BARGAINING AS A FINE ART.

Polite and Loquacious, the Oriental Shepkeeper Will Haggle Over the Price of an Article From Dawn Until Dark-A Sample Transaction

He is the selfsame fellow still, the Cairene merchant, as in the days of Haroun-al-Raschid. He squats in cross legged contentment as of yore, amenable only to the loquacious system of bargaining dear to the heart of the oriental. The western tourist, foolishly regarding time as of value, will lose all equanimity long before he has completed the smallest transaction. If his knowledge of the east and his patience suffice and he begins negotiations early enough in the day not to be driven forth as the merchant sets up his shutters at nightfall he may obtain the article he seeks at a just and equitable price. If he gains possession of it in less than the accustomed time he will certainly have paid more than its mar-

Vagamundo, the western traveler experienced in the ways of the east, catches sight during a stroll through the bazaars of an Arabic blade that takes his fancy. It hangs high at the top of the open booth, on the raised floor of which serenely squats the proas from the merest curiosity, pauses to run his eye over the countiess articles, suggests with a half stifled yawn that the scimitar looks like what might be a convincing weapon in the hands of an enemy, ventures to hope that the merchant is enjoying fine weather and strolls leisurely on. The shopkeeper continues to puff drowsily at his water bottle until the westerner is all but out of earshot. Then he appears suddenly to awake and dropes out a languid invitation to return Vagamundo pays no heed to the summons for some moments, gazes abstractedly opon the wares displayed in another booth, then wanders slowly back. The merchant hopes that the traveler is enjoying the best of health. space not airendy occupied by himself or his wares, offers a cigarette and falls to discussing the state of the cotton crop in .he delta. By the fime the second eigarette is lighted he turns the conversation deftly to the scimitar and remarks that though it is hung among his wares rather for ornament than sale it is possible he may some time, recalls having heard a friend express a desire to obtain such a weapon for, say, 75 plasters or so and wonders, after all, why that friend should care for so useless an article.

Thus the transaction continues; a third, a fourth, even a fifth time Vagaundo returns. By the sixth visit he has dropped the fiction of a friend and openly offers 225 plasters for the blade. and the shopkeeper arouses bimself sufficiently to take the weapon down for inspection and expresses a willingness to part with it for 275

Over newly rolled cigarettes the ne-++++++++++++++++++++++ gotlation proceeds, now touching upon skirting the matter of scimitars, their manufacture and price. Speaking of scimitars, the merchant suspects that for the one in hand he would be satisfied perhaps at 250 plasters. mundo lays that sum-which both recognized from the beginning as the just price—on the mat between them, grasps his newly acquired proper's and, smid protestations of lifelong friendship from the merchant, takes his departure.

Manchester business men and Chiago captains of industry, scorning such childish methods, have dived into the maeistrom of the bazaars of Cairo with the avowed intention of "doing susiness" after the manner of today and the west; but all in vain. The Cairene shopkeeper will harry in his transactions for no mortal man. Let the pulsating westerner press his merenary suit too forcibly and he disovers to his surprise, and perhaps even to his dismay, that the merchant of the east displays his wares and squats by day among them merely as recreation and amusement and that he notion of selling anything is forthest from his thoughts.-Harry A. Schmidt received a postcard today from a woman who signed herself as Kathleen O'Malley. He said he did not know her. Asking regarding a boy he took to a room he had rented in 85th street. Schmidt said the child did not belong to him, adding:

"I know the boy won't tell. Why mother tongue?" asked the young man hurt an innocent child! Why ask so many questions? The district attorney wants to send me to the electric chanr. and I am willing to go. I feel sorry for living. I have faced death on numerous occasions, and I am willing to face day tire of beholding it and part with it in the electric chair. Dr. Muret's explanation of our quarrels is correct. I told him I wanted to be like Christ.

Regarding the murder of little Alma Seddner in Louisville, Schmidt said: "I would be pleased if I could conince the authorities that I killed that shild and save the man now in prison. But it would be false. What's the difference if I killed one or a dozen per-
