Capital City Brevities

Special meeting of Multnomah Chapter, No. 1, R. A. M. this evening at 7:30. Work in the M. M. degree. Visiting companions welcome.

Dr. F. L. Utter, dentist, suite 415-616-417 Masonic building.

Willard Hudlog and wife arrived from Portland yesterday to visit for a few days.

Have your eyes fitted correctly by Dr. Mandelsohn, 210 U. S. Bank building. No drugs used.

Conversation in French between parties will be a feature of our classes. Studio 311 Hubbard building.

My son, thou must not be disheartened or cast down because of poor cigars, for the purchase of a Tashmo will always bring thee complete enjoyment.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Ebernet and son, Clifford, left yesterday morning for their home in Vancouver, B. C., after spending a month here visiting their many friends.

A word to big sister or little brother. Come down or have mother bring you to our salerooms for a demonstration of a Victrola. We have all of your favorite airs. R. F. Peters, 521 Court street.

There is still much need for the team, and the necks will soon puff or scald, if not protected by collar pads. Talk it over with F. E. Shafer, the saddle and harness man, 187 South Commercial street.

The simplicity and elegance in bedroom furniture which is now universally sought, finds complete expression in the choicely selected stock of bedroom furniture at the Imperial Furniture Co., 177 North Liberty street.

A word to the good housekeeping woman. We ask that you give us a chance to serve you. You will find ours a good housekeeping store—stocked with the goods you have learned to want. Our service, courteous—our desire to serve, sincere. Our prices reasonable, and all goods marked with "quality" stamp. Sunset grocery, 121 South Commercial street.

According to Chief of Police Sheebeck, the records at the city hall show that this year has been the quietest one for some time during the season when the hop pickers leave the yards. He states that very few arrests have been made, and there does not seem to be much desire upon the part of the transient class to "start things" when they come in from the hop fields with their tank roles.

Paul G. Minston, an extensive prune grower of Rosedale district, who lives in Portland, and who was in the city yesterday, stated that he hoped to "make a big cleaning in prunes this year." Mr. Minston declares that the crop is looking the best it ever has, and that he hopes to have them harvested within a few days.

Dr. May, nerve specialist Masonic bld. Ralph Stearns has gone to Chicago to attend college this winter. Miss Aggie Alford has returned to her home here after spending an outing at the seashore.

H. S. Gile and his new wife have sailed for Europe, according to advices received here.

Miss Lulu Heist has gone to Albany, where she will teach German in the high school at that city. Miss Heist is a graduate of Willamette university.

Nolan Hoff has gone to Corvallis to attend college.

A correction was made yesterday by J. B. Cooper in regard to the general report given out to the effect that the 1913 hop crop at the Byrne ranch, north of Salem had been sold. Mr. Cooper states the hops have not been sold as yet, and are now open for bids. The crop will consist of about 150 bales.

Frank Coldwell, the secretary of the State Board of Pharmacy, was the guest of Frank Ward, of Salem yesterday. Mr. Ward is a member of the same board.

Almost every truck and express wagon in the city was busy today transporting hop pickers' outfits to and from hop yards, and from one railroad station to another. About all the harvesters in the county are leaving the fields today.

A citation has been issued by the Marion county court ordering Mr. and Mrs. Willis Oliver to appear and show cause for the alleged delinquency of their daughter, Gertrude Oliver.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Porell left for their home in Roseburg this morning, after visiting over Sunday with Salem friends and relatives.

Today a number of public and private schools opened, but the Capital Business College is open all the year. This is the school that meets the needs of the young people who wish to prepare quickly and thoroughly for the best places in business. Talk with the principal, and learn how this school can help you.

"Buddie" Willis, of Albany, a keen motorcycle enthusiast of that place, came to grief in this city yesterday morning, when he tried to cut a horse shoe curve around the corner of Liberty and State streets. The pavement was wet when Willis attempted to make the turn, his machine skidded with the result that both it and the rider tumbled bottom side up. Fortunately, neither the rider or the motorcycle was injured in the least, although Willis received a long rent in his trousers.

Now located at 407 Hubbard building, elevator service. Office hours from 1:30 to 5 p. m. Appointments made for interviews at any other time. If you should not find Miss Mosher in leave card with residence and phone number. CLARA MOSHER, Manager.

HIGH PRICED HONOR It Costs to Represent Uncle Sam at a Foreign Court.

HEDGED ABOUT BY DIGNITY. Trials and Tribulations That Beset a New Ambassador—Ceremonies in Which He Must Participate and For Which He Must Give Lavish Tips.

