A marriage ceremony was performed yesterday afternoon by City Recorder Elgin, Charles H. O'Neill, of McMinnville, and Lena Millhouser, of this city, being the principals.

We wish to thank the many kind friends for their kindness and the beautiful floral offerings during the sickness and loss of our beloved sister, Schirmer sisters and brothers.

No students or beginners to experiment on your eyes; 31 years of practical experience and my ability for fitting glasses is well established. Dr. Mendelsohn, Doctor of Optics, U. S. bank building.

J. M. Hermann, the man arrested last Sunday for violating the game laws, is sure. He, in fact, is very sore. "If the dodgasted, dingedusted state needs guns and dogs so bad, I will buy some more and donate them to it," said Hermann today. The arresting officer took Hermann's hunting material, and he is mad enough to fight today.

Lizzie H. Healine this morning filed a complaint in the circuit court against Harvey H. Healine, in which she asks for a divorce on the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment. The plaintiff alleges that the defendant knocked her down several times, told her to go to hades, and performed many other acts which constitute inhuman treatment.

He found these hindrances. If you are a poor penman, slow at figures, unable to use a typewriter, with no knowledge of bookkeeping and lack ability to write a good business letter, you are greatly handicapped for efficient service and quick promotion in the business world. Why start life with such a handicap, when a course at the Capital Business College will remove it? New classes in arithmetic, commercial law, English, etc., next Monday.

The supreme court today is holding an inquest on 21 students who are desirous of being admitted to the bar. They are a pretty bright looking lot of young fellows, but we hope none are drawing so much water they cannot cross the bar. The trouble with most crops of this kind is that they are harvested too green.

Among those taking the state bar examination today is Miss Nettie May Rankin, who taught school here four years ago, and who is now a teacher in the Hawthorne school in Portland. She taught in the East school here a year and a half. She has been taking a law course in the University of Oregon law department at Portland.

NAMING A TOWN.

Concord Was Selected After Fifty Years of Controversy.

The name of Concord, N. H., was given to the town after a controversy which lasted fifty years. In 1725 the land now within its bounds was granted to the colonists under the name of Peacock by the colony of Massachusetts. This claim was disputed by the colony of New Hampshire, which two years later granted this same land to the township of Bow. 1733 Massachusetts incorporated Peacock into a township named Rumford, and for more than forty years a fierce legal controversy was carried on. No agreement could be reached, and the matter was taken to the authorities in England, but even then there was no satisfactory nor permanent settlement.

In the face of an evident leaning toward the claims of Bow, both in England and in America, the little band of colonists in Rumford fought on valiantly, and in 1765 an act of incorporation was granted to the inhabitants of Rumford. This was still highly unsatisfactory because it only made them a parish in the town of Bow.

The controversy continued until 1774, when it was finally settled and an independent town was formed under the name of Concord. It was due to the devotion of the little band of settlers to their cause and the unity which existed among them that the independent incorporation of the town was finally obtained, and it was eminently fitting that the concord which existed between them during the struggle of nearly fifty years should be memorialized in their town's name.—Ladies' Home Journal.

DODGED THE WASPS.

Simple Trick by Which the Woodsman Escaped a Stinging.

A man on his first trip into the wilds and marshes of an unknown country with the United States drainage engineers was struck by a unique method they have to escape from the attack of wasps and hornets. The country traversed is generally covered with thick undergrowth, and a path has to be cut through this all along the line. So when a big wasp nest is reached there is very little warning, sometimes the axmen cutting into a big one with their machetes.

The person relating this experience was some sixty feet behind the axmen with the instrument when all at once the two axmen dropped in their tracks as if they had been struck by a thunderbolt. The man behind and the two chalmers did likewise. While they were lying prone on the grass and wet marsh they heard what sounded like bullets zooling over their heads. One after the other they came with angry zips. When things had quieted down a bit work was continued, and the new man found that to escape from wasps or hornets the thing to do was to drop instantly. The insects seem to be so mad that they fly in straight lines along a level and do not have time to hunt around for you.

It is said that hornets are not so prone to follow this rule as wasps, but the wasps never vary. Men have been stung to death by hornets, and horses and mules likewise.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Record in Fletchering.

If they learn the art of chewing even people whose food expense is only threepence a day can make their meals last a long time. A chews, according to dietetic experts, is one who chews all things so long as they have any taste left in them. Gladstone, we are told, used to take thirty-two bites to every mouthful of food. The modern school of chews would regard this as dangerously rapid eating. "I have tried chewing conscientiously," writes Mr. Eustace Miles. "A banana has cost 800 bites, a small mouthful of bread and cheese 240 bites, a greedy mouthful of biscuit (while I was walking on a Yorkshire moor) over 1,000 bites. It still seemed to taste about as much as at first, but I knew that taste by then, so I swallowed."—London Chronicle.
