SECRETARY JABS P. L. CARNEGIE.

HERE IS NO SUCH THING as a steel trust in the United States. We have this on the word of P. L. Carnegie, Mr. Schwab and many others that ought to know. Still there are some things that to the unprejudiced mind appear to give the lie to this statement. Only a short time ago Secretary Daniels was compelled to advertise for certain steel to be used in the construction of battleship No. 39. He let it be understood that he would insist that there must be competition, or he would not accept any bids. His action was highly successful, several bids being submitted, the lowest showing a saving in a contract of more than $100,000 of $187,04. Of course there was no collusion and no evidence of the fine Italian hand of the steel trust, which P. L. Carnegie insists does not exist.

A little later the secretary was compelled to advertise for armor for this same battleship, and here is where the fine work of the public benefactor and library dispenser became apparent. There were plenty of firms to bid on common steel work, but when it came to armor there were only three firms in the United States that could make it. They were the Midvale, Carnegie and Bethlehem companies. Of these only two bid. One put in a bid for $162,000, and the other a bid for $169,000. This showed keen competition, but the American representatives of a big foreign firm that old P. L. and the others had not counted on, for the reason that the government under the immaculate Teddy, as well as those who preceded him had refused to entertain foreign bids, turning itself over to these rapacious land pirates to be plundered at their pleasure. Secretary Daniels looked at it as a matter of business to buy in the cheapest market, or at least not to permit the P. L. gang to rob the government at will. He considered the foreign bid, which was for $55,000, or just one-third the price P. L. Carnegie would have held the government up for. It was real mean on the part of the secretary to act that way, and the steel trust set up a howl that could be heard from Youkers to San Diego, because it was being deprived of its long acknowledged and inalienable right to rob Uncle Sam at every opportunity. It can be seen that old P. L. can well afford to give away libraries, when he can hold Uncle Sam up for more than $100,000 velvet on a job other folks were willing to do, and could have made money by doing, for $55,000. There is no steel trust, just a private agreement by which the gang of robbers are bound together, and the only law that they recognize is the tie that binds.

BEEF FROM ARGENTINA.

HERE IS TALK of a regular supply of refrigerated beef from Argentina, and as it may come in free of duty, its cost can no longer be heaped upon the tariff. The supply in Argentina is ample, standing in government reports at 30,000,000 cattle, and 65,000,000 sheep. Its cattle ranch area is enormous, and who journey up its great rivers, which ships may ascend, are struck by the low price of beef obtained by those who raise it. Yet only 50,000,000 acres are under cultivation in a total of 728,000,000 suitable for pasture or raising crops. Argentina is decidedly expansive. Next to Paris, the city of Buenos Ayres contains the largest population of Latin descent. The immigration to Argentina is 250,000 a year. Nearly one-third of the present population are Italians, an industrious race. A temperate climate promotes business enterprise. There will be plenty of room for new cattle growers for the next century, and the facilities for distribution of products are unusually good.

Nevertheless, consumers should not be too sanguine about a reduction in the cost of meats as a result of importation from Argentina and Australia. It is true that meats will come in free of duty and that refrigerating methods on ships are successful. But there have been cases where the duty has been taken off of articles in common use and an advance in their cost followed. In fact, it has seldom happened in such cases that the consumer realized that there had been a change in prices. Somehow the difference is absorbed by middlemen or by syndicates who are first to get an advantage in the readjustment. Beef from Argentina in quality is not equal to that raised in the United States, yet it would serve a purpose if it were delivered at prices anywhere near those prevailing along the Argentine rivers that can be penetrated for long distances by refrigerating ships. But when this happens larks may be gathered up and roasted, for the skies will have fallen. Watch and see what takes place in the beef of Argentina and mutton of Australia.

Massachusetts is setting the pace in the political way this year. The Democrats struck from the platform a plank endorsing the Wilson administration, and the same day the Republican candidate tore up the party platform and stuck the pieces in the office stove. A few days ago the Republican candidate got after the Progressive nominee, Bird, a wealthy manufacturer, whom Roosevelt had been pointing out as a philanthropist and showed that his products were all so protected by patents, that he had no opposition and that instead of granting his employees an eight-hour day of his own motion, as Roosevelt claimed he had done, that he was working them from nine and a half to ten hours, and was getting cheap notoriety for what he had not done. The old wooden nutmeg ballwicket is sure getting into the split-shirt class politically.

The efforts to reform such women as Mrs. Effie Crowwell are, perhaps, commendable and show great-heartedness, but it is a dead waste of material and time. A woman who will deliberately plan to murder a dozen or more people without any provocation whatsoever, is beyond the reach of reformation. All that can be done with her is to put her where she can do no more harm. Trying to reform her is much like the old farmer's little Jersey bull that, with head down and tail up, charged down the railroad track to tackle an oncoming locomotive. "Go it, you little cuss," yelled the farmer, "I admire your pluck, but darn your judgment."

ECONOMY IS DISCUSSED BY COOKING EXPERT IN HER ADDRESS

A very large and enthusiastic audience greeted Mrs. Vaughn at The Capital Journal Cooking School this afternoon. The audience was made up largely of women who have been attending the school all week, and who seem to feel that they should not miss a single opportunity of hearing Mrs. Vaughn and of seeing her cook. They evidently find the main auditorium of the armory a very pleasant and profitable place in which to spend the afternoon, and it would seem that many social engagements are being canceled this week. The Capital Journal is highly gratified with the way in which the Salem women have taken hold of this cooking school proposition. The plan to give the housewives of Salem a practical course of domestic science lectures and cooking lessons has been much appreciated by the women of Salem, and both Mrs. Vaughn and the management of the school feel that it has been altogether worth while.

