CONTRACTS EXPRESS OR IMPLIED.

THERE are three things necessary to make a contract. There must be parties, a subject matter and a consideration.

after keeping the passover at Jerusalem he came into Gethsemane. There, as Jesus had prophesied, Judas betrayed, there Peter denied him, and there seized by the rabble, He was taken before Caiaphas, the high priest, and by him and the Scribes and Elders condemned to death for blasphemy.

Yes, it was the end of the mortal, for the mortal had put on immortality. The Son of God had suffered death, had gone down into the grave, taking with him the sins of man, and he came from the grave again that first glorious Easter morn, hearing the redemption of the world in his hands.

And so today, in memory of that great sacrifice, of that great promise fulfilled, of that immortal hope, given by him to man of life eternal in that "palace not builded with hands, eternal in the heavens," the Christian world pays homage and reverence.

ONE BROTHER HANGED

ANOTHER IS INSANE

George Roberts, brother of Jack Roberts, who was hanged at the state penitentiary December 13, 1912, was brought to the state hospital for the insane yesterday, having been adjudged insane at Oregon City. His brother, Jack Roberts, was executed for the murder of Donald Stewart and George Hastings, on the White House road, near Portland.

The resemblance of George Roberts to the man who was hanged is said to be striking. He is taller, and of somewhat lighter build, but the facial features are said to be very similar. This is not his first commitment to an insane asylum. Only a few weeks ago he was released from the asylum in Idaho. Upon leaving that institution he went to the home of his mother, near Portland, and began work on the farm. He became dissatisfied with the pay given him, and about a week ago took a sudden notion to leave. He left the farm at midnight, taking clothing and other articles with him. For several days he roamed the country until his actions were noticed by neighbors, who had him taken into custody and examined as to his sanity. His commitment to the asylum followed. Roberts is 27 years old.

THE PLAYGROUND

ASSOCIATION MEETS

At a special meeting of the Salem Children's Playground Association, held yesterday, it was decided that the work accomplished by the association last year will be greatly elaborated upon this year. Committees were named to wait upon the city council and the members of the school board, with a view to procuring cooperation on the part of these bodies with the association.

Last year the playgrounds were maintained upon the athletic field of Willamette University, but this year it is proposed to have the grounds on the athletic field of the Salem high school. Secretary Weir, of the National Playgrounds Association, will deliver an address in Salem on April 4 at a general meeting to be held on that date. Last year 50 Salem citizens put up $50 each to finance the grounds. This year there will be additional employees on the grounds, and a greater amount of money will be necessary.

The first logs from the Row river watershed, recently purchased by the U. S. Logging Co., of Cottage Grove, will reach that city within two weeks.

Tribute to Samuel McRoberts.

(By Judge P. H. D'Arcy.) A few days ago while walking through the Old Fellows' cemetery south of Salem, I noticed for the first time the following inscription: "SAMUEL McROBERTS," "Born in Danville, Illinois, December 13, 1845," "Died in Salem, Oregon March 21, 1904."

When I read this my mind reverted to incidents which occurred many years ago when, as a small lad, I attended the old institute located where the gymnasium of the Willamette university now stands. I read and re-read the inscription with much interest. I did not remember his resting place until I saw this monument. How few there are living in Salem who remember Samuel McRoberts. "Sam" McRoberts, as he was familiarly called by the students, was several years older than myself. It is strange how this young man's individuality seemed to interest me. My remembrance of him is somewhat indistinct, but his personality has impressed itself upon my mind so much that I have never forgotten him. When I read the inscription many reminiscences passed through my mind of the pioneer days of our city and the many changes which have taken place since he attended school, and his death in the flush of young manhood. My recollection of him was that he was a brilliant student, fine athlete and a splendid speaker. He was unselfish and generous. Kind to the younger boys. My happiness was complete when I was privileged to run for his ball, hand him a hat, and in return for services rendered receive a pat on the shoulder and kindly words of encouragement. He was my ideal in every way of what a student should be. Many times since he was buried have I thought what a success in life he might have achieved with his intellectual qualities, pleasant and agreeable manners which he possessed. Sam McRoberts was a cousin of Hon. Charles R. Moore, of Portland, and Messrs. A. N., Ross E., and Carl Moore, of Salem. At the time of which I write many persons knew him well. Nearly all of them have solved the problems of this life and passed away from earth nevermore to participate in the trials, struggles and vicissitudes which we all encounter. On reading the above inscription I could not help offering a small tribute of respect and affection to one who fell early in life's battle.

The beautiful cemetery where he is buried overlooks Salem, the peerless city of the west. From here one has a delightful view of the Willamette valley, the garden spot of Oregon. In the distance the snow-capped peaks of the Cascade range of mountains, Mt. Hood, Mt. Jefferson, and The Three Sisters can be seen. Lovely panorama of the beauties of nature.

Kind, generous, and noble young man how your presence has been the cause of many high and lofty ideals. May your sleep be peaceful and serene. In the vigor of youth, with fond hope and bright prospects, you passed beyond the river. As I regretted your death very much at the time it occurred, so as the years have fled away my boyish feeling and good will for you have increased. The remembrance of Sam McRoberts and the old days are with me still. The chimes of memory keep in mind the days of long ago.

Surrounded by friends and acquaintances and those who dearly loved him, Samuel McRoberts passed out to the unknown shore. All hail, good friend of my boyhood fancies! Your memory will ever be treasured by one who had an affectionate and sincere regard for your kindly and sterling character.

A FINE SPECIMEN OF NATION'S GRATITUDE

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.] Reno, Nev., March 22.—Baffled in his attempts to get food, owing to the loss of his savings of eight years, amounting to $320, Lewis C. Schilling, 81 years old, sole survivor of the Alamo massacre, and adopted son of Kit Carson, was gripped by starvation, and is dead here today. Shilling passed away in an old shack where he had subsisted on crackers and water until he could sustain himself no longer. Shilling lost the money on a recent trip to California, and had to borrow coin to return to his shack here. Shilling was adjutant to General Phil Sheridan in the Civil War. He had a notable career as a scout and frontiersman.

It would be fine to come back and look over the great Willamette valley 100 years hence.
