GIRL WITNESS IN BIXBY CASE GONE

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE]

Los Angeles, Cal., July 24.—Cleo Helen Barker, witness against George H. Bixby, the Long Beach multi-millionaire, who is charged with contributing to her delinquency has dropped from sight.

Miss Barker was paroled by the juvenile court into the custody of her parents, and taken to a ranch near Claremont.

Probation Officer Mrs. Chalmers, with three officers, met the train, but the girl was not aboard.

FLAX INDUSTRY WILL GET ENCOURAGEMENT

Enthusiastic Business Men Take Action Toward Making This Center of Great Industry.

MANUFACTURING PLANT IS ONE OF THINGS PLANNED

Another Meeting Will Be Held Saturday Night to Further Discuss Development of Plan.

For the fourth time an attempt will now be made to establish the flax industry in Salem, according to the conclusions arrived at yesterday afternoon when several enthusiastic business men and promoters of that most valuable industry met in the old Board of Trade quarters to discuss the matter, and although nothing absolutely definite was arrived at, the members of the meeting voted as one in favoring plans whereby the Capital City will be the headquarters of a flax plant.

For years this popular industry has been wanted in Marion county. Thousands of dollars have been expended by private parties to start it. Many failures have been met with by the promoters, due to what is still believed to be the hand of incendiaries.

With the co-operation of the Salem Commercial Club and every citizen in the city, those backing the flax industry are now on a fair road to success. They were assured last night that the members of the promotion department of the commercial club will give their untainted support to the cause and preliminary steps were taken last night toward placing Salem on the map as not only a hop, fruit and dairy center, but as a flax growing metropolis.

It is proposed by the flax experts, composed of Mr. Besse, Mrs. Lord and others, including Fred S. Bryson, secretary of the commercial club, Theo. Roth Hal D. Patton, T. B. Key, F. G. Deckebach and Hans McKeown, that a stock company be organized with a capitalization of not less than $100,000 and that the industry be established at the earliest possible date.

Another meeting will be held as week from next Saturday night, at which it is hoped that those interested in the new movement will come to some definite conclusion in regard to launching the latest manufacturing industry in the city.

As said before, there has been no definite plans arranged for the perfecting of a flax factory, but it is the purpose of those interested to develop the industry here, establish a linen mill and arrange for extensive flax fields throughout the county.

Shellburn, Ore., April 19, 1913. Dr. J. C. Yuen, Salem, Ore.:

Dear Sir: I wish to offer you a testimonial in regard to your wonderful medicine.

I had the advice of some of the noted physicians, and they told me that I had appendicitis, and would have to be operated on before could get well.

I wish to do all in my power to circulate the knowledge of your wonderful medicine. Respectfully, J. L. OGLESBEE, Shellburn, Oregon.

Salem, July 5, 1913. I have been troubled with kidney trouble and a tumor for some time, and after three weeks' treatment with Dr. J. C. Yuen I can say I am perfectly cured, and since then have gained 30 pounds, and would recommend his treatment to all sufferers.

The Career of Marriage

By Dorothy Dix.

In speaking to 200 women graduates who had trained themselves for different professions President Edward James of the University of Illinois said:

"The woman who chooses the career of marriage when the opportunity offers itself or when she makes it for herself, as every woman can, is choosing a highway to social service which is far ahead of all teaching or legal or medical service she can possibly render to society."

That is as may be, Mr. College President. If you were a woman you would know that the opportunity to marry the kind of a man you would like to have for a husband and for the father of your children doesn't always present itself. Likewise that there are tens of thousands of women who have not been able to capture a husband of any sort, although they have done their level best.

It is the custom to get maudlin drunk on sentimentality when you talk to girls, and to advise them to marry, and to maunder on about the beauty and glory of wifehood and motherhood; but all of us in our sober senses know that whether wifehood or motherhood is beautiful and glorious depends altogether on how a woman is fitted for the job and how she pulls it off.

Undoubtedly a good wife and mother is the noblest work of God, and such a one performs a great service to society. On the other hand, a mean wife and mother is the devil's first lieutenant, and the harm that such a one does to the world is incalculable.

