PANKHURST FREED BY CAMINETTI

English Militant Suffragette Will Be Permitted to Give Lectures.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC RECEPTION GIVEN

President Wilson's Influence Exerted to Secure Her Admission.

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.] New York, Oct. 20.—Freed by Immigration Commissioner-General Caminetti's order, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, English militant suffragette leader, left Ellis Island today, crossed the bay to New York, was met by Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont's automobile and drove at once to Mrs. Belmont's home.

She was to have addressed a mass meeting at Madison Square Garden tonight, but in consideration of the ordeal she has been through, the gathering was postponed until Tuesday.

The English visitor's release was not entirely unconditional. She was admitted on her own recognizance and without a bond, but was under pledge to leave the country at the end of her lecture engagement. She is understood, also, to respect American laws.

Welcomed Enthusiastically. Mrs. Pankhurst received an enthusiastic reception from the throng of women who met her at the pier. She is a delicate looking, elderly woman, almost super-refined in appearance, with a low, gentle voice and every mark of excellent birth and fine breeding.

She had little to say about her detention at Ellis Island, but her manner and a few casual remarks dropped indicated that the promptness with which the New York authorities' decision was overruled from Washington had removed from her mind the unpleasant effect produced on her mind by the nature of her earlier reception.

Those who met her were profuse in their apologies for the treatment she had received, but Mrs. Pankhurst waived aside their protestations with the smiling intimation that, after the experiences she had gone through in English prisons, her stay on Ellis Island was rather to be regarded as a pleasure than as a hardship.

Tells Why He Did It.

Washington, Oct. 20.—Following the issuance of his order for Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst's release from Ellis Island on her own recognizance, Immigration Commissioner-General Caminetti formally filed an opinion in explanation of his decision overruling the New York authorities.

In the first place, he held, it was doubtful whether the offenses charged against Mrs. Pankhurst in England involved moral turpitude, and in the second, she can be prosecuted here if she violates American laws, or, if preferred, she can be deported.

Mrs. Pankhurst was ordered set free following a hearing granted by Commissioner Caminetti to her lawyers, and later, a conference between himself, President Wilson and Secretary Wilson of the labor department.

President Wilson was said to have expressed much sympathy with the suffragette leader and to have said he was decidedly in favor of admitting her.

Finally Lassoed. First firemen and then troops were called to the hotel, the lions were lassoed and tied, and finally both were taken to police headquarters under orders to be executed.

SULZER OUT WITH STORY OF TROUBLE

Declares He Was Ousted Because He Insisted on Punishing Thieves.

MURPHY'S EFFORTS TO CONTROL HIM

Tammany Leader Declared War When Sulzer Refused to Heed Wishes.

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.] New York, Oct. 20.—Declaring that he had been deposed because he insisted on punishing Tammany thieves, and refused to obey the commands of Boss Charles J. Murphy, William Sulzer today issued a statement in regard to his troubles, which lead to his impeachment. He said in part: Murphy's Demands. "I talked over the telephone from Albany with Judge Edward McCall about the public service commissioner-ship. McCall met me with an automobile at the 175 street station when I got to New York afterward. He said Murphy was at his house waiting for me.

"I met Murphy in the front room. He urged me to appoint John Galvin public service commissioner in place of Mr. Wilcox. I urged the appointment of Henry Morgenthau, George A. Peabody or John Temple Graves. Murphy wouldn't hear of them. He talked long and earnestly on behalf of Galvin. Finally suggested that we compromise on Mr. McCall.

"At this meeting and subsequently Murphy demanded pledges regarding legislation and especially concerning appointments. Gaffney or War.

"Murphy finally said: 'I am for Gaffney for highway commissioner. The organization demands his appointment. I want you to appoint him.' "I replied: 'I will make no promises.' "It will be Gaffney or war," he said.

"I had several talks with Murphy, and at some of them I told him I was governor, and intended to be governor. He laughed and said I might be governor, but that he controlled the legislature, and unless I did what he wanted regarding legislation and appointments I could not get my nominations confirmed—he would block everything."

Demands and Threats. "When Murphy found he could not use or control me he sent his emissaries to demand that I do certain things, and to threaten me if I refused.

"My efforts for progressive government were blocked by the refusal of the legislature to let me install men capable of and willing to do the work.

"A final interview I had with Murphy on the night of April 13, is marked in my memory, for his insolence and the sordid brutality of his demands. Before we parted that night I warned Murphy that he would wreck the party and accomplish his own destruction, if he persisted in shielding grafters and in violating platform pledges.

"His angry retort was that I was an ingrate, and that he would disgrace and destroy me.

Says He Knew Odds. "I knew the terrible odds there were against me in the fight I courted when I declined to submit to Murphy's dictation; declined to turn my office into an instrument for the corruption of the government and for debauching the state.

"I was reluctant to break with Murphy. I did it only because it had become impossible to do otherwise without betraying my oath of office, and forfeiting my self-respect.

"When I returned to Albany I carefully considered my plight, and the whole state situation. It was only then, and not since, that any thought of resigning entered my mind.

Three Paths Open to Him. "There were three paths to travel—to surrender to Murphy and to be a mindful of everything except his or

Campaign for Better Addresses on Letters is Being Pushed

A campaign to have people use more care in addressing letters has been inaugurated by Postmaster August Huchestein, who declared today that the general public has no idea how much trouble and confusion results from the improper addressing of mail. The return address in the corner is nearly as important as the other, according to the postmaster. The campaign for better addresses is to be carried on through the schools, postoffices and rural routes and it will result in a saving of time in postoffices as well as better service, it is believed. More than 13,000,000 pieces of mail matter were sent to the division of dead letters at Washington, D. C., last year and a large proportion could not be delivered because of carelessness in writing addresses. The following suggestions are made by the postoffice department: "Use ink in addressing letters or other mail matter. "Write plainly the name of the person addressed, street and number, post office and state. "Place your name and address in the upper left hand corner of the envelope or package." A model form of address has been issued for distribution from the postoffices to the schools and elsewhere.