An unofficial American can live more economically abroad than at home—that is a fact. Food is cheaper. Servants work for less money. This being so, why is it not possible for an unpretentious Yankee diplomat to live in Europe for the same money as in America? I put the question to a former ambassador who has lived in London, Paris and Rome.

"They tell me one can go to the market and buy a part of a chicken—a wing or a drumstick. Think of it! Food must be cheap there."

"But the ambassador cannot sally forth with a market basket on his arm," said the retired diplomat.

That sums up the difficulty. An ambassador cannot do anything for himself. So he is a shining mark for everybody. There is nobody so helpless in America, except the poor taxpayer. Let us look into it.

International law, which is as full of fine spun distinctions as common law or domestic law, regards an ambassador as the direct personal representative of the ruler of his country and ordains that he be treated in a manner befitting such a very important person. This accounts for the ceremony attending the ambassador's presentation of the president's letter of credence to the sovereign. In detail the function varies in different countries, but the continental custom is in general as follows:

At the day and hour fixed by the king, emperor or president a court functionary of high degree in gorgeous uniform appears at the abode of the new American ambassador. He is accompanied by numerous other persons, somewhat lower in rank, but uniformed in equally bright colors. He is provided with three court carriages, together with attendants and outriders. He is in command of a mounted escort and, last, but not least, of a white plumed band, accoutered with instruments of glittering brass.

The American ambassador, probably flustered by the ceremony, is conducted to the first of the carriages, which is drawn by eight horses. He is politely waved to the back seat, while his personal escort, instead of sitting by his side, takes the seat facing him. The Yankee diplomat wears a frock coat—Prince Albert, he calls it—and a silk hat, and his gloves, dictated by his wife, are of gray suede.

Across from him sits the chief functionary, attired with a brilliance seldom seen outside of comic opera. In solemn stately procession the carriages and outriders, preceded by the mounted troop, with the resonant band in the van, take up the march to the palace. On both sides of the thoroughfare is a curious, gapping crowd. At that the many corps de garde soldiers come out and present arms, and when the American ambassador, a plain man, perhaps, arrives at the palace there is an elaborate presentation of arms and a beating of drums that completely take the zimp out of him.

Unexpectedly simple is the sovereign's reception of the new diplomat, but after it is over the American must again endure the ceremonious procession back to his domicile. Then comes the shock.

The first secretary explains that the sun must not set before the pourboire is distributed. This, the ambassador learns, is French for tip. He also learns that the transportation to and from the palace has a purse string to it. The keeper of the royal stables must be tipped.

"It is an inviolable custom," insists the first secretary. "How much?" asks the hedging diplomat. "For an ambassador," says the first secretary, "the rule is $200."

There is probably an explosion, but in the end the ambassador pays. A London editor, who was born in America and received his newspaper training on this side of the water, once said:

"You can safely give a present, if not a gratuity, to any official below the sovereign on the continent." "How about England?" I asked. "The present should be more expensive, the gratuity larger."—Henry Beech Needham in Saturday Evening Post.

Paint Saves Money. Why not use a little paint occasionally? It prolongs the life of the buildings, adds value to the price of the farm and helps to make a "home beautiful." Buildings last 25 to 50 per cent longer if painted. That means that a building which would last fifty to seventy-five years unpainted would last 75 to 125 years if painted. It is the same with fences and farm implements. It is easy to see that paint saves money.—Kansas Farmer.

MOLECULES ARE INVISIBLE.

Yet Their Tracks Through Space Can Be Discerned.

It came to be evident about the middle of the last century that, in order to explain certain facts connected with the relative weights of gases, matter must not merely consist of atoms, but that these atoms must have the power of uniting in small groups. In forming a compound, indeed, this must be so. For instance, carbonic acid gas must consist of one atom of carbon, which, along with two atoms of oxygen, forms a small group of three atoms.

The novelty of the conception was in the notion that oxygen itself, in the state of gas, as it exists, for example, in the air, consists of small groups of atoms; in this case, two. To such small groups of atoms was given the name molecules. A molecule is that portion of a substance which can exist in the free state, as oxygen does in air. An atom generally exists in combination, but atoms may and sometimes do exist separately, in which case they also are termed molecules.