If we have had mothers who have given us a George Washington and an Abraham Lincoln, let us also reflect that we have mothers who give us our Gyp the Bloods and Lefty Louies, so there's no use in raising any monuments to motherhood until we find out what sort of a product it has turned out. Certainly the mothers of the hundreds of grafters, blackmailers, thieves and white slavers in the world have done no service to society for which the balance of us need be grateful to them.

As for there being anything particularly meritorious in a woman marrying, that also depends upon the spirit in which she does it and the sort of a wife she makes. The woman who marries a man for love and because she feels that he is her real mate, and who bends her every energy of mind and body to loving service to him and to making him happy, undoubtedly fills the highest and happiest career fate can allot to a woman. She makes a home that adds to the sweetness and light of the world.

But what of the young girl who marries an old man for his money; who sells herself for the finery he can give her? What of the woman who marries because it is easier to work a husband than to work a type-marries to escape being an old maid? What of the woman who marries a man to curse him with her extravagance, her temper, her nagging tongue?

Is anything noble in such marriages? Anything worthy? Isn't the honest little working girl who earns her own bread and butter a million times higher type of woman than the one who marries just for a living? Isn't a home that is a place of discord a plague spot in the world that infects every life that touches it?

As a matter of fact there are no two other things on earth that need reforming so much as wifehood and motherhood and instead of handing out wholesale advice to girls to get married we should be counseling them to go slow about it, to consider whether they are fit to be wives and mothers, and if they are going to be better wives and mothers than the present generation of women are.

Our asylums are crowded with the insane and the neurotic that never should have been born. Our penitentiaries are overflowing with criminals who are there because they had not the proper rearing. Our streets are full of hoodlum boys and wayward girls who have had no restraining home influence exercised over them.

What we need is not more mothers, but better mothers; mothers who won't think it is enough just to bear children, but who feel their sacred responsibility to rear them into good citizens.

No one is more filled with reverence for a good mother than I am, but I see too many women bringing up their children to be curses to the world to shed any tears over flub-dub sentiments over abstract motherhood. Also I have seen too many men thankfully paying their wives' expenses in Reno to look upon wifehood as a grand career unless a woman makes it noble by her unselfish devotion.

In the meantime, while we concede the worth to society of the good wife and mother, why ignore the service that has been done by unmarried women? Has any woman done more for her fellow-creatures than Jane Addams, who has mothered a city instead of a brood of her own? Are not Miss Helen Gould's philanthropies apt to be lessened instead of increased by her marriage?

Had Florence Nightingale and Clara Barton and their old maid associates married and stayed in their homes, might not the insane still be chained to the floors and the sick and wounded be not properly cared for?

And in private life is it not almost always the unmarried daughter who takes care of the old parents and helps educate the nieces and nephews? Is it not the unmarried women in every community who are at the head and front of every good work? Who can judge of the relative value of

The truth is that whether marriage is a blessing or a crime depends altogether upon the sort of a marriage it is, and whether a girl marries by wifehood and motherhood or altogether on how she accepts in these two difficult roles.

SUPERINTENDENT WANTS NOTICE OF BLASTING

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE]

Portland, July 24.—Following the tie-up of Oregon Electric trains Saturday as a result of the break of power wires by a blast at Wallace, where Chinese hoppers were engaged in clearing a small tract, Superintendent Davidson, of the Oregon Electric, today stated that, in the best interests of public service and the accommodation of the traveling public, if parties who desire to blast near the right of way will only take the trouble to notify the railway officials, or agents along the line, the proper precautions will be taken to safeguard the line and in the transmission wires should be disrupted accidentally, it can be repaired with the least possible delay to the train service.

VERDICT FOR $5000 IN MUCHMORE DAMAGE CASE

After two days of legal battle in the case of Mrs. Rebecca Muchmore vs. the Salem Bank and Trust Company, the jury last evening returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff in the sum of $5000. This has been one of the hardest-fought cases in the circuit court during the present session. The plaintiff was seeking damages in the sum of $7500 on the grounds her husband was killed as the result of a defective furnace blowing up in the defendant's building.

The jury relied upon the testimony introduced by the plaintiff's counsel to the effect the heating plant in question was improperly installed and as the result thereof the explosion occurred. It required many counts before the jury-men arrived at a verdict, however.

Attorneys Carson and Bingham represented the plaintiff while Attorneys McNary and Endicott acted for the defendant.
