BIG, BROAD-MINDED EUGENE.

IT SPEAKS WELL for Oregon's future that there has at last been awakened along with a spirit of keen rivalry, an equally strong spirit of mutual friendship and desire to help each other. Every community in the state has felt the awakening of this spirit and each, instead of, as heretofore showing a spirit of jealousy and a desire to build itself up at the expense of all or any of the others, has adopted the broader sentiment that the good of one is the good of all, and stand in to help each other. This was beautifully illustrated Wednesday morning, when Eugene sent a great delegation here, not on its own day, but on "Salem Day" to take part in the state fair holidays. It was a splendid thing to do, and the more splendid because Salem and Eugene are in a close race for the second place as the leading cities of the state. Our neighboring city sent up its little army of Eugene boosters, "The Radiators," to assist our own "Cherrians," on this Salem's special day. They were an enthusiastic lot, too, and the way they passed the compliments of the occasion could not be excelled.

Salem takes off its hat to the broad-minded citizens of Eugene and if in the days to come it has to take third place among Oregon cities, it will do so cheerfully, if Eugene is to lead her. We will know that our neighbors' broad-minded policies and her true worth have made the place here. It is no disgrace to take second place to a city like Eugene, for all she gets she deserves though she may not always get all she deserves.

There is indeed a bright future for Oregon, for united to work for the good of all, nothing on earth can stop her progress.

AN ANGEL OF THE CITY OF ANGELS.

THAT WAS A PATHETIC SCENE in the Los Angeles court room Monday night when twelve weeping jurors solemnly announced that the mis-used and maligned millionaire, George H. Bixby, was innocent of any wrongdoing in his noble and disinterested attempts to uplift certain girls of the red-light district in that city of the angels, which so long as Bixby remains there at least is entitled to the distinguished name. The jurors wept as the attorney pictured the saintly Bixby with his open purse in his hand, tears in his eyes and the love of humanity, collectively only, in his heart, sneaking down to a certain questionable resort at night and under an assumed name, lest his "philanthropies" should be discovered, to rescue from the grip of sin some of the best looking of the bazaar. It is indeed a soul-harrowing picture, one that would bring tears to the eyes of a government pack-man, one that calls to mind Mark Twain's description of his friend weeping over the tomb of Adam, because as he said: "Here lies one of my oldest relatives."

The verdict was reached on the first ballot, which leads one to believe that along with the generous tribute of tears thrown in by the jury, that the great-hearted Bixby's generosity and humanitarianism did not end with the fallen girls, but also had room in his great heart and plathoric purse to lift up fallen and needy jurymen and set their wayward feet in the straight and narrow path. It is indeed gratifying to know that our judicial system is above reproach; that even a millionaire, falsely accused, can still get justice at the hands of his political, if not his financial peers. It speaks well for our honest American manhood, and adds a crown of glory to the framers of our constitution and the makers of our laws whose wisdom provided us with so grand and perfect a judicial system and so arranged our jury system that a millionaire can always get even-handed justice—and more.

The evidence showed that Bixby picked out one resort from which to pluck the brands. That he took up with a woman named Rosenberg, who was running a "resort" and went into partnership with her in the laudable task of saving the girls. They made a splendid team, she getting the girls into her resort so that Bixby could dig up his money and help her by getting them out, so she could procure another batch. The evidence also showed that he confined his efforts at saving to three or four, and this in the course of several years. To one he gave $4300, to another who needed help to get her tootsies back in the path he gave a gold chain and cross. Another he gave $650 and asked no questions. This Millionaire Bixby admits, but he asserts that it was all done with the purest motives, and in a purely philanthropic spirit.

His pitiful plea, however, moved even the district attorney, who, when the jury got through wiping its eyes and hand-painting Bixby, announced that he would be as good to Bixby as the jury was, that no measly jury could outdo him in the use of the whitewash brush, or in tender, albeit maudlin sentiment, and that he would therefore dismiss the other charges against the philanthropist. The girls all told a different story from Bixby, one that did not picture Bixby as the patron saint of the city of the angels, but their story had no weight with the jury. From this it would seem that Bixby had not reformed them to the point where their statements could be taken as true even when made under oath. It is hoped that Millionaire Bixby grows discouraged as one naturally would under the circumstances and refused to further aid in reformatory work.

JUSTICE REMOVES HER BLINDFOLD.

FOR ONCE JUSTICE seems to have removed her blindfold and got down to business. Only a couple of weeks ago Oswald C. Hansel deliberately shot down and instantly killed Judge Frank J. Taylor, at Astoria. The only motive assigned was that some two years ago Judge Taylor drew up a complaint for divorce against Hansel. The case did not come to trial on this complaint, but later another suit was commenced and carried through. Hansel, angered over this, and blaming Taylor for all his troubles, deliberately murdered him. He was tried, found guilty of murder in the first degree, and Tuesday was sentenced to be hanged Friday, November 14. His attorneys say they will not appeal and this passes his case up to the governor, who alone can prevent the execution of the sentence. It is not probable the governor will interfere, for there seems to be absolutely no shadow of reason for the cold-blooded murder. The prisoner collapsed when taken into the court room for sentence, and officers had to almost carry him out when he learned his fate. The end of the terrible tragedy will be at the prison here and it will probably be November 14 "as advertised."

LADD & BUSH, Bankers

TRANSACTS A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS. SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES. TRAVELERS' CHECKS.

Commenting on Carl Browne, grand marshal of Coxe's army in 1894, and who now threatens to go to Washington to finish the speech so brutally stopped when he and the army was told to "keep off the grass," the Oregonian inadvertently, rather pats Coxe and Browne on the back as the original leaders of the good roads movement. Coxe wanted a bill passed by congress that would furnish employment to his army and others qualified to join it, in building good roads. It was considered silly then, but the auto has reduced the owners thereof to the Coxe army class so far as good roads are concerned.

The Socialists in Seattle threaten civil war if they are not salved with money for their harsh treatment in that city. It has not yet developed that the troops will have to be called out, and from all appearances the editors of the country will be able to fight this war to a finish. The lead pencil and the typewriter are all powerful, and he is a foolish Socialist who exposes himself to their deadly fire.

Not a Complete Surprise.
When William B. Hearst bought the old New York Journal one of his managing editors, Julius Chambers, invited Hearst to dinner with him.

They went to a downtown French restaurant. Chambers had ordered the dinner, which was a good one, and Hearst and he had a pleasant time. Along toward the close of the meal Chambers said: "Now, Mr. Hearst, I am going to give you a treat. I have ordered something you probably never have eaten or seen."

Chambers nodded to the waiter, who brought in some French artichokes. "You see," explained Chambers, "these are a great delicacy. You pull off the leaves and dip the ends in the sauce and eat the ends only."

Hearst smiled a little and followed directions. As they progressed Chambers said complacently: "Pretty good, eh? I don't suppose you ever saw an artichoke before."

"Well," Hearst replied, "I can't go so far as that. You see, Chambers, we had 400 acres of them growing the last time I was out at our California ranch."—Saturday Evening Post.

Why Drink Water When You Can Get Salem Beer?

The Most Popular Beverage on the Pacific Coast

Salem Bottled Beer is brewed in one of the most modern plants on the Pacific Coast. It is aged in steel glass-lined tanks. It is conveyed by modern pipe line system direct to the bottle house, bottled under pressure and never comes in contact with the air from the time it leaves the fermenting tank until the bottle is opened by the consumer. Therefore the consumer is absolutely assured a beer of ideal effervescence, snap and purity. A trial will surely convince you. Get it from your local dealer or send order to the
