MELANCHOLY WOMEN

Should Profit by Mrs. Hurley's Experience—Her Own Story Here Told.

Eldon, Mo.—"I was troubled with displacement, organic inflammation, female weakness. For two years I could not stand my feet long at a time. I walked two miles without cutting and drawing pains down my side which increased once a month. I have been at the time purple in the face and would walk the floor. I did not lie down or sit still sometimes a day and a night at a time. I was voids, had very little appetite, no regularity, melancholy, and often faint, though I had not a friend in the world."

"After I had tried most every male remedy first, without success, my mother-in-law advised me to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and gained in strength every day. I have now no trouble any way and highly praise your medicine. It advertised itself."—Mrs. L. HURLEY, Eldon, Missouri.

Patients Speak for Themselves

Shellburn, Ore., April 11

Dr. J. C. Yuen, Salem, Ore.:

Dear Sir: I wish to offer you a testimonial in regard to your medicine.

I had the advice of some of the best physicians, and they told me that I had appendicitis, and would have to be operated on before I could get well. Not wishing to be operated upon, I consulted Dr. J. C. Yuen, and after about three months' treatment, I am again feeling strong and healthy.

I wish to do all in my power to calculate the knowledge of your wonderful medicine. Respectfully,

J. L. OGLESBEE

Shellburn, Ore.

Salem, July 5, 1913

I have been troubled with kidney trouble and a tumor for some time, and after three weeks' treatment with Dr. J. C. Yuen I can say I am perfectly cured, and since then have gained 15 pounds, and would recommend your treatment to all sufferers.

Gossip From Washington

SENATOR ROBERT L. OWEN, the part Cherokee statesman from Oklahoma, has started hunting for corporation scalps again. In a recent resolution he asked that the secretary of commerce be directed to investigate whether the price of oil in Oklahoma is being artificially fixed, and if so by whom.

Another amendment to the constitution for a single six year presidential term was recently proposed by Representative William Waller Rucker of Missouri. This makes the sixteenth single term proposal that is pending in the house. The Rucker amendment proposes that after March 5, 1921, or as soon thereafter as the amendment is proclaimed, any person who has discharged the office of president for more than one year shall not be eligible for re-election. The same term would apply to the vice president.

President Wilson recently set the seal of official approval on white duck trousers for golfers by appearing in a pair of them on the Chevy Chase links.

Howard Sutherland, congressman at large from West Virginia, used to be the editor of a weekly paper in his native state of Missouri. But that was years before he decided to go east and grow up with the country.

Representative Philip Pitt Campbell of Kansas, who used to be called the "octopus hunter" during his first term in the house before that sport became so widely popular, wants to decrease the number of congressmen. Recently he introduced a bill to reduce the number of members of the house after March 3, 1917, to 233 members in place of the present membership of 435.

Dr. Charles D. Walcott, secretary of the Smithsonian institution, is said to know more about fossils than any man now living. Just at present he is interested in the plans for the Langley aerodynamic laboratory, under whose auspices government experiments in aviation will be conducted.

Senator Thomas Benton Catron, who shares with Senator Fall the honor of being the first to wear the toga from New Mexico, is a Confederate veteran. He was born in Lexington, Mo., more than seventy years ago and was a close friend and law partner of Stephen B. Elkins of West Virginia long before that state conferred senatorial honors on the latter.

Representative Borland of Missouri on returning to the capital from a recent visit to his home in Kansas City surprised his wife by bringing with him two little girls, aged respectively four and six years. The children were orphans and had no one to care for them, so the congressman in his kindness of heart had agreed to find a home for them among his Washington friends. Before arrangements could be made, however, Mrs. Borland became so attached to the tots that she refused to give them up. Consequently, while not yet formally adopted, the children probably will continue to be members of the Borland household. Besides Mrs. Borland and the congressman, they have found a strong ally in the little Borland boy, who finds them capital playmates.

Today's Short Story

A Message In Blood

THE detective has many curious riddles to solve. One of the most remarkable that ever came up for my solution was connected with the case of a man named Joel Klapper. He lived alone and was murdered one night during a blizzard. The murderer left him for dead, but he did not die for some time after the blow was struck. Klapper was used to reading at night in bed before going to sleep and kept on a stand beside his bed a lamp, matches and some books. When the body was discovered in the morning the lamp was burning, though the oil was nearly exhausted. People who had passed the house between 11 and 12 reported that they had seen no light, but a man who had passed just before dawn on his way to a train declared that he had noticed a light in Klapper's room.

I framed several theories, more or less influenced by this circumstance. Klapper was surely in bed with the light out when the murder was committed. How then could it have been burning in the morning unless he had lived long enough after the blow to light it? I had a feeling that the lamp had been lighted by the victim with a purpose after he had been struck.

