WHITE SLAVERS ARE WATCHED CLOSELY

Railroad Employees Furnish Great Assistance to Government in Landing Bad Gang.

Berlin, June 11.—As a result of co-operation between German police and the officials of the railroads, the government today began laying its lines for merciless prosecution of a number of "white slavers." Already several cases have been concluded and a number of those who have plied the nefarious export trade in women and young girls today began serving limit sentences, some of which are as long as 45 years. Owing to ignorance and poverty, some of the provinces have been among the principal recruiting grounds for the slavers. The latter had strong organizations throughout the country, and it has only been with greatest difficulty that the government has succeeded in ferreting them out.

Scores of young girls, deceived by promises of marriage, big wages and forged letters purporting to come from relatives in America, have easily been induced to slip away with the recruiting agents, who were sometimes women, but more often men. Hundreds of cases of young girls disappearing have been reported to the police. Few of the victims ever have been heard from.

It was when matters reached such a pass that the government issued an edict that no girl unaccompanied by parents or relatives should be allowed to sail from any German port without a pass. The authorities also were instructed to investigate thoroughly when applications were made for such passes. The slavers circumvented the police and government by slipping across the frontier into Holland, Belgium or France with their victims.

As the next move, the government ordered that all railroad officials and employes co-operate with the police. Rewards and promotion were offered to any railroad official or employe who detected a "white slaver" taking girls out of the country. The aid of station employes and conductors especially was asked. As a result of this co-operation more slavers have been nabbed in the last few weeks than in as many months before. Between police and railroad employes, Germany today has been freed of slavers than for many years.

Despite the seeming openness of the fight against the slavers the government conducted its fight with unusual secrecy. Every possible means was taken not to put the slavers on their guard after they had discovered the way the government was watching sailing vessels. At last, however, the government is giving its campaign the widest publicity and today a government report was issued telling of the breaking up of two gangs. One was in Silesia near the Russian frontier and the other in Alsace Lorraine on the French border. In each instance it was a watchful railroad employe who put the government sleuths on the trails of the gang.

The Silesian gang was smuggling girls—some of them were from thirteen to sixteen years old—over the line into Austria. They were sent thence to Trieste and from there to Buenos Ayres, regarded as the world's greatest "buying" white slave market and where many of the girls were bought for points in the United States.

Girls Finely Treated.
The Alsace Lorraine gang got their victims across the line from Paris, Amsterdam, or Brussels, from where they were shipped to the same destination. In the majority of cases, it was learned through confessions of some of the convicted slavers who turned states evidence afterwards, the girls were finely treated and did not know for what purpose they were taken until they reached Buenos Ayres. They imagined they were being taken to America or South America to work in industrial establishments and were easily made to believe that labor and immigration laws made necessary the secrecy with which they were compelled to leave the country. The majority of the slavers were sentenced to terms of from three to five years.

The watchfulness of a railroad employe some days ago led to the uncovering of a plot to sell several young Cologne girls into white slavery. A number of the girls of a nearby village were reported missing. The suspicions of a conductor were aroused by the actions of a "banker" who was accompanied by a beautiful girl of 17 years. He communicated with the police who boarded the train at the next stop and followed the "banker" who went openly to a suburban house in which seven young girls, one of whom was thirteen and the oldest of whom was eighteen, were held by notorious slavers. The girl with the "banker" was found to be the daughter of a wealthy Cologne merchant. The following day a station employe at the zoological gardens in Berlin caused the arrest of a man who claimed to be the owner of a laundry. He had four girls with him. Two were fourteen, one was fifteen and the other was nineteen. He said he was taking them to work in his laundry. All the girls were drugged and the "laundry owner" was proven to be a notorious white slaver. Occasionally errors have been made, but as a whole there have been few such instances. An overzealous railroad employe at a Berlin station recently caused the arrest of a Russian guard who was in charge of a Russian princess, but when the government officials at Berlin explained, the Russian authorities at St. Petersburg accepted the explanation without question.

X-RAYS.
Thanks to the Oregonian, Jupiter Pluvie crawled into his hole, plugged up his sprinkler and behaved himself. Occasionally the big and only paper uses its mighty power to a good purpose.

We suggest to the state fair board that the date of holding the fair be changed to the latter part of June. That is when rain is most needed.

The Oregonian bunch is now engaged in picking out a poet laureate for England. Having eliminated nearly every one else, we would suggest that it name Dean Collins. He writes good sensible verse, catchy verse, and surely the Oregonian editors realize that as he writes for the Oregonian, that same verse, good anywhere, is much better from appearing in the Oregonian.

Portland is really "a garden of roses," as Mayor Rushlight said, and it may be added in spite of the Oregonian's recent statement to the contrary.

Edmond E. C. von Klein, who, in the Portland jail, is awaiting extradition from Chicago, was visited Monday by Miss Rena B. Morrow, recently acquitted of the charge of murdering her husband in Chicago. The lady embraced him rapturously and kissed him enthusiastically so the dispatches say. A visit from that kind of a female is not calculated to lighten Klein's burdens. The two birds are of similar feather. However, if the giddy old girl's picture in the Oregonian does her justice, Von Klein is getting his now, and will keep longing for those extradition papers, until he gets them, and with an ever-increasing longing.

DOG GREATLY ENJOYS SLIDE AT PLAYGROUND

Children Uproariously Amused by Actions of Playful Canine on New Apparatus.

"Joe," the dog owned by the Cherry City cafe, was the star attraction at the Salem playgrounds, at Willamette University yesterday. The new slide had just been installed, and, after "Joe" was initiated, he ran up the ladder time and again and slid downward. So eager was he to make the trip that he shoved boys out of the way. The incident was much enjoyed.

Many children appear daily on the playgrounds, and enjoy using the apparatus, although the formal opening is not scheduled until Saturday. The slide, teeters and swings are up this afternoon, and other apparatus available will be in place by Saturday. Parents are invited Saturday, and any suggestions will be welcomed.

Moore's place of business next Tuesday evening, to further discuss plans.

Railroad Courtesy.

As an express train was going through a station one of the passengers leaned too far out of the window, overbalanced and fell out. He fortunately landed on a sand heap, so that he did himself no great injury, but with torn clothes and not a few bruises, said to a porter who was standing by:
"What shall I do?"
"You're all right, mister," said the porter. "Your ticket allows you to stop off."
