COLUMBIA SOUTHERN PROJECT NOT SETTLED

Bill Makes Provisions Concerning Contracts That May Make It Unconstitutional.

The Columbia Southern is not yet out of the legal forest, and may still further be delayed. In the special concurring opinion of Justices Burnett and Ramsey, with the opinion written in the case by Justice McNary, it is pointed out that the manner of expending the money and disposing of the grant as provided in the bill may be unconstitutional, in that it provides for settlers making new contracts and for refunding any payments they have made to the private company that first began the work, if they do not care to make new contracts. Attorney McMahon is examining into the matter, and it is quite probable that further proceedings will be had before the matter is finally decided. This phase of the case was not touched in the recent proceedings, for the reason that it was not brought up in the pleadings.

HE HAS A REMEDY FOR THE JACK RABBIT PEST

Hillsdale Man Offers to Put the Kibosh on the Jacks, Exterminating the Whole Tribe.

Amos Kenworthy, of Hillsdale, Ore., under date of July 5, writes Secretary Olett that he has a remedy for the jack rabbit pest that, he understands, is overrunning Eastern Oregon. He gives no intimation of its character, but says it is the genuine kibosh, warranted to send the long-eared jacks in to the remote elsewhere with celerity and certainty. He says he is willing to demonstrate the efficacy of his remedy, furnishing his own jacks, as well as the remedy, without expense to the state. When The Capital Journal scribe saw the secretary this morning, that mandamus, enjoined and restrained official was smiling like a May morning, a June bride or any other old or young thing that has reason to smile and look pleasant. "It is such a relief from referendum petitions and all of that kind of stuff, and gives one hope that sometime, somewhere there will be complete extermination of some of the pests." That was what the secretary intimated, and that was why he smiled.
