SILENCED BY A LOOK.

Gladstone's Burning Eyes Rendered Blackie Speechless.

Gladstone had peculiar, eagle-like eyes. At a dinner at which he and Professor Blackie were present the two men were opposite, and when Gladstone gave in a forcible way his idea that Homer was no longer recited, but chanted, the professor cried out, "Mr. Gladstone, I don't believe a word of it!" Then he rose to argue the matter and said one sentence, but got no further. He had met Gladstone's gaze and seen his outer eyelids widened to their fullness in a steady glare, and his tongue stumbled, and he sank back into his chair in confusion. The writer concludes: "Go to the man for it. Take your umbrella. Make your way to the place where eagles, vultures, falcons and such like creatures blink on their perches. Select a bird. Stare at him with insult and you will see the outer lids expand as Mr. Gladstone's did. Poke at him with your umbrella. The filmy vertical lids through which he looks at the sun and opens to paralyze his prey will part, and then you will see what Blackie saw and understand his feelings."

A committee of the Oregon bar association having found a lawyer guilty of professional crookedness, he was terribly punished—suspended for thirty days. But the supreme court may reduce it to thirty minutes.

THE OPEN FORUM

The Capital Journal invites public discussion in this department—Let both sides of all matters be fully brought out—it is not the purpose of this newspaper to do the thinking for its readers.

AS OTHERS SEE US

To the Editor Daily Capital Journal: In the issues of your paper of the 11th, 12th and 13th, you used much space in attacking and attempting to belittle one of Oregon's and the nation's best friends.

Carefully have I read and reread the articles in an honest endeavor to divine the motive, but without avail, unless it be jealousy on your part of his success in life as compared to some others, or jealousy due to the nice reception given him by the Portland people, and the reference to him by the Portland papers as the "Empire builder."

The Capital Journal wants to know the Empires he has builded.

He has aided Minnesota in his network of roads. His roads spread out over Montana and Wyoming and across Northern Idaho, thereby opening these states to homestead settlers, and has brought the lands and their products nearer good markets. When his roads reached Portland, that fact alone helped Montana, Wyoming, Idaho, Washington and the city of Portland, and the state of Oregon, and as soon as the Panama canal is completed, will be of advantage to the people of New York, in furnishing better markets and better facilities; and to Portland merchants alone, opened a great territory for trade. The coming of the Oregon Electric aided Salem in giving it two railroad systems. It aided all the people in the valley.

In making these statements, would not for one moment detract from the benefit brought to the state by the Southern Pacific. It is a great railroad, and Mr. Harriman, who, in his lifetime, was at its head was not only a great man from a railroad point of view, but he was big and broad from a national standpoint; and I also think the Southern Pacific, under its present management, is of untold benefit to the people of Oregon, and except for the influence of such articles as those that I am referring to recently published in your paper, could be of greater benefit; but because this is so; does not Mr. Hill make any the less grateful for the things he has accomplished.

You say: "Jim Hill built his railroads for the purpose of enriching Jim Hill." Does that fact render him any the less an "Empire builder," and make him unworthy of public notice and decent courteous treatment? Horace Greely extended the influence of the Tribune, nation wide; and grew rich in the act. Did it make him any the less a patriot?

What are you running The Capital Journal for, the good of Salem or for your own wallet? We are all more or less selfish, but along with our own selfish notions can usually be found something of public good in all of us, if close search is made, and so with Mr. Hill, or while endeavoring to make a good investment for himself he aided ten thousand others to do likewise, and brought benefits to several millions, and among other things, gave The Capital Journal something to write about though the opportunity was very badly abused.

The Capital Journal seems to think that Mr. Hill owns 800,000 acres in Oregon, and on this should reduce the price. I dare say Mr. Hill does not own one acre of the 800,000; but presume others, along with his son do, and these acres now are far from transportation facilities, and will only be made available by large expenditures of money.

Will you put up the immediate cost to bring these acres closer to the intending settler, and make them desirable for homes?

I am frank to say, I hope the Hills will make good money on the purchase of these lands, for then they will have more money to invest in other worthy enterprises that the people desire developed; but you, judging from your articles, would like to see the Hills go broke.

The Southern Pacific, which has large holdings in Oregon, is of vast benefit to Salem, and you do not make that system of any greater benefit to your people by belittling those who own other properties there. I know there are some who imagine they grow greater as others are pulled down. I doubt the correctness of that theory.

Your attacks on Mr. Hill, instead of aiding Salem, only tend to hurt Salem, and do not increase the influence of your paper for good.

Your newspaper space is too valuable for the use you put it to.

COMPLAINS OF TAXES.

