GAME IS FORFEITED TO McMINNVILLE TEAM

Refusal of Salem Senators to Play Further, Following Umpire White's Break, Responsible.

SEVERAL COSTLY RULINGS MADE BY WHITE DURING GAME

Umpire Is Badly Scared, But Is Protected Until He Reaches an Automobile and Gets Down Town.

Because the Salem Senators refused to stand for Umpire White's raw decision in the ninth inning of yesterday's ball game, after the score had been tied, White declared the game forfeited to McMinnville, 9 to 0, and called off all bets. White was brought here to umpire the game with Alex. Cheyne, and he favored the McMinnville players to a remarkable extent. The opinion prevails that he was working to steal the game and the climax came when he called Courtney safe at home plate, when practically everyone saw Jones tag the runner. The decision was so raw that the Senators refused to play after White declined to make it right. White was umpiring behind the catcher and Cheyne was on bases at the time.

White Badly Scared.
Following the decision, White was surrounded by players and others and there was much loud talk. For a time it was feared there would be a fight, but the discussion ceased without bloodshed. White was paler than his name and was plainly scared. He evidently expected that he would have something handed to him.

Pitcher Baker, armed with a bat, finally took the umpire up in front of the grandstand and protected him while he announced that the game was forfeited to McMinnville and all bets were off. White made his escape in an automobile and kept under cover until his train pulled out.

The extremely hot weather proved the undoing of many of the players and they were about all in, following the contest.

How Scores Were Made.
McMinnville got two scores in the first inning. Bogard walked. Cornell and Pembroke were fielded out, Bogard reaching third on the putouts. Drowitt singled and brought Bogard home. Nelson singled and got second on Cooper's error and Drowitt scored. Courtney flew out to Briggs.

Another score came in the second when Humphries overthrew first and Franklin got second when the ball was blocked. Drowitt had been fielded out. Bishop was nipped at first. Bogard reached first on Parvis' error and Franklin scored.

Three hits in the eighth brought two more scores. In the ninth the score was tied after the Senators made three errors and two singles were allowed. Then came the row which broke up the game.

Salem's Scoring Record.

Baker scored for Salem in the third when he singled, advanced on an error and scored on another. In the sixth Maxon got a fielder's choice and Nelson was out. Jones scored him with a two-bagger. Five scores were made in the seventh and Franklin was replaced in the next inning as pitcher by Drowitt. Parvis was the first man up and got a two-bagger. He reached third on a passed ball. Coleman struck out. McRae got to first on Bishop's error and Parvis scored. Nelson was fielded out. Ray Baker went in as pinch hitter and walked. Jones got to first on the pitcher's overthrow. McRae scored and Baker reached third. Briggs singled and brought home Baker. Jones scored when the catcher fumbled the ball. Briggs scored on a wild pitch. Humphries struck out. The score:

Whitehead, of Norfolk, Va., one of the former southern double champions, and the Canadians, G. W. Grier and H. M. Suckling.

According to the statement of Frank Redpath, of the Tacoma Tigers, it is more than probable that charges will be filed against Umpire Harry Ostidiek because of his showing during the series which has just closed. Statements have been received to the effect that Ostidiek had openly said that he would "get" McGinty before the series was over and that he would do his best to put the "Iron Man" out of the baseball business. C. C. Fancett, of the Puget Sound Flouring Mill Company, told Redpath that he had heard Ostidiek make these threats and gave the names of witnesses to substantiate this statement. If affidavits can be obtained they will be forwarded to President Fieder A. Jones.

COOLING THOUGHT.

It cools one's brow to think of Johnny Evers, gaunt and grim.
Who has no Joseph Tinker there to make it hot for him.

MISFITS.

Full many a yokel with a mighty frame
Lives all his days upon a dinky farm.
When on a ball field he could garner fame
And win a fortune with his heaving arm.

Full many a pitcher, though his arm is dead,
Hangs on for years and draws his princely pay.

Although he should be on the farm instead—
His proper walk in life is pitching hay.

Full many a giant feels the lofty pine
And with his ax he makes the wild-wood ring.

Nor knows that as a fighter he could shine
And make a fortune with a right-hand swing.

Full many a fighter treads the boxing ring
Without what vulgar persons call the goods.

And though he lives by hook and jab and swing
He should be swinging axes in the woods.

It would be interesting, not to say absorbing, to study the effect if some one were to offer Dan Morgan $100 to keep his muck closed.

We have heard of circulating libraries, but Jim Sheekard is one of our best little circulating ball players.

John McGraw is an unreasonable fellow. He kicked because a kindly gent named Lynch has handed him a five-day vacation.

Mr. Sheekard hardly pauses long enough to say hello to his new manager before passing on to the next team.

If you were to ask a sporting editor he would inform you without hesitation that the Fourth of July is the longest day in the year.

We fail to understand how Hugh Jennings has the heart to release a youth with a name like Poploski.

This is one of those rare intervals during which Doc Roller and Charles Cutler are not matched for an alleged battle on the mat.

Nevertheless, we wait with fear and trembling for the news that Sam Langford and Joe Jeannette are about to perpetuate another conflict.

One scarce can blame Gunboat Smith and Jim Flynn if they cannot refrain from laughing when they read that they are matched for the world's heavyweight championship.

It is rumored that the Yanks are dissatisfied with Frank Chance. If Frank Chance is not dissatisfied with the Yanks he ought to be.

Mr. Chance is a wonderful guy if he can reflect upon the Chase deal without delivering unto himself a swift kick.

We think just as little of Mr. Ritchie's pugilistic ability as we ever did, but we have learned that he is one game guy. And, as Henry James might say, yagottahandit to a game guy.

Batte, Mont., gains a niche in the Hall of Fame as one of the few places wherein George Knackout Brown can win a fight.

Artie Hofman has been sold to Nashville, leading one to suspect that Fred Clarke has a fearful grudge against him.

FABLE.

Once upon a time there was a college ball player on whom Connie Mack did not have a mortgage.

Having picked McLoughlin to win that tennis affair, we shall now pick Cincinnati to win the world's series.

There is nothing like being consistent.

If we read aright from Benton Harbor, Doc Roller and Charlie Cutler are out.

The Markets

The hot wave has made the public mind turn lovingly toward the green-robed watermelon, and the market was cleaned out by the middle of the afternoon. This sent prices up temporarily, but several carloads on the way will put them back to their regular level. The egg market is firm, and prices are crawling up regularly. Wheat, hops and standard crops are at a standstill in price, the weather preventing any hustling by either buyers or sellers.

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.]
Seattle, Wash., July 21.—Francis L. Thayer, aged 47, a parachute jumper, was drowned late Saturday in a descent from an aeroplane the feat being part of the Pyrlatch sporting program. At a height of 600 feet Thayer dropped from the aeroplane with the parachute. At a height of 500 feet he lost his hold and fell into the bay.
John Bryant, the aviator, signaled Thayer to drop at a height of 750 feet. A few seconds later Thayer began to descend. The parachute opened wide and the crowd in the boats and ashore expected a perfect exhibition. Then Thayer was seen to fall.