Various Phases of Economy.

Mrs. Vaughn in her lecture on economy today talked about many things, besides merely saving money. She said just as important as economy of dollars and cents is economy of strength, youth and interest. She thinks the woman who devotes all of her time to keeping her house spotlessly clean is not always the most comfortable kind of wife and mother and sometimes fails to make her home the center of attraction for her family. She said that the boy and girl whose home is too good for rough every day usage, will find some place else in which to give vent to their activities, and it may not always be a safe place. Mrs. Vaughn suggested too, that men do not allow their business to deprive them of all recreation, nor the pursuit of certain intellectual interests, and there is no reason why a woman should devote herself to the business of housekeeping, to the exclusion of everything else in the world. She will even do her housework, according to Mrs. Vaughn's ideas, when she is interested in some outside activities.

Served Left-Over Chicken.

Mrs. Vaughn demonstrated some of her theories in regard to economy in providing for the table by making a dainty and delicious dish out of the chicken left over from yesterday's menu. Mrs. Vaughn said this is the secret of the French woman's reputation for being the best and most economical cook in the world. She saves every scrap left over from one meal and prepares it daintily for the next. The chicken a la King, served in timbale molds and bread cases was a very fine sample of left-overs prepared in a dainty and appetizing fashion. Mrs. Vaughn made another of her beautiful and delicious salads today which she called cucumber aspic. It had the appearance of clear, green, jelly and on the top bloomed a flaming red peynsetta, made by Mrs. Vaughn's skilled fingers. With this dainty luncheon Mrs. Vaughn served a distinctively Southern kind of biscuit. These were beaten biscuits and Salem women were delighted indeed to learn how to make them.

Made Rare Cake.

As promised, Mrs. Vaughn made a fruit cake today, according to a rare old Japanese recipe which Mrs. Vaughn explained was given to her by a grateful Japanese cook, whom she met in her travels, and which she said, he had learned in the royal kitchen of Japan, and he also claimed that this cake was a great favorite of the late Mikado. It certainly ought to be a favorite with royalty or any one else. Everybody who had the pleasure of tasting it today said it was the crowning triumph of the cake-baking art and Salem housewives appreciated Mrs. Vaughn's generosity in giving them this recipe, as well as baking this cake for them to eat. Indeed Salem house-

FALLING HAIR MEANS DANDRUFF IS ACTIVE

Save Your Hair! Get a 25-Cent Bottle of Danderine Right Now—Also Stops Itching Scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf. There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

wives are appreciating every one of Mrs. Vaughn's recipes. They have been testing them in their own kitchens and report that they are just as easy as can be to follow, and just as Mrs. Vaughn predicted, they met with success in every case.

Some of the women of the cooking school, in the pleasant after-meeting, which they hold around Mrs. Vaughn's table every afternoon, laughingly declared that their husbands were all extravagant in their praise of Mrs. Vaughn's methods. They claim they never had so many good things to eat, because of The Capital Journal Cooking School, and one woman said today "My husband believes the men of Salem should send a memorial of appreciation to Mrs. Vaughn."

Pies Promised for Tomorrow.

Friday's lecture will be on "A Man's Dinner," and Mrs. Vaughn today promised that this will be a great deal more interesting and entertaining than it sounds.

The menu for tomorrow will include—

WOODEN SHOE INDUSTRY.

In this country beech is the favorite material for wooden shoes, the manufacture of which has reached considerable proportions in the United States according to the department of agriculture, which has just issued a bulletin on the use of the wood. These shoes, the department says, cost from 60 to 75 cents a pair and are good for two years. They are worn by those who have to work in cold or wet places such as tanneries, breweries, and livery stables, and by workmen in steel mills and glass factories who must walk on hot grates or floors. Farmers, too are pleased among the users.

Beech wood is put to a very much wider range of uses than the average person would be likely to suspect. The department says beech enters into hundreds of articles from hobby-horse rockers to butcher's blocks. We walk on beech floors, eat off beech picnic plates, carry beech baskets, play with beech toys, sit on beech chairs, and in dozens of other ways use articles made of beech almost every day of our lives. Its freedom from taste fits the wood especially for articles which come in contact with foodstuffs, and beech meat boards, skewers, hand tubs, butter boxes, sugar hogheads, refrigerators, dishes, spoons, and scoops are widely used. Only one species of beech grows naturally in the United States, but few trees in this country have a wider commercial range. It extends from the Gulf of Mexico into eastern Canada, and in practically every place where it grows it is cut for market. The total yearly output of beech wood in the United States is approximately 500,000,000.

LAXATIVE FOR OLD PEOPLE!—"CASCARETS"

Salts, Calomel and Pills Act on Liver and Bowels Like Pepper Acts in Nostrils—Danger!

Get a 10-cent box now.

Most old people must give to the bowels some regular help, else they suffer from constipation. The condition is perfectly natural. It is just as natural as it is for old people to walk slowly. For age is never so active as youth. The muscles are less elastic. And the bowels are muscles.

So all old people need Cascarets. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect this gentle aid to weak bowels. The bowels must be kept active. This is important at all ages, but never so much as at fifty. Age is not a time for harsh physics. Youth may occasionally whip the bowels into activity. But a lash can't be used every day. What the bowels of the old need is a gentle and natural tonic. One that can be constantly used without harm. The only such tonic is Cascarets, and they cost only 10 cents per box at any drug store. They work while you sleep.