Ed. Capital Journal: What's the matter with the old town; where are we going to stop? Taxes for 1913 at 15.5 mills, and the end not yet in sight. Talk about your prosperity, your Commercial club and your booster organizations which are supposed to lend their efforts to advance the best interests of Salem; how are you going to explain the present tax rate? It can't be did. The fellow who comes from the east to make his home in our midst will pass us up like a disease, and beat it for a community which affords equal environments at a less cost. The administration as conducted is doing its best to destroy our splendid city by smothering it with taxes, and the end is not yet in sight. What's the use of our being surrounded by an agricultural community ready and willing to dump its gold in our lap, what's the use of improving our city, what's the use in boosting, if we are going to be penalized for our thrift? What's the use in building homes when it is cheaper to live in rented houses; what's the use of existing in a community where the tax collector grabs everything in sight? What's the use of living at all and being miserable? Why not commit suicide and be at rest? We are at the mercy of the egg, milk, meat and every other kind of a dog-gone trust, catching us coming and going, and when we are all through the tax collector takes what's left and leaves us with both legs cut off making a race with the devil mounted on a motorcycle. I don't know how the rest of you sleepyheads feel about it; standing the gaff year by year like a fellow dying from slow tuberculosis, but I for one would like to see a material change. There is either neglect in our administration or extravagance, or both, both are equally bad. If our present form of government is out of kilter, why in the name of common sense don't the people make a change, it couldn't be worse, and perhaps might be a whole lot better. There's going to be something doing in the old town some day, and when our good citizens wake up, they will change the whole form of government, and put a head to its affairs similar to any other business institution. What the city needs is a manager who knows how to manage, and not a lot of men who haven't the time or the ability to do their full duty as citizens, and they cannot be expected to do it gratis. Salem ought to be conducted like any other business enterprise, cutting off the leaks and unnecessary expenses, hiring men who are competent and tying the can to a lot of barnacles, who are everlastingly waiting for pay day to roll around. I understand that the old administration left office with little or no debt; this has been increased to over $40,000—and why? What's the use of making an annual budget if it is not going to be respected? Exceeding legal limitations of the charter is malfeasance in office, and any one guilty should be compelled to ride with a martingale and not an over check rein.

Your paper seems to be anxious to expose the people's cause, then why don't you do it? Do it in such a way that extravagances will cease, and, perhaps a long-suffering public will take pleasure in the thought and feeling that after all, the owning of one's own home, not alone adds pleasure and happiness, but it is cheaper than paying rent.

This is a discussion worth opening, and I would like to have your editorial views on the subject. Anything in the shape of relief would be welcome.

Three men were sent to the state prison from Ashland Tuesday, F. C. Burns for murder; A. G. Fuller, for a statutory crime and John Odin for the same offense. They are under indeterminate sentences of from one to three years.

The fate of the "Tango" in Portland is in the hands of "City Dance Inspector" Flack, whose decision on its moral or immoral features will decide whether it is to be tangoed in that city of saints.

Mayor Palmer, of Baker, says he can find no evidence of law violation in that city as reported by Governor West's special agent, who from all accounts was the worst of a very mild gang of so-called undesirables in that city.

The first "tango" dance to be held in Portland was that at the Hotel Oregon Monday night. It was pulled off by the society swells.

Two saloons were set on fire at Copperfield early Tuesday morning, but neither was much damaged. The mayor has offered a reward of $500 for the arrest and conviction of the guilty party.

Two full townships of land are to be thrown open for settlement in the northern Lake county, December 15.

William P. Benedict and Rodger Benedict, father and son, became benedicts at the same hour at Pendleton when they married Anna Whalen and Clara Meyers in a double ceremony. All are residents of Pendleton.

An enthusiastic membership contest for commercial club recruits is in progress at Brownsville.

At a "book reception" given by the high school and faculty at Hermiston last week, 120 volumes were donated for the school library.

Gallant and truthful testimonial in the "Star Herald": "The way the women's clubs are aiding the movement for making every one happy in Baker county indicates the usefulness of such organizations."

The Eugene Register surmises that a big black bear that peeped in at the window of a Lorane residence not long ago might have been the one that once upon a time went over the mountain on a far famed quest for knowledge.

Madford Sun: The Harvard men can now cease to glare ferociously at Yale men. They had no glare coming, for the Yale fruitgrowers of the valley outshipped Harvard orchardists two cars and gained 15 boxes on them yesterday.

Shaniko Star: Mike, a 48-year-old Tennessee mule, has just died at Springfield, Greensburg, Indiana, has a bearing apple tree that was planted in 1823.
