

CLEAN UP AND PAINT UP

A BRILLIANT CAMPAIGN WITH GRATIFYING RESULTS

One month ago, the opening of the "Clean Up and Paint Up" campaign was announced. Already the work of the campaign has gone far enough forward to demonstrate some facts and lessons that deserve immediate emphasis.

First, and because "nothing succeeds like success," the most gratifying fact is that the movement already is a success in the public acceptance of the "Paint Up" portion of the now nationally established slogan "Clean Up and Paint Up." The printing given these five words, in editorial comments and in bold headlines in the newspapers, have already given the trade a uniquely valuable publicity worth infinitely more—if it could have been bought for any price—than the effort, and money, that have been devoted to the work thus far. An incidental result, the immense value of which already has been recognized by some discerning ones, is the new attitude of the public, expressed through various officials and others, toward the American paint trade—an attitude that marks a generous reversal of form by some, and a general awakening realization of the importance and the advanced spirit of the one industry that is solely devoted to the conservation, protection and beautification of homes and property.

In any town or city where a "Clean Up and Paint Up" campaign is conducted, under whatever name or auspices, two objects are to be sought by paint men. First, to demonstrate the paint trade's eager acceptance of its full share of civic duty—that being the larger share because in such public service the trade would reap the greatest business benefit; and second, to demonstrate the ability thus to reap the due rewards of such frank, practical and self-respecting service. Where the foundation has been laid by years of such public spirit as every good citizen should display—especially the dealer whose living depends upon his community—then the way is easy for any such dealer to take the initiative in a "Clean Up and Paint Up" campaign is conducted,