I looked for a communication on paper, but found none. I was absent turning over the leaves of one of the books on the table when I came to a red stamp. It covered the word "ten." At once occurred to me that Klapper had communicated something concerning the murder by words smuggled by his own blood, and I looked for more, which I found. I expected that they would be in the order of a message, but they did not. Connectedly placed they read:

Ten, crisp man, on, beard, ma. Called. National, five, bills, took dollar, hair, forehead, now, because, scar, red and stabbed, I of all, ten.

The moment I had placed these words on paper in the above order I knew from the words, scar, beard and half that it contained a description of the murderer. I also inferred from the words, crisp, five, bill, ten and national that it also contained a description of a bank bill or bills that had been taken. My efforts in deciphering the message resulted as follows:

Man (with) red hair and beard, scar on forehead, stabbed me because I called. (He) took ten new crisp five dollar bills, all of the Tenth National.

Since the bank might have been the Fifth or the Tenth National, I went to both and learned at the Tenth that it had paid out some new five dollar bills the day before, and Mr. Klapper's account showed he had been paid $50 the same day.

I at once advertised to give a premium to any one who could furnish me with one of these bills. A woman, the cashier of a third rate restaurant, answered the advertisement, bringing one of the bills. The woman told me that the man who gave it to her was so rough looking that she feared it was counterfeit and took it to her employer before changing it. In this way the matter was impressed on her mind. She said she could identify the man.

The rest was comparatively easy. I laid the matter before the inspector and asked if he had any record of a criminal with red hair and beard and a scar on his forehead. After examination he found that the description fitted Jim Rourke, alias Patsy Burns, alias Calky Jack and a number of other aliases, who had recently been released from the penitentiary and seen in town. The man was watched for, arrested and identified by the restaurant cashier. Two of the bills were found on his person.

He was tried and convicted. After his conviction he gave an account of the robbery and murder that tallied with my theory.

The Serenade

"WHAT sounds so sweet awake me? What fills me with delight? Oh, mother, look! Who sings thus so sweetly through the night?"

"I hear not child, I see not; Oh, sleep thou softly on! What fills me with delight? Oh, mother, look! Who sings thus so sweetly through the night?"

"It is not earthy music! That fills me with delight! I hear the angels call me, Oh, mother, dear, good night!"

—Johanna Lucretia Thibault.

First Aid to the Cook

Pickle Vinegar.—Vinegar in which homemade cucumber pickles have been preserved should not be thrown away, as it is excellent for using in salad dressing. The flavor is delicious and cannot be gained in any other way.

Angel Custard.—Beat one quart of milk and when scalding hot pour it slowly over the beaten whites of four eggs, sweeten with two scant tablespoonfuls of sugar, add a little salt and flavoring, then turn into cups, set them in a pan of hot water and bake until firm.

Curdled Custard.—When custard curdles from being cooked over too intense heat try beating it with an egg beater in a cold bowl. If this fails to make it fine add a level tablespoonful of cornstarch moistened in cold water to the curdled mixture and heat in the double boiler long enough to cook the cornstarch. Then strain the custard.

Mock Angel Cake.—Mix and sift well one cupful of fine granulated sugar, one and one-third cupfuls of flour and three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Over this mixture pour slowly a cupful of scalding hot milk and stir slowly; fold in the well beaten whites of two eggs with one teaspoonful of vanilla. Bake in ungreased pan for about forty-five minutes, having a moderate oven.

Sponge Pudding.—One-third cupful of flour stirred smooth with a little water; add this to two cupfuls of hot milk and cook a few minutes. When cool stir in one-half teaspoonful of melted butter, one-fourth cupful of sugar and the yolks of three eggs. After beating well fold in the whites of three eggs and bake in a pan of hot water until set. Serve with cream, either plain or whipped.

Suggestions For a Porch Dining Room

A SUMMER dining room fitted with willow furniture is illustrated here. A sideboard, buffet, table, serving cabinet, window box and chairs of willows are shown. A novel and attractive combination is the use of the headed doors with their lozenge shaped panes. Curtains, portieres and table cover are all of the same figured summer fabric. For the porch dining room, which is a fad of the season, furnishing of this kind is exceedingly appropriate.

GYRATIONS OF FASHION.

If you don't know how to make the little satin roses which are seen everywhere on frocks for formal and informal wear, on negligees, on boudoir caps and on lingerie, try covering tiny wooden button molds with bits of different colored satin and tucking these gay little circles in the folds of lace and lingerie to give the needed note of color.

Cretonne motor parasols are shown in the shops. They are simply made, with scalloped or slightly ruffled edge. They are mounted on natural wood handles and, like all motor parasols, are so made that the parasol may be adjusted at any desired angle to the handle. They will be carried with linen or pongee or cretonne suits or motor coats.

