THE CITY LOSES A FRIEND.

DEATH, in his own time, lays his heavy hand on all. On the babe, whose eyes he but permits to see the light, then remorselessly closes for ever; on the toddling little one whose little prattle, so dear to mother and father, is relentlessly silenced; on the youth, full of ambition and courage, whose visions of great things to be achieved are ruthlessly destroyed; on the girl blooming into womanhood; on the mother, with her firstborn by her side; on the adult in the full vigor of manhood, and on him whose years he has allowed to reach their full length. And it is indeed a heavy hand in every case, a hand that wrenches heart strings to the breaking point, and bears down the soul in dry-eyed anguish. This is what he brings in every case to those near and dear, but there are some cases, where his heavy hand presses hard upon the entire community.

This is the case today as Salem learns of the passing of "Andy" Hofer, for the whole city had learned to rely on him. Far-seeing, energetic, creative, he was always in the van of those movements that tended to Salem's welfare and betterment. His active brain conceived and his willing hands carried out innumerable things for the city's advancement. Every move for greater growth, for better conditions, for putting Salem to the front; and placing her attractions and her opportunities before the world found "Andy" Hofer at its head. His services as secretary of the Board of Trade are not yet fully appreciated for their effects are now being realized and with ever increasing force. It were an herculean task to attempt to enumerate what he has done in this line, for if anything done here for Salem's benefit is traced back, it will show "Andy" Hofer either as its originator or advocate.

Salem indeed owes him much and it is a debt that will assume larger proportions as the years pass by and the city profits by the good works done by him. While the whole city mourns in profound sympathy with those nearest and dearest to him so sadly and so ruthlessly bereaved, it for itself has a deep and sincere regret at its own loss, as a community.

SALEM'S FUTURE IS ASSURED.

THERE IS NOT an inland city in the United States today whose prospects of steady and rapid growth are brighter than those of Salem. There is not one that can show a steadier or more substantial growth than Salem has had in the past four years. In that time she has increased in population at least 70 per cent, and bids fair at the end of 1913 to have double the population she had at the beginning of the year 1899, or to have doubled her population in five years. Her development has kept in full pace with her growth, as witness the splendid buildings erected in that time, five and six story buildings modern in every way, beautiful in design, and of the very best construction. During the same period hundreds of handsome residences have been built, miles of street paved, sewer system completed, and a broad foundation laid for the great future that surely awaits her. The greatest features of that development however, is in the addition to her transportation facilities.

In the past four years, the Oregon Electric has been built, giving us splendid service to Portland in addition to that already given by the Southern Pacific, and opening up new territory to the north, bringing it in touch with Salem. This same road has built on to the south to Eugene, opening up new territory and bringing in closer touch with the capital city, residents along its 75 miles of new track.

During that time the Salem Falls City & Western has been completed to Black Rock and to the immense timber areas of the Coast range and this connection was recently perfected by the completion of the big steel bridge across the Willamette here, that cost nearly $300,000.

Within the past year the branch road to Fir has been completed, giving us connection with Silverton and the rich territory along the Woodburn-Springfield branch of the Southern Pacific, and direct connection with the country up the Mohawk to Wendling, and also with Natron, which latter means, that we will have direct connection with Klamath Falls and all that section when the Natron cut-off, now building is completed.

Besides this the P. E. & E., which has taken over the Falls City & Western and the branch road to Fir, is completing a network of roads, all soon to be electrified, and covering the whole valley, of which Salem is the center.

The future railroad development promises great things and that at once. The rights of way are already secured from Salem to Stayton for the road up the Santiam and on into eastern Oregon through the Minto pass to Bend in Crook county. Thence it will run nearly east through the center of eastern Oregon to Ontario on Snake river where it connects with the Oregon Short Line road, giving Salem not only communication with eastern Oregon, but another direct line to the east. This line will probably be somewhat shorter than the present line from Portland up the Columbia.

Then there is the proposed line to Newport one of the finest summer resorts in the northwest. This road will open up a vast timber area and will be one of the big factors in Salem's growth.

It will be seen from this that Salem is already considerable of a railroad center, having lines extending in six directions to which in the near future will be added at least two more.

The transportation facilities are a great factor in the development of any city bringing to it factories and wholesale businesses, and Salem's splendid central location in close touch with a big and rapidly developing territory, making it an ideal location for that kind of institutions. She has now reached that stage in her development where she is able to in a measure help herself to what she wants, and there is nothing now that can stop her growth.

