NAVY IS SHORT OF MEN AND PLACES MUST BE FILLED

Attractive Cruises Arranged and Jack Tar Will Not Get Too Much Work and No Pay.

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.] Washington, June 21.—If you are a man, and are between the ages of 17 and 35 years and are from five feet two inches to six feet one inch and weigh in proportion, with a chest measurement of from 33 to 36 3/4 inches, dependent upon your age, height and weight, Secretary of the Navy Daniels has a job for you.

Secretary Daniels has some advanced views regarding the way the navy of the United States ought to be run, and he is especially "strong" for reforms that will attract and hold the best class of men and boys the country can provide for the navy.

Secretary Daniels, explaining his project today, declared he believes every young man should have a "working knowledge" of the navy.

The secretary's plan is virtually the creation of a volunteer citizen reserve. He would have conditions such that in case of necessity there would be thousands of young men as useful as they were willing to go behind the big guns and uphold the prestige of the United States navy.

Although Secretary Daniels is an avowed "man of peace," he believes in maintaining a high degree of preparedness, and it is his aim to educate the young men so that the navy can be placed on a war footing at very short notice.

At the present time, figures at the navy department show today, the navy is approximately 500 men short of the authorized enlistment number. Under the Daniels regime every effort will be made to fill those vacancies with enlisted men, as well as to qualify as many more as possible who are now in civilian life, for possible emergency work.

This is one of the many reasons for the attractive cruise which has been mapped out for the Atlantic fleet this year. The coming cruise will be in the Mediterranean where every port of moment will be touched and the sailors given ample opportunity to spend many hours on shore. Similar cruises are today being mapped out for each succeeding year, and while Secretary Daniels is at the head of the navy department there will be no fear, he declares, of Jack Tar having too much work and no pay.

Following the Mediterranean cruise, it is planned for the fleet to go through the Panama canal to Asiatic ports. This trip is only in embryo at the present time. It was said at the department today that announcement of the itinerary for this trip may be made within the next few months.

SUFFRAGETTES WILL GAIN MANY STATES, IS BELIEF

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.] Budapest, June 21.—New York state will grant women the vote in 1915. Massachusetts will do likewise about the same time—possibly before 1915, and other New England commonwealths will be quick to follow the example set by the Empire and Bay state. This was the claim made here today by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the great International Woman Suffrage Alliance which is holding its seventh annual convention here with 1000 delegates representing twenty-eight countries, in attendance. Mrs. Catt declared that the fight in America is about to be won, and that from now on women who are fighting to have a hand in making the laws by which they are governed will center their efforts on the Empire state. In explaining the campaign mapped out for the suffragists of America, Mrs. Catt described how success in New York state would have a wonderful moral effect on the New England states. She declared also that the South would be more ready "to fall into line" after New York is won.

THE BISHOP SCOTT GRAMMAR SCHOOL

Will Be Reopened in September on its New Site Near North Yamhill. It Is Announced.

Bishop Scott Grammar School for Boys will be reopened in September on the new site near Yamhill, formerly known as North Yamhill. The new home of the school consists of one hundred acres of rich land near the head of a little valley looking out on the valley of the North Yamhill. There are a number of substantial buildings on the property, and in addition to these the school board will erect a new building for school and dormitory purposes.

This school was founded by the late Bishop Morris in the year 1870 on the familiar location at 19th and Couch streets, Portland. Nine years ago it was found necessary to close the school for financial reasons, but since that time the lots have increased in value, and now bring in a good income on a ground rent basis.

The Yamhill county farm was bought three or four years ago. Springs on the place supply pure water in abundance. The school has its own electric light plant, modern plumbing is being installed, sanitation will receive strict attention, and adequate provision will be made for heating. Thus the most of the advantages of a city school will be provided, without the disadvantages of the city. The greater part of the food supplies will be produced on the farm, and the food will be fresh, wholesome and abundant.

The school will aim to give a thorough grammar school education at very moderate cost. It is to be a practical home school, under moral and religious influences, where every boy, whatever his means or his social position, will be on the same basis as every other.

The courses offered in the beginning will not take boys beyond the ninth or tenth grades in the public schools. In general, the course will conform to that of the best public schools in Oregon, and the grading will be on the same basis. However, with much individual attention, not so much stress will be laid on grading as in the public schools. There will also be a certain amount of manual training, and active employment in horticulture, gardening, care of stock and poultry raising.

The trustees have elected the Rev. Barr Gifford Lee, for the past eight years rector of St. Paul's church, Salem, Or., for the new rector and headmaster of the school. Only a limited number of boys will be taken the first year. The prospectus has just been issued and may be obtained by applying to the school at Yamhill, Or.

OREGON'S PART IN COAST DEVELOPMENT

San Diego Points Out the Vast Markets to be Opened Up for Oregon's Many Products.

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.] San Diego, Cal., June 21.—Whatever building construction is going on in any part of the Pacific coast or western half of the United States, wherever in this same part of the country fruit is under discussion or being traded in, Oregon, by reason of her vast lumber and apple interests, is under examination. Large as are her exportations of these two commodities, she has not yet begun to produce a modicum of the amount her great area can put forth had she the population she needs to care for her enormous undeveloped resources.

