THE OPEN FORUM

The Capital Journal invites public discussion in this department—Let both sides of all matters be fully brought out—it is not the purpose of this newspaper to do the thinking for its readers.

BY WHAT AUTHORITY?

Being deeply interested withers in the welfare of our city, and good name of its officials, have before signed a petition calling for investigation, in order to have it ascertained if there can be any fire where so much smoke exists; to her vindicate the action of said andman Stolz, or, if otherwise, the truth may be brought to light. Being desirous with others to be inured by what authority and orders a chairman of the street committee improve Mission street and the cost to the city, I would attention to Section 53 of the city order, referring to repairs of street, which reads as follows:

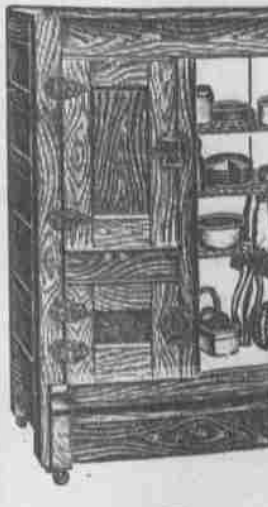

"The council is authorized to repair street or part thereof whenever it is expedient, and to declare by ordinance before doing the same, whether the cost thereof in whole or in part shall be assessed upon the adjacent property or be paid out of the general fund."

"The citizens of San Diego in mass meeting assembled, under the auspices of the Socialist party, congratulate you on your firm stand against mob law and a prostituted press that incites to riot and bloodshed under the guise of patriotism. We urge you to maintain your fearless stand for free speech and liberties of the people."

interest in the company, which amounts to about 10,000, in addition to a 29 per cent interest in the syndicate which which purchased control of the company. This 29 per cent represents, he says, $40,000. The entire $50,000 is where it can be held as security to safeguard the company, Green asserts.

Charges Are Repeated.

San Francisco, July 21.—Mrs. Edmond L. Green, who is with friends here today, reiterated her charges that a woman had caused her husband to leave his home. She was informed that Green was in Portland, and was apparently surprised that he had been located.

Mrs. Green asserted that several times in the past 11 years the woman she charged was with Green had caused a separation.

At the office of the Pacific Casualty company, Carl Brown, vice-president, also reiterated a charge that Green is short in his accounts.

A BRILLIANT MATE.

It is said that Dr. Hughes, of Los Angeles, Cal., who lectures at the Methodist church this evening at 8 p. m., is a brilliant mate for his distinguished brother, Bishop E. H. Hughes. Salem should greet Dr. Hughes with a packed house. The lecture will be illustrated, and enlivened with wit and humor. Admission 25c.

FINDS SOME FINE ROAD ON LONG TRIP

T. G. Bligh and son, Frank, of the Bligh theatre, have returned from an extended auto trip to Seattle and other points. According to the two tourists, miles upon miles of paved country roads were traveled over in the vicinity of Centralia, Olympia, Seattle and other cities in Washington.

While in Seattle, Messrs. Bligh attended the polio celebration. They declare that the event was a monster success and that there were more people to the square yard than could be counted readily by one person. They also took in several intermediate towns en route to Seattle and Mr. Bligh, Sr., states that each and every place is connected together with streets—not roads—but real concrete streets over a hundred miles in length. "If some one will start a subscription, I'll donate $25 right now toward paying for a paved street from Salem to Portland," stated Mr. Bligh this morning. "We need it and believe me we need it bad."

CITY NEWS.

Alleging that he was actually driven from his home after but three weeks of married bliss, J. B. Moreno today filed a complaint for divorce against Mary Moreno. The plaintiff alleges in his complaint that after he married the defendant he was called upon to support a large number of children born to the latter by a former husband, and that when he remonstrated on the grounds the children were old enough to care for themselves, his wife ordered him out of the home.

The mandate in the case of N. Day and C. H. Wheeler vs. the City of Salem et al., wherein the plaintiff was seeking a decree in Judge Galloway's court declaring the asylum and the penitentiary to be outside of the city limits, was returned today by Clerk of the Supreme Court Moreland to the lower tribunal. Judge Galloway heard the case and decided in favor of the plaintiffs. The supreme court reversed the judgment and set aside the order. Therefore the asylum and the penitentiary, including several hundred feet each of the institutions are in the city limits of Salem. The litigation was instituted over a controversy concerning the pavement on Asylum avenue.

"Jimmie" O'Gary, of Tacoma, is in town and he states he will remain here to boost the next census. Mr. O'Gary is a brother of Patrick O'Gary, a well-known Salemite, and he is just as Irish, if not a little more so, than the local man. The newly-acquired citizen says he will make his home in this city, but it is strongly hinted that he has come to Salem for the purpose of assisting Pat in locating the person who poisoned the latter's pet tabby. "Brandy," as the cat was named, shuffled off last night as the result of taking an overdose of some kind of poison.

Chief of Police Shedeck today was notified that two horses had been driven into the city with their hind legs badly lacerated as the result of interfering. Investigation was made, but the animals could not be located. It is said the team was driven from Tillamook and that their hind legs were bleeding and swollen from bruises caused by the shoes striking them.

