MILITARY TRAINING IS FINE FOR EVERYONE

Many Useful Things Are Taught Boys Who Participate in Maneuvers of State Militia.

FINE CLASS OF MEN ARE BEING ATTRACTED TO MILITIA

In Case There Should Be War, Trained Men Would Have Great Advantage Over All Others.

A great deal of interest is being shown by the young men of Salem in the organization of the new militia company. Not only men who know nothing about military work, but men who have had from three to seven years previous service are making inquiries as to what kind of a bunch of men are going to be in the new organization and many have signified their intention to become members providing the present standard of enlistment will be maintained. That sounds mighty fine, because when you attract a class of men that make the veteran want to get out and soldier along side of them, they must be better than the ordinary. The veteran, having had experience, knows the class of men that can make good. That does not go to say that every veteran is desirable, any more than every citizen is desirable, but the best will be taken only.

The morale of the national guard has shown a marked improvement in the last two years, and more so in the last year. The rowdiness and rough stuff was nowhere in evidence at the last encampment, it is said, and the regular army officers on duty with the Third regiment at Camp West this year were surprised to find so much improvement along this line. Every man seemed to be desirous of learning as much as possible and worked with a will, and if he made a mistake, it was due mostly to lack of training rather than to any cause. This is a result of having the right kind of men in the organization. However, there is very much room for improvement.

The present administration is paying more attention to the national guard than it ever received before. It has been realized that in time of war the national guard will play a very vital part, and the war department is doing everything in its power to make the militia as efficient as possible. Regular army officers are detailed as instructors and have no other duties to perform but to train the national guard, and are with them constantly, not only in the armory, but in their daily life, studying them to see if they are the proper men to command troops. In addition to having an instructor in this state, for the infantry, the Third infantry has been fortunate in securing the services of Major C. H. Martin, U. S. A., to command the regiment. Major Martin has been commissioned colonel of infantry in the Oregon National Guard and assigned to the command of the Third infantry. Colonel Martin has just finished a detail at the Army War College division of the general staff at Washington, D. C., before being sent to Oregon and stands very high in the regular service.

There is a bill before congress now to pay the militiamen a percentage of regular army pay which will in some degree compensate the men for their services while not attending camps or other duty in the field. During the annual encampments the men are paid according to the rank they hold in addition to receiving board, clothing, and at the same time getting an outing and experience that can not be duplicated in any other way. The men are not paid the regular army pay, but are paid according to a scale made out by the state authorities which amounts to considerably more for the enlisted men. The officers are paid straight regular army pay. It is conceded that military training would be a good thing for students of the high schools, and it is thought by various authorities that the citizen of today would be improved at least 50

The Markets

Bids of 85 cents were made Wednesday for bluestem, but this was the only wheat that held its own, all other showing a slight decline. The markets will vary slightly, of course, but the price for the season is fixed and the fluctuations will be only such as local incident, such as demand for completion of cargo, or some temporary cause may compel. California's hop crop is now estimated at 95,000 bales. Eastern orders at 18 cents are plentiful, but no one is paying any attention to them, and anything less than 20 cents is not considered. Just what the price will settle at is a question that each will have to guess for himself. Many think the price will be under rather than over 20 cents while a few have some pretty wild ideas, predicting 45 cent hops inside of six months. Not many take any stock in this wild figure. Sugar was given another boost Wednesday. Poultry and meats of all kinds are in good demand with prices a shade stronger.
