The Markets

More hops changed hands Thursday than for several days past, 1,500 bales being reported sold. The activity centered in Washington where stocks have been reduced to a small compass. Prices ranged from 16 to 17 cents. The bulk of these were for the English market. Lee Loy, of Clatsop, sold 271 bales at 17 1/2 cents, which is the only Oregon sale reported. It is claimed Washington now has but 1,900 bales, with Oregon holding 14,000 and California, if the Sonoma consignment of 4,000 bales is made, about 8,000. The wool market is active and it is estimated that the past week's transaction to 2,225,000 pounds. Butter is slightly lower with supplies accumulating. Eggs are a cent lower, sales yesterday being at 24 cents. Wheat is unchanged, but firm.

NO USE OF CODDLING FIGHTERS, SAYS EXPERT

Experience Is Only Teacher and Sooner They Get Up Against Good Men the Better for Them.

CARL MORRIS A NEXAMPLE OF GOING SLOW IN FIGHTING GAME

Kaufman's Experience an Altogether Different One and He Jumped Right After Slugger.

BY W. W. NAUGHTON.
[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.]
San Francisco, Feb. 20.—Some fighters are coddled along and some are sent into good company the instant they show evidence of class. When the suspicion developed that Carl Morris of Oklahoma, might one day develop into a world beater all kinds of precautions were taken to safeguard him while he was learning the trade of the ring. A millionaire took hold of him and furnished him with experienced tutors in addition to building a gymnasium for him. When big Carl was finally launched on the sea of professional pugilism he bumped into all kinds of rocks—both charted and uncharted. He has been laid up for repairs frequently and now they are talking of sending him against Sam Langford.

This time, in all probability, the Oklahoma battleship will be sunk completely and all the pontoons and cofferdams in the world will be powerless to raise or float him. Bob McAllister, too, was sent along slowly and what happened to him when he got into the full swirl of tinks in the east suggests that the time spent in pampering and protecting a promising pugilist is merely time lost. Kaufman's Case Different.

Al Kaufman had a totally different experience. Al, in his four-round days, was known as "One-Round" Kaufman and it was prophesied that he would cut a full width swath when slipped from the leash as a professional. First they sent him against Harry Foley, but it looked as if mild mannered Harry had simply lent himself to the occasion to prove that Al had it right to be called "One-Round" Kaufman.

Without delay Kaufman was matched with Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, who in those years was both a slasher and a stinger. O'Brien laughed when they told him what a terror Kaufman had proved as an amateur. "I can defeat any man who has not at least two years' experience in the professional ring," said O'Brien. Jack gave the stalwart young San Franciscan a hiding which in all probability had its influence on the balance of Al's career.

Billy Murray is Promising.
San Francisco has another promising young boxer in the person of Middleweight Billy Murray and he is being hurried along in the same manner as Kaufman. On next Monday afternoon at Coffroth's Daily City arena Murray will face Leo Houck of Philadelphia, a fighter who has won his spurs in contests with the very best men in the middleweight ranks today. It certainly is a hard test for Murray but, despite what happened to Kaufman, it is surprising to note the number of wise judges who consider that Murray is able to take care of himself in any kind of company. Murray, like Kaufman, is a product of the four-round shows. For months past he has been the bright particular star of the Friday night game. Incidentally the four-round phase of pugilism is one in which a fighter is thoroughly tried out. Very often a cub boxer becomes popular for a while and then drifts away to join those who have been tried and found wanting.

Murray has stood every test and the best proof that he is still in favor with the patrons of the weekly boxing exhibitions is found in the fact that Coffroth has decided to match him against one of the best middleweights to be found.

COACH DOBIE HERE FOR VISIT WITH DR. SWEETLAND

Coach Gilmore Dobie, of the University of Washington football and basketball teams, was in Salem last evening and enjoyed a visit with Coach Sweetland, of Willamette university. Dobie has had wonderful success with his football teams. Until a game is played he is the most pessimistic man at the university as to the ability of the team to do anything. No one has ever heard of over-confidence in his vicinity, and the result has not been disappointing. Dobie came down with the Washing-

WEALTHY MURDERER WILL PLEAD INSANITY

Man Who Murdered His Wife and Tried to Kill Himself Has Told Conflicting Stories.

ONE STORY WAS THAT SHE WAS IN LOVE WITH ANOTHER

At Inquest He Admitted She Was Pure and Sweet and He Did Not Know Why He Did It.

