Mrs. Vaughn Says Cooking Is Basis for Civilization and Believes in Using Modern Ideas.

URGES WOMEN TO SHARPEN UP INTERROGATION POINTS

Evident From Way People Talk About Capital Journal's Free Cooking School Many Will Attend.

Mrs. Kate B. Vaughn, who will talk to and cook for Salem women, next week, would certainly be gratified to know of the interest which is being manifested in The Capital Journal Free Cooking School. No effort will be spared to make the main auditorium of the Armory a very comfortable place in which to spend the afternoon all next week. The stage will be transformed into a most complete and convenient kitchen with kitchen cabinet, tables, and modern cooking utensils. Many of these innovations will prove interesting to some of Salem housewives when Mrs. Vaughn explains and demonstrates their use. Mrs. Vaughn is going to show Salem housewives something about southern cooking next week. This is a subject many Salem women will hail with delight as an old friend, for many families of Salem originated in the south, and many women pride themselves on being good Southern Cooks. They will enjoy sampling Mrs. Vaughn's dishes and discussing her methods. Mrs. Vaughn is looking forward to meeting Salem housewives and feels that The Capital Journal Cooking School will be an exceptionally interesting one, and it is evident from the way people are talking about it that she is not to be disappointed.

Mrs. Vaughn is at once progressive and "old fashioned." She believes aggressively that the home is woman's sphere, but she is just as aggressive in her belief that woman should bring every modern idea and appliance which is worth while, into household use. Mrs. Vaughn is heartily in sympathy with young girls who want to do things after new and up-to-date methods. She has come in close touch with young women all over the country who are strongly interested in domestic science and she has made it a point to encourage and advise them in every way possible. She has done university extension work which has brought her in direct contact with domestic classes of the high schools, and she finds that the young women in many states she has visited, are deeply interested. She says no one ever heard tell of a student "cutting" her domestic science hour, and she feels convinced that this study of housekeeping from a scientific standpoint is going to bring about a much needed reform in housekeeping. Mrs. Vaughn says, "We live in an age of reforms and upheavals. We hear something new every day about prison reforms, school reforms, reforms in the political and business world, but at the root and bottom of all these evils is the badly managed home, just as truly as the well-managed home making. Will our women go on doing things in grandmother's way, just because it was grandmother's way giving no intelligent thought to the result?"

More Cooks Than Anything Else
More people are engaged in cooking than any other profession in the world. It is true in more senses than one that "too many cooks spoil the broth." The same cooks are spoiling many things beside broth. It is hard to say just how far the effect of a badly cooked meal, by an untrained cook reaches. Perhaps sometimes it is felt in the making of the country's laws. Perhaps the decision of the judge on the bench is influenced by what he ate for lunch. Perhaps Johnny suffers at school because of teacher's undigested breakfast. Shall we have trained jockeys, trained baseball players, trained business men, trained teachers and preachers, and untrained cooks?
Mrs. Vaughn Invites Discussion.

W. C. T. U. MEETING

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.] New York, Oct. 24.—Reports of the committees showing the results of a world movement against intemperance, and a large increase in membership, were the important matters discussed at today's sessions of the World's Convention of the W. C. T. U., which convened here yesterday to remain in session six days. Another important feature of today's meetings was the discussion of the sale of intoxicating liquor in New Zealand and Australia. The 500 delegates today informally discussed a world wide campaign which, if plans do not miscarry, will be instituted in every country in the world where liquors are sold, some time during the ensuing year. This fight will be carried into more than fifty countries and nations.

opportunity, not only of listening to a trained cook, at The Capital Journal Cooking school next week, but of expressing their own opinions on these important topics. Mrs. Vaughn invites discussion, and questions. She says, "My most intelligent audiences are those who ask most questions." A question box will be a feature of the Cooking school. Any woman attending the school, who does not have an opportunity of asking her questions during the lecture-demonstration hour, or perhaps does not care to, may write it out and place it in the question box. These queries will be taken out, head aloud and answered each afternoon. Monday's program will be announced in tomorrow's issue.

AMERICAN TELLS OF ESCAPE FROM MINE

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.] Dawson, N. M., Oct. 24.—"I was working with my two sons, when suddenly our lamps went out," said Ambrose Stringer, one of the Americans rescued from the mine. "We were half a mile from the entrance and dragged ourselves to safety, but the gas was so thick we could not have stood it much longer. I don't see how any of the men behind us could have survived."

"Four others and myself ran a mile and a half and managed to get out," said Wesley Bartee, another of the American survivors. "First we heard a deep roar and then we felt a terrific wind, laden with gas, which blew over us. It is impossible than any of those