Now, can molecules be seen? Is their existence a mere assumption? The answer to that question is, No, they cannot be seen, but artificial molecules can be made which correspond so closely in their behavior to real molecules that the existence of real molecules is practically certain. Moreover, although no one has ever seen a molecule, still the track of a molecule moving through space has been seen, and, just as Robinson Crusoe was right in inferring the existence of man Friday from his footprint in the sand, so the real existence of a molecule may just as certainly be inferred from the track it leaves.—Sir William Ramsay in Harper's.

COLD COMFORT.

It Came After the Little Faker Had Got His Punishment.

The east end small boy had sadly misbehaved and was locked in his room. Pretty soon his mother heard him calling.

"Muvver," said the shrill voice, "I'm goin' to bust the window and fall out!"

The mother made no reply. Again the shrill voice arose:

"Muvver, I've found some matches, an' I'm goin' to set fire to the curtains."

The mother remained indifferent. Once more the voice called her:

"Muvver, don't you smell sumfin' burnin'?" Even this drew no response.

"If you don't smell nothin'," the voice went on, "it's 'cause I pulled off all th' match heads an' swallowed 'em, an' I'm goin' to die. Do you hear that, muvver; I'm goin' to die."

By this time the mother was thoroughly incensed, and, half preparing a cup of mustard and hot water, she hurried upstairs.

"If you've swallowed match heads," she announced, "you'll have to swallow this to keep them company." And then she poured the nauseating stuff down his throat.

A little later the aggravating youngster, sadder, wiser and much humbled, concluded to take the balance of his punishment in silence.

"I didn't really swallow the matches, muvver," he contritely explained.

"I knew you didn't, sonny," replied the mother.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Tips For Tennis Players. One of the faults of the inexperienced doubles player which is most persistent is standing still. This is one of those necessities in doubles that are often overlooked. But no partner can do justice to his team unless he moves after every shot to the center of the angle of the return. In other words, both men must constantly change their positions, moving back and forth toward one side or the other, according to where they have sent the ball. If the net man has volleyed deep into the right hand corner both players move across to the right. The right hand player thereby protects the shot down his own side line, and the left hand player protects the cross court shot down the central diagonal of the court.—Outing.

Lubricant For Aluminum. Many machinists, especially those employed in the motor engineering industry, are frequently called upon to work in aluminum. To satisfactorily do this work various lubricants have been tried, which, however, owing to their volatility, are of little use. A suitable lubricant is talow or cobbler's wax. This latter does not dissolve quickly and consequently does not flow as freely as the volatile oils.—American Machinist.

Going On. A terrible noise of thumping and stamping came from Bob's room early one morning.

"Bobby, Bobby," called his mother from downstairs, "what is going on up there?"

"My shoes," replied Bob.

Love's Paradox. "Love results in many paradoxical situations," remarked the professor.

"What is one?" "To keep the love of another one must return it."—Buffalo Express.

GLOBE THEATRE

The Baseo & Brown Musical Comedy Co. opened a two-weeks' engagement at this house to three capacity houses. The company is one of the best organizations that has visited Salem this season, and, from the reception accorded them at each performance, they will be great favorites in Salem. A. B. Baseo, as Pat McNogerty, the Irish valet, was a scream from start to finish, and is a dancer of great ability, and as a laugh-producer is a wonder. Ed. Harrington, an old-time Salem favorite, was seen to advantage as Chas. Livingston, with great expectations of retrieving his depleted fortune via the matrimonial route. Billy Nixon, as Major Puffjacket, a retired army officer, was pleasing. Naudia Melville, as Laure, the major's niece, in love with Charles, was very clever and petite. Minnie Moran, as Nora, the maid, in love with Pat, was pleasing. All of the song numbers, of which there were quite a few, were clever and well received. The chorus girls are all pretty and can sing and dance, and the wardrobe is attractive. The company will be here two weeks, with daily matinees and two shows nightly. Popular prices will prevail.

DEATH NOTICES.

JAMES CRAIG. The funeral of James Craig, the Silverton flax grower, who died in the Portland Commercial club rooms September 18, was held in Portland yesterday at 1:30 p. m., from the chapel of Dunning & McEntee. Interment at Riverside cemetery.

Twenty members of the Silverton Masonic lodge, of which Mr. Craig was a member, attended. Six Knights Templars were pallbearers. The funeral sermon was preached by the Rev. J. H. Boyd, of the First Presbyterian church. Services at the graveside were in charge of the Masons. A body of Masons from Washington lodge also attended.

Mr. Craig, who was 63 years old, leaves but one near relative in Oregon, a nephew, Harold Craig, of Silverton.
