Lots of Farms for Sale After Hop and Prune Time

If you have an improved farm in mind, this is a good time to make a selection.

Farms are seldom sold with growing crops on them. In the first place the farmer would have to estimate what the yield was worth-which is very difficult. Both seller and prospective buyer would rather wait until after harvest time. This, then, is the month of farm opportunities. If you have any intention of going "back to the land," now is the time to begin reading the "Farm Land" advertising in the "Want Ad" pages of The Capital Jour-

That's the way to gather a lot of valuable information about farms and the best locations in which to settle.

Another good way is to write an ad of your own, to be printed under the heading "Farm Land Wanted." When you have put the last touch to it, send it, bring it or phone it to the Capital Journal.