Oregon, from her position in the geography of the western states must face the task of supplying most of the lumber and much of the grain that will be needed in this great area during the next fifty years. These states have just started on their era of development. Other states are competing for the rich trade that is growing by leaps and bounds in this territory. The state of Oregon is in need of more development in order that she may do her full duty toward these states and reap her just share of the great business growing up now so fast that it astonishes statisticians.

Every state west of the Rocky mountains is feeling the throbs of new life, catching the sound of new industries, hearing enormous crops out from great areas of arable land now being brought under cultivation for the first time. Every land-hungry man in the eastern half of the United States and in Europe is looking to the western portion of the United States as to a new Canaan—a new promised land where with cheap acreage, favorable climate and ready to hand markets he may carve out for himself a home and a fortune by the "sweat of his face," and he is coming by the hundred thousand to plow these lands, to harness the streams, to fell the forests and to plant the vine and the fruit tree.

The part Oregon is to play in this great development is enormous. She must show her vast resources in a way that will attract attention from the greatest number at the least possible expenditure. A plan is being presented to her by the commissioners of the Panama-California exposition. Her commercial bodies are asked to unite in an exhibit of Oregon's resources at the San Diego exposition that shall be so complete that any one of the thousands of men and women who visit that exposition in search of information as to the most favorable locality in which to take up land may see at a glance the favorable conditions and grand opportunities that await the settler in the state of Oregon.

One of the foremost elements in Oregon, the lumber interests, have seen the light and are bending every energy to get Oregon's great lumber resources before the world. The lumber men are heading a movement that, if carried out, will give Oregon one of the most complete exhibits of lumber ever made at any exposition. The farmer and orchardist are equally interested, to say nothing of the industries possible in the state, a state with almost unlimited water power, with plenty of rain and flood water for irrigation and with plenty of available land for settlement. It is no exaggeration to say that, by seizing the opportunity presented by the San Diego exposition, where will be thousands upon thousands of men and women intent on examining the resources of every state in the west with the express purpose of making a selection of a future home, Oregon can double her population in ten years following the opening of the Panama canal. The San Diego exposition feels that it is fulfilling its highest purpose in making it possible for every state west of the 100th meridian to exhibit its resources in a complete and comprehensive manner.

CLEVELAND HAD HIS TROUBLES LONG AGO

Trusts and Combinations Blamed by Him for Preventing Passage of Satisfactory Bill.

SOMETHING ABOUT TARIFF FIGHT OF THAT PERIOD.

Democratic Senators Forgot Their Pledges and Aided in Passing Bill Grover Disliked.

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.] Washington, June 21.—The trusts and combinations—the communism of self—whose machinations have prevented us from reaching the success we deserved, should not be forgotten nor forgiven.

These are the words of Grover Cleveland. He was referring to the tariff lobbies which prevented the Democratic party from living up to its campaign promises of 1892.

President Wilson no doubt had in mind what the lobbyists did to the Wilson Democratic tariff bill in the senate in 1894 when he recently denounced the lobbies operating in Washington. A review of what happened to the last Democratic tariff bill as a result of the work of the lobbies while the measure was in the senate, is especially interesting at this time when special privilege is trying to perform the same old trick of robbing the consumers of the fruits of their victory at the polls.

On December 19, 1893, Chairman Wilson of the Democratic ways and means committee reported his tariff revision downward bill to the house of representatives. It was a fulfillment in nearly every particular of the promises made by the Democrats in the campaign of 1892, which brought about their election. Although denounced by the more partisan Republicans as a free trade measure it was in reality but a conservative step in the direction of freer trade, and was well received by the Democratic party throughout the country. It made rather moderate reductions in the duties on woolen goods, cotton, linens, silks, pig-iron, steel billets, steel rails, china, glassware and earthenware. It removed entirely the taxes on wool, coal, iron ore, lumber, and on sugar both raw and refined.

The bill passed the house February 1, 1894, by a vote of 182 to 106, sixty-one members not voting. But in the senate, special privilege attacked the bill ferociously, powerful lobbies being conducted day and night. Certain Democratic senators, foremost among them Gorman of Maryland and Brien of Ohio, forgot the solemn pledges of the Democratic convention of 1892 and rendered most efficient services to the protected interests.

The work of the lobbies had their effect. The special interest servers in the senate obtained one amendment after another, each one restoring a part of the remitted duties. In all, the senate made 634 changes in the house measure, destroying entirely its original character. The people were cheated out of their victory at the polls. Special privilege had stepped in and, via the lobby route had defeated the interests of the people. The bill was passed but President Cleveland refused to sign it, allowing it to become a law without his signature.

President Grover Cleveland deserves credit for having endeavored in every good faith to see that the pre-election promises should be carried out. His whole soul was in the fight. His defeat at the hands of the lobbies, carried the bitterest humiliation and disappointment. He was a changed man all the remaining years of his life. In a letter to Mr. Catchings, a Mississippi congressman, he used the quotation alluded to at the beginning of this article. The reader should glance back at this quotation, at this point, and re-read it. Then he should realize that President Wilson, in the courageous fight he is now making against the lobbies in Washington, is simply trying to prevent special privilege from again depriving the American people of a well-earned victory.