Plain linen waists are apparently to be much worn with coat suits for warm weather. One, of heavy linen, is made with turnback collar and cuffs which show a simple embroidered design—an eyelet flanked by two leaves—worked at intervals of about an inch in heavy embroidery cotton. The collar and cuffs are edged with narrow Irish picot lace edge. A small pocket is applied to the left front. It, like the collar and cuffs, is embroidered and edged with picot.

THE SUMMER GUEST.

There is the guest who brings her pet dog with her and expects to have chops especially broiled for it, a cushion particularly prepared for its bed and general homage paid to it from the beginning to the end of its stay.

There is the guest who forgets everything. She cannot find her baggage check to begin with, and when her trunk finally arrives she announces that she has forgotten to bring a dressing gown, a toothbrush, the belt that goes with her linen suit and the little gift she had planned to give her hostess, and the hostess, long suffering mortal, is asked to supply all the wants but the last.

There is the man who talks about his business from the time he enters until the time he passes out of your house, and there is the woman who talks about Bobbie and Katherine until you are sure that you would detest such paragons of everything wonderful as her children must be.

The ideal guest should indulge in none of the follies practiced by the beautiful princess or any of her modern fellows, and if she does not have to spend all her time remembering the things she should avoid she will enjoy her visit and her hostess will enjoy it too.

How She Helped.

"While mother is busy," said dear little Nan.

"I'm going to help her all that I can."

"Huh!" laughed her brother. "What can you do?"

"I can tend dress and run errands too. But you are a girl and, besides, so small you won't be able to help at all."

Nan's eyes were bright with her happy plan.

"Oh, I can help—I know that I can! If I don't tease, but keep still as a mouse and go on tiptoe all over the house and smile just as hard as ever I can. That will help mother," said little Nan.

WHAT FUNNY THINGS WE HEAR

A DUTCHMAN was relating his marvelous escape from drowning when thirteen of his companions were lost by the upsetting of a boat, and he alone was saved.

"And how did you escape this fate?" asked one of his hearers.

"I did not go in to pote," was the Dutchman's placid answer.

Willie-Gee; I wonder why pa never leaves a dime in his old pants when ma turns them over to me?

Jimerack—I caught our beaman in the meanest trick you could imagine.

Randall—Short weight you?

Jimerack—Worse than that—he was moving the ice-box to the sunny side of the porch so the ice wouldn't last half a day.

Not Exactly.

A young girl was taking a trip on one of the great lakes in a small steamer.

The lake was quite rough, and many were seasick. The girl sat in the bow and was unusually quiet for her, so her father thought. He watched her a few moments in silence, then asked:

"Are you feeling sick, Marion?"

"Well, not exactly sick, but I should hate to yawn," she replied.

More Likely to Come His Way.

Bix—Have you seen the new nickel yet?

Dix—No, but you can just bet I won't miss seeing it so long as I did that new gold piece of a few years ago.

It has been shown that climate has nothing to do with the length of human life, the blubbered Eskimo living on the average quite as long as the rice fed Hindu or the epicure whose diet is of the "hot bird and cold bottle" variety.

GARNISHING WARM WEATHER DISHES.

Summer garnishes should always be fresh, crisp and dainty. Watercress, fresh parsley, lettuce heart leaves, capers and small radishes, crisp and cold, all form appropriate and appetizing garnishes for meat, fish and vegetable dishes.

Another way of garnishing is by combining two dishes. For instance, if hashed brown potatoes are to be served with a hash of lamb and peppers, place the meat hash in the center of the dish and arrange the potatoes neatly about it. Creamed fish can be piled in the center of the platter, creamy mashed potatoes can be arranged about it, and the whole can be browned in the oven—with a few buttered breadcrumbs sprinkled over the fish—for ten or fifteen minutes. Bacon can be used as a garnish to liver or poached or fried eggs. It should be broiled crisp and dry and should be neatly put on the serving dish. Nothing is more unsightly than greasy, limp, half cooked bacon piled hot or miss on a dish.

Game of Soldiers.

A blackboard game not generally known is called "soldiers." Two boys each draw a row of ten o's about a quarter of an inch in size and half an inch apart; the two rows must be separated by a distance of twelve or fifteen inches. Each boy takes a piece of chalk and then pretends that he is the commander of one row of soldiers. He then fires a shot from one of his soldiers at the opposite row, drawing his chalk rapidly across the blackboard from one row to the other to do this. The boys shoot in turn, and every time a shot (chalk mark) crosses near the center of one of the o's that soldier is counted as killed, and he cannot fire again. The game ends when all the soldiers of one side have been shot—that is, crossed off by the chalk marks. The lines must be drawn across very rapidly if the game is played fairly.
