same room for the past four days, and that their association has been constant when in the lodging house.

Women in Case. In the letters found by the officers on the person of Cadena, it is stated that the man has several lady friends who are anxiously awaiting his return.

The letters also prove that the name Cadena is nothing but an alias, and that his true name is George Rochester. It is claimed in the letters written by the woman "Dixie," that Cadena, or Rochester, is badly wanted in Weed, Cal., on various charges. He is said to have left the place suddenly, with numerous debts hanging over him, and that shady work was performed by him at that place.

The fact that a letter from the government is awaiting in California leads the officers to believe he is a deserter from the army, and these facts will be ascertained at the earliest possible date.

Jewelry in Good Shape. Strange to say, the jewelry found by the officers was not mutilated. This fact tends to prove that the men have a "fence" in some other town, to which they were intending to go after completing their work in Salem.

A watch bearing a Masonic emblem was among the stolen goods, and upon being questioned, Cadena said that the watch fob was given him by a relative. "What does this emblem stand for," asked Chief Shedeck. "Oh, that is a Socialist badge," declared the prisoner.

Other questions were fired at the men as to where the jewelry came from, but they stolidly claimed the goods to be their property in spite of the fact that owners were there to identify the same.

The fact that Wilbur Gains was one of the principals in apprehending the offenders is creating no small amount of discussion today among those interested in the police question.

Mr. Gains was discharged from the force, due to the action taken by Councilmen Minton and Jones, who charged him with being unfit for a police officer.

The fact that he practically unearthed the evidence by which the arrest of Cadena and Caladras was effected, indicates that the police committee made a mistake by refusing to accept him as an officer, and that, by reason of his good work in the present case, Chief Shedeck's recommendation of the former officer should be reconsidered, and Mr. Gains reinstated in the department.

Prisoners Admit Guilt. "I am guilty, but I don't know this other man." This was the statement made this afternoon by T. Cadena, when he and his partner, Frank Caladras, were arraigned before Justice of the Peace Webster. The latter pleaded not guilty, and a hearing will be held Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

It is more than evident that the culmination of the search for the robbers creating such a disturbance in Salem is at hand, as Chief of Police Shedeck stated today that both men have admitted they are equally guilty, and it remains now for the district attorney to investigate the case of the one who is attempting to fight the charges placed against him, while the other was turned over to Sheriff Esch to hold pending the action of the grand jury.

Diamonds Found. Had it not been for the fact that Cadena urgently requested that he would be in need of a button-hook, Officer Flake relieved him of it at the time of his arrest. It is possible that the officers would never have found two diamond rings which were stolen from the homes of Ed. Baker and Charles Birdall.

Ex-Officer Gains brought this subject up this morning, and the prisoner was brought out of the jail, and upon removing his shoes, the police found two diamond rings neatly tucked away in the soles of the same.

For the reason the valuable trinkets were hurting his feet, and being in fear that they would be eventually discovered in the event he unbuttoned his shoes and left them open, Cadena made urgent requests that he be allowed to take his button-hook into the jail when he was being "frisked" last night.

Accepts Dissolution Plan. Washington, Feb. 7.—The plan of the Harriman railroads to effect the disintegration of the Harriman system through stock transfers will be accepted by the government according to an announcement made by Attorney-General Wickersham today.

The department of justice will make a statement concerning the plan within a few days.

Internal Remedies Necessary For Those Who Get Them. Chills are a terrible disfigurement to the hands and are often a sign of a low state of health.

Chills are a terrible disfigurement to the hands and are often a sign of a low state of health. If you get them out of heat producing food, such as fats, sweets and cereals.

At the first symptom of their appearance, which is usually a red, irritating spot, rub gently with some olive oil or other grease. Before going to bed at night hold the hands in a basin of warm water to which a dessertspoonful of sea salt has been added.

After drying rub softly with a little alcohol. Spirits of camphor helps to allay irritation. Keep up the circulation of the hands by frequent and gentle rubbing. Use a muff out of doors and avoid extremes of heat and cold.

Freshening Linoleum. To keep linoleum that has worn bare from showing every track use in the water with which you wash it any kind of oil. It saves a great deal of labor, as the floor will need washing only once a week, and it also keeps down the dust wonderfully.

Knitted Ties. Men's crocheted or knitted ties are apt to stretch. To prevent this wear a piece of baby ribbon the length of the tie and stitch up the middle on the wrong side. This has been tried, and the tie has been the same length when worn out.

THE SITUATION MAKES THE BIG BROKER. Chicago, Feb. 7.—James Patten, the famous wheat broker, is reported seriously ill in New York. His wife is rushing to his bedside.

Patten is facing a federal hearing regarding his securing a sensational corner on wheat in Chicago a few years ago.

Stole Some Coal. San Francisco, Feb. 7.—Investigation of accusations by federal detectives that the government has been defrauded out of more than $1,000,000 in coal duties by the Western Fuel company, a branch of the coal trust, was officially started here this afternoon.