While the crowd was emerging from the ball park yesterday, some poor excuse for a sport, threw an egg at the McMinville umpire and missing him, struck an unoffending spectator on the side of the head. The party throwing the egg was in a passing auto and his identity could not be ascertained at the time. Several friends of the victim of the outrageous assault were rightly up in arms over the disgraceful affair and it would not have been funny for the guilty one had they got hold of him at the time.

The big Robertson gasoline fire truck which the city recently purchased, arrived in the city yesterday evening, and is now standing in a box car on the Oregon Electric siding at the intersection of Front and Center streets. The car in which it was shipped is a monster, but the auto truck is crowded for room, nevertheless. The new machine is a gasoline pumper, and it will be removed from the car and given a try-out this week.

Clarence, the 7-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Wilson, had the misfortune to break his right wrist yesterday by falling out of a cherry tree. The little boy was picking cherries from a ladder, and, losing his foothold, fell several feet to the ground. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are well-known in Salem, and they have the sincere sympathy of all.

C. H. Mattox, the man who held up and compelled Miss Josephine Schar to pay him money for a quantity of loec-killer he was peddling in Howell Prairie last Saturday, will face a charge of highway robbery while armed with a deadly weapon, when he is arraigned before Justice Webster in the morning. Miss Schar states that Mattox did not only threaten to kill her, but actually made her give him money for the preparation he was peddling.

Self-Consciousness

By Mrs. Frank Learned.

A serious barrier to success or popularity in social life is self-consciousness. Morbid anxiety as to what others are thinking, nervous fears as to one's appearance, should be overcome. Freedom from thought of self, which is usually so perfectly charming in the natural manner of a child, may be a possession through life, if we could cease to think how we are looking and what is the opinion of others about us.

The probability is that we are not being regarded always by others as very absorbing objects. Egotism and self-love are at the root of all self-consciousness. To be self-centered is very narrow. There is little hope of fine culture for a person who is self-absorbed. If one is more anxious to give pleasure than to get it, if thoughts are directed more toward others than toward self, there is a possibility of becoming agreeable and companionable. Diffidence, morbid shyness, awkward mannerisms are really the result of the constant thought of self.

By contributing to the pleasure of others, wherever we may be, we may extract much sweetness for ourselves in the passing moments. It may be by talking to some one who seems shy and neglected and needs to be relieved of the baleful effect of self-consciousness, or it may be by listening with attention to some one who wants to talk.

But here is another point. No one should insist on monopolizing the conversation. That is a very wearisome form of intense egotism.

There is another form of self-consciousness which afflicts those who are so independent in their individuality as to be in danger of rudeness; those who are too vehement in voice and gesture, brusque and abrupt in manner. They forget that the world is never convinced that any one is superior who assumes a loud, aggressive, uncivil manner. Willful self-consciousness of that sort is more to be pitied than diffident, anxious shyness, and is sure to make a more unfavorable impression.

Consciousness of one's dress is bad form. Not only the vanity which thinks of display or ostentation should be avoided, but the carelessness which disregards the little niceties of toilet and then causes a guilty self-consciousness which dreads detection.

A woman of refinement is exquisitely neat in her personal appearance. She guards against the least untidiness in dress. She cannot be too fastidious about her daily bath, the care of her hair, teeth and finger nails. Each detail of neatness is attended to scrupulously every day. Neglect of these things is a fault not to be condoned.

A habit to be cultivated is to be carefully and neatly dressed and to think no more about it after leaving one's room. This will give freedom from fussy self-consciousness. For instance, it is bad manners to go out in the street before putting on one's gloves or to adjust a veil in a public conveyance, or to give nervous pats and touches to hair, or to give heed to the many small details which should be attended to in the privacy of one's room and are not allowable elsewhere.

It takes a lazy man to watch a game of checkers all day.

THREE FOURTHS.

By Lillian Lanferty.

Before the morning sun had dawned, our daddies used to rise, And town filled up with country folk with wonder in their eyes; In faded uniforms the bands, by old drum majors led, Marching shuffling by, afire with love for country and her dead.

The dustclouds swirled, the sun blazed down, a torture were the stiff-starched clothes. The ladies formed a human flag, and all the voices brave arose, In tune or out—but fervently—they gave, "My Country, 'Tis of Thee,"

"Star-Spangled Banner" made them thrill — "Marching Through Georgia" held them still— They worked back in the days of yore, When daddy honored July 4.

The big alarm clock whizzed at dawn when you and I were boys, We started out to celebrate with glee and zest and noise; It didn't matter what it meant—that Independence junk

Was simply cause for crackers big—for sizzlers and for punk. Torpedoes on the curbstone then, and "giants" in the street, Great rockets whizzing through the air, and "mines" beneath our feet; Racket and bang from morn till night—we loved the noise—the "sis-sy's" fright— Poor Johnny Jones had lost an eye, and Lucy Smith was like to die; The lucky chaps lived one year more Until another July 4.

Today we have a Noiseless Fourth—it comes in quiet state, We don't burn off our fingers now, or tempt a cripple's fate; The great crowds flock to park and shore—and Freedom means "Be Free"; While Nature's boys sane attribute pay to Life and Liberty.

We don't turn din and bedlam loose beneath midsummer's sky, And change "Pursuit of Happiness" into a chance to die. Peace rules the day and flowers at night when cities mark the sky with light.