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.]
Chicago, Feb. 20.—William Cheney Ellis, who played the leading role in a domestic tragedy more gripping than any of the season's problem plays, was arraigned today for the murder of his wife, Eleanor, whom he shot and then cruelly slashed in the fashionable Hotel Sherman on October 16, 1913. Ellis, a wealthy harness manufacturer, formerly of Cincinnati, was represented today by Attorney George Renus. The defense will be emotional insanity. A livid scar across his throat and two jagged, white marks upon his wrists, he said, were the only evidence he had to recall what happened in the hotel suite the morning of the killing. Supported by two court bailiffs, Ellis pleaded not guilty. The defendant trembled violently and was unable to stand unassisted.

"I wouldn't care what happened to me if weren't for the children," has been his constant statement since he was transferred from a hospital to the county jail. "There are two little girls, and I want to live long enough to make some provision for them."

Effect of Problem Play.
Two lines of evidence, both tending to support the emotional insanity defense, will be offered by the defense, was indicated when court opened today. One will be Ellis' own statement that he discovered his wife was in love with another man and that this knowledge so crazed him that he planned her murder. The other, perhaps used for the first time in a murder trial in this country, will seek to show the probable effect witnessing the powerful eugenics play, "Damaged Goods," would have upon the brain of a man, who, according to physicians, is diseased as was the principal figure in the Brixen drama.

Mrs. Ellis came to Chicago from Cincinnati several days preceding the murder and went to the home of friends, Ellis arrived two days later, rather unexpectedly. They then made trips downtown to cafes and to the theatres. On the night of October 14 they saw "Damaged Goods," then its first week's run in Chicago and the topic of universal comment.

As if to neutralize its terrifying scenes they went the next night to see a performance of "The Road to Happiness," a rural drama that epitomized domestic happiness.

MURDER IS DISCOVERED.

On the following morning, a house detective hurried to the Ellis suite at the Hotel Sherman, overlooking the city hall. He went in response to a frightened voice over the telephone and bursting in the door discovered Ellis, half-conscious, leaning against a chair, with blood gushing from a wound in his neck and two slashes across his wrists. Mrs. Ellis lay dead in bed, a gaping wound in her neck and two bullet holes in her breast.

The first police theory was that it was a suicide pact and Ellis' unintelligent answers to questions supported it. Later, confronted with evidence showing that his wife could not have killed herself from the nature of the wounds, Ellis confessed, and in a broken voice cried out that his wife had been unfaithful to him, that she came to Chicago to meet a lover from a Canadian city—and that when he obtained evidence of her unfaithfulness he followed her to Chicago, feted her like a bridegroom on a honeymoon, and then deliberately killed her.

Admits He Is Liar.
At the coroner's inquest, Ellis caused a sensation by springing to his feet and dramatically declaring that he lied when he accused his wife.

"She was the sweetest, purest woman in the world," he cried. "I don't know why I did it."

The jury held Ellis guilty and he was subsequently indicted. Following his indictment, he suddenly repudiated his statement at the inquest and again announced that he killed his wife, because she was unfaithful to him. Nearly 100 witnesses, many of them from Cincinnati were in court today when the selection of the jury began.

WHO WANTS TO BE A MAYOR?

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.]
Chicago, Feb. 20.—Advertisements appeared in many papers throughout the state today, announcing that any person who cared to become a mayor of a town could do so if he cared to buy the town of Saunders, N. D. W. W. Cook, the present owner and mayor of the town has tired of the job and wants to sell out to some other more desirous of political honors. Saunders sprung up almost in a night when the St. Paul railroad crossed Cook's farm. A station was established there and shortly afterward two grain elevators arose and later followed a couple of stores. As Cook retained title to the land, he became the duly recognized mayor and his title will fall upon his successor.

DRAMATIC NEWS

McIntyre and Heath will be the attraction at the Grand next Saturday in John Cort's elaborate revival of George V. Hobart and Jean Schwartz' highly successful musical comedy, "The Ham Tree." The assertion that James McIntyre is today one of the best known entertainers of the American stage would probably meet with a chorus of inquiry as to who Mr. McIntyre might be. The inquirers would include many who know themselves well informed on matters theatrical. But the added assertion that Thomas Kurton Heath belongs in exactly the same category, and the familiar association of names brings a nod of recognition from the reader and a smile in remembrance of McIntyre and Heath. Beginning under the white circus tents about forty years ago, McIntyre and Heath have passed successfully through circus variety-minstrel, farce, comedy, vaudeville and into musical comedy, and the echo of mirth has always been resounding behind them as they passed on.