ANOTHER PIONEER CROSSES THE DIVIDE

Mrs. Margaret J. Wilson, widow of the late Oscar J. Cone, of Butteville, died Friday at the old Cone homestead, opposite Butteville and interment was made yesterday at the Butteville cemetery. Mr. Cone was a pioneer of 1848 and his widow of 1849. An exceptionally large attendance is reported at the funeral. Her children only survive her. They are: George W. Cone, of Oregon City; Mrs. Josie Eberhard, of McMinnville, and Arthur A. Cone, of Newberg.

Her first husband, Oscar Cone, hauled the first printing press ever brought to Salem, that of the Statesman, from Oregon City with an ox team nearly 65 years ago.

Lillian Russell is going to Europe for the especial purpose of gathering data for an illustrated lecture to show that the conditions of working women in Europe are worse than those in America. As this will do no one any good, unless it is to help swell the once fair Lillian's bank roll, it seems to be an unnecessary bit of labor in behalf of the down-trodden American employer.

Over in England the insurance companies have taken up a new line, "Insurance against damage by suffragettes." This is putting that bunch of ladies in the class with fires, floods and other calamities and may cause the 'blowing up" of the insurance companies.

* * *

Miss Zelie Emerson, an American suffragette, was thrown in jail in England for violating the laws and made to scrub floors. The throwing in jail is easily believed, but the making her scrub floors—nothing doing if she was a real suffragette.

* * *

The Stayton Mail says in a big head line, "Railroad from Salem is in the air. " That's correct, and it will not be a long time until it is on the ground.

* * *

Some one remarks that "a woman's mind is so much cleaner than a man's because she changes it so often." It's a safe bet it was no candidate for office in an equal suffrage state, that fathered the remark.

* * *

The proverb has it that "you can lead a horse to water, but you cannot make him drink," now has a modern truism in the similar statement that "you can put a suffragette in jail, but you cannot make her eat."

* * *

According to the railroad commission, the C. & E. is only two streaks of rust and a right of way, and some breaks in both.

* * *

The Presbytery of Southern Oregon has endorsed the proposition to start a school in that part of the state for the education of Chinese residents. Any one acquainted with the Chinese character knows they know enough now to manage their business affairs pretty well. What else can be profitably taught them?

* * *

Next year, when the P. E. & E. gets through electrifying all its roads and the people of Oregon, it will use part of its surplus, if it has any, in buying a couple of springs and putting in an automatic switch on South Commercial street. The conductors do the automatic stunt gracefully enough but they sometimes, inadvertently, of course, tread on some fellow's corns, and then the company loses the good will of that especial patron. If the public will be patient, the attention of Attorney Moody will be called to it, and he will tell the management, and it will lay it before the board of directors, and if it does not interfere with dividends they will send glad news red-taping back so that the switch will be attended to next year.

COMMITTEE IS BUSY WORKING FOR ENDOWMENT

The campaign for increased subscriptions from Salem and Marion county to the endowment fund for Willamette University is now on in full force.

Frequent meetings of the committee in charge of the canvass are being held in the campaign headquarters, 201 Hubbard building, and a steadily increasing interest is being exhibited in the work.

The following letter has been sent to the taxpayers of Marion county:

Dear Friend:

We want to ask your consideration of a few facts.

First: $800,000. Yes, eight hundred thousand dollars, is what what one institution has brought to Salem in the last five years.

Second: $400,000 of the above has been spent in the business houses and homes of Salem, and this amount and more will be spent every five years in all the years to come.

Third: $100,000 is for a permanent fund and was raised outside of Salem. This added to $200,000 makes 500,000. The interest on this comes to Salem.

Fourth: $300,000 is for a permanent fund and was raised outside of Salem. This, added to $200,000, makes $500,000. The interest on this comes to Salem.

Fifth: $25,000 will be the minimum amount of interest on these permanent funds each year, and all of this will be spent in Salem.

Sixth: Hundreds of thousands of dollars will continue to come to Salem in coming years, as this $800,000 has come through Willamette University.

Seventh: Think of this, Salem, yes, Salem alone will get the permanent benefit of these hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Eighth: But think of the cultural and educational advantages for Salem by having one of the best of the one hundred and three high-class institutions in the United States.

Ninth: And think of the people drawn to Salem by the presence of Willamette University.

Tenth: Think of the increase of the valuation of your property by all these means.

Eleventh: Is $100,000 too much for Salem to invest to reap a harvest? Business men say Salem and Marion county ought to raise $100,000.

Twelfth: Every man and woman in Salem gets the benefit. Every one is needed to help raise the $100,000 in Salem and Marion county. Surely, in view of the circumstances, every one will be willing to do his share. Can we count on you? We feel we can. If you have already subscribed, we thank you. If not, we hope to have the chance to thank you. Please be ready to subscribe a substantial amount when the committee calls on you.

Most cordially yours,
THE CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE.
