CAPITAL JOURNAL FORGES AHEAD.

THE Capital Journal is going to have a new home in a brand new building fitted expressly for the publication of the paper. The Journal will have a new modern fast press and new equipment and the news service will be greatly enlarged. The prosperity, enterprise and the progress of Salem's leading newspaper will be a big boost for the Capital City. No institution nor enterprise gives more, helps more, and does more for the town and country than the live newspaper. We venture the assertion that Salem will be proud of The Capital Journal when she gets on her new clothes.—Corvallis Daily Republican.

In Multnomah and several other counties of the state action is being taken to force the county treasurers to accept payment of taxes under the provisions of the old law, which provided for semi-annual installments. It is to be hoped that these efforts will succeed since it is an unnecessary hardship upon taxpayers to compel them to pay the full amount at this time of the year, when money is scarce and there is no need for the money in the county treasuries.

There are too many unsightly bill-boards in Salem, and the city council should take the necessary steps to restrict and regulate them. They are especially undesirable in the residence districts where, in many cities, they would not be allowed at all. Salem can never be the beautiful Capital City we all hope it will be some day with glaring bill-boards occupying the most conspicuous vacant lots.

There is a fair prospect that the Shackleford roads bill may eventually pass congress. It provides that $25,000,000 be turned over annually to the state governments to be used for the construction of post roads. The states, or sub-divisions thereof, are compelled to pay as much per mile as the government.

Now that the baseball stars are safely home from their trip around the world the country will breathe easier. Less important matters, like the Panama canal tolls question and Mexican mix-up may now claim the attention of our citizenship.

CHAMBERLAIN INDORSED CHURCHILL PLEASD WITH WORK DONE
ABIGAIL SCOTT DUNIWAY SAYS HIS COURSE MUST FILL EVERY WOMAN WITH PRIDE.

"The fact that a man of the character and ability of Senator George E. Chamberlain should lead the movement for national suffrage for women on the floor of the senate must fill every woman of Oregon with pride and patriotism," said Abigail Scott Duniway, recently.

Mrs. Duniway referred to Wednesday's session of the United States senate when the Oregon senator championed the cause of woman's suffrage in a speech and spoke in support of the proposed constitutional amendment to give women the vote in all states.

"By that speech," continued Mrs. Duniway, "he becomes the leader of the suffrage movement not only for Oregon, but for the entire nation as well. Senator Chamberlain deserves high praise for what he has done for us, in congress, and while governor. As long as there was opposition in congress I have felt that it would be wiser to continue the fight for the vote in the states. I have not approved of national suffrage method of bombardment congress.

Make Progress Slowly.
"It has appeared better to me to take state by state, and go a little slow. Young people are aggressive and enthusiastic but then they have not had to wait for 42 years for the vote as I have.

"If women wish to accomplish anything with men they must make the men feel that they are doing it and not the women. The strings must be kept out of sight."

Mrs. Duniway is now engaged in writing a history of the suffrage movement in the northwest, her personal recollections of the struggle as well as intimate sketches of some of the prominent personages of the last generation. The book will be amply illustrated and will relate the franchise fight in Mrs. Duniway's "ballad": Oregon, Washington and Idaho," as Oregon's grand old woman puts it.

Mrs. Duniway is spending the greater portion of each day on her book. Recently, however, she spoke at the luncheon of the Progressive club at the Portland hotel, eulogizing Senator Chamberlain for his stand on the suffrage question.

Senator's Tribute Surprises.
Senator Chamberlain's tribute to Mrs. Duniway made in his speech Wednesday from the floor of the senate came as a surprise to the suffrage leader. "For a woman to be thus honored from the floor of the senate," she said, "was a signal honor which I never hoped to expect."

Mrs. Duniway will probably devote her energies to combating the prohibition movement following the completion of her book. She looks on compulsory prohibition as pernicious and ill-advised, although an ardent believer in temperance. "The temperance question," she said, "is a personal one. It is each one for himself. Because one man has the smallpox should we put the whole community in the pest house? The strictly temperate life is the right kind of life but man can never make laws that improve on those of God."

PROBLEM OF THE JOBLESS MAN.

IN one of the big cities is a man who for 20 years has been running a 10-cent lodging house, says the Fargo, N. D., News. Let's call him Smith.

In that time Smith has sheltered probably 200,000 hard-up men, many of 'em close to the class of "down and outers."

Smith isn't rich, though he is not in business for his health. Twenty years daily contact hadn't casehardened him. His heart often overrides his head.

The other night a line of applicants for shelter filed past, many without the price of a bed.

"Hold up your foot!" Smith commanded—this to each of those who couldn't pay.

If the sole of the foot showed through the sole of the shoe, Smith motioned him to go in—that man's literally "on his uppers," was too much for Smith's warm heart. He got a lodging free.

"How do you classify your guests?" Smith was asked.

"Ten per cent of them are hopeless wrecks," he said. "Another 10 per cent are booze victims, drug victims, vice victims—pretty far gone; too far to be able to brace up without steady and patient help. But 80 per cent have simply lost their nerve because of the haunting uncertainty of employment. They are men who would make good if they could get steady jobs at fair wages and with fair treatment."

In this connection, we note with interest that there is soon to be a national conference on unemployment. Not national in an official sense, but only in the fact that many cities and states will be represented unofficially.

Some do not believe that the past winter is really so much worse than its predecessors in this matter of unemployment. Those who do fail to agree as to the reason, or frankly give it up. Republican politicians are freely blaming it all on Democratic sins, committed or expected. A Democratic paper, the Newark (N. J.) Star, sees industrial enterprise flourishing, and has "no doubt that the railroad companies, by stopping improvements, throwing tens of thousands of men out of work, are the principal cause of unemployment." Socialists tell us that a "high tariff, low tariff or no tariff, currency reform or no currency reform, your conditions are just the same and must remain the same until the necessary means of life are owned by those who use them." Most non-Socialist papers, however, agree that unemployment is in large part "due to failure to get the man and the job together." As the New York World observes:

"Every summer our farmers suffer for lack of help at high wages with good board. Every winter our cities fill with idle men, for some of whom there is work if they knew where to look for it. Humanity has no greater task than that of cutting down seasonal idleness and enabling the willing man out of work to find a task if there is one waiting for him anywhere. After this has been attended to, it will be time for greater severity toward those whose real ambition is to live without working."

Anyway, the national convention idea is a worth-while start toward a solution too long neglected in this country; but let us hope it won't be high-browed; let us hope there will be plenty of Smiths on the program—men who know what unemployment is.

It isn't enough to say as former President Taft said: "God knows what to do about the unemployed."

It is Uncle Sam's task to find out; and to act.

WOOL SELLS AT ADVANCE.
PENDLETON, Or., March 6.—Receiving a cent more per pound than the same grade of wool brought last year at this time, the Cunningham Sheep & Land company has just sold 26,000 pounds of buck wool to R. F. Bicknell & Co., of Philadelphia. This is the first wool sale of the season in Umatilla county. The price paid was 13 cents.

In speaking of the deal J. N. Burgess, president of the Cunningham company, said: "The wool this year was 60 per cent from the old bucks and 40 per cent from young bucks. Last year 75 per cent of our buck wool was from young bucks. Therefore it was better grade and the price received this year is an advance. The buyers discount the old buck wool one third but take the young buck wool at the market price. I estimate that we received a cent more for the wool than we did last year."

This telegraphic news item shows how unduly excited the sheep-men were over the free wool clause of the tariff bill. With a law, which is now prepared, compelling manufacturers to use wool instead of shoddy in all woolen goods they make, the sheep-
