

SLEUTH KAY IS QUITTER

SHERLOCK HOLMES DROPS OUT OF THE TREASURER'S RACE BY FAILING TO FILE.

Secretary Olcott kept the office force at work until midnight last night cleaning up the grist of petitions. Up to that hour the telephone wires between Salem and Portland were kept hot by candidates inquiring about "my petition." Even after the secretary got home he was called up by the frantic ones, who having a month or two to get their work done put it off until the last day in the evening.

There were only 10 who failed to get their petitions perfected and most of these dropped out intentionally.

Tom Kay, the Sherlock Holmes, failed to file his petition and this leaves Thomas B. Kay with no opponent of any party.

Alfred L. Pankhurst, James E. Appleby, Edward D. Uhrich; George A. Johnston and S. J. Silverman, all republican candidates for the lower house of the legislature from Multnomah county, failed to file.

W. L. Robb, candidate for national committeeman and a republican, is out of the race. R. E. Basel, republican candidate for joint representative from Clatsop and Multnomah, fell down. John Osterman, democrat from Coos county, and candidate for congress, drew out, and Fred E. Harrison, democrat, candidate for representative from Linn county, will stay out of the race.

DEATH NOTICES.

GILE.

Mrs. John Gile, who with her husband has been spending the winter in Salem at the home of her niece, Mrs. R. Gile at 535 North Winter street, died this morning following a stroke of paralysis of a month ago.

The deceased was about 70 years old and, with Mr. Gile, came to Salem from Smith's Falls, Ontario, last September to remain during the winter. Mrs. Gile has been in ill health for some time and the stroke of paralysis she received a few weeks ago proved too great for her physical condition to withstand.

The deceased was an aunt of H. S. Gile.

The funeral will be held from the home of Mrs. R. Gile next Monday morning at 10 o'clock and the remains will be laid to rest in City View Cemetery.

GILE.

News was received here last night to the effect that Mrs. H. S. Gile, wife of the well known local commission merchant who left some time ago after the marriage ceremony had been performed in Victoria, B. C., for a trip abroad with his bride, has died in Accachon, France. Mr. Gile married Miss Margaret Clark, formerly of Salem, and left immediately for foreign lands. Tuberculosis is said to have caused Mrs. Gile's death.

TO BE PALACE OF SWEETS

The "Gray-Belle," Salem's New Confectionery Will Open Next Monday Morning.

Neat little edifices have gone forth bearing the announcement of the opening of the new confectionery, "The Gray Belle"—which is to take place next Monday, April 13, when George W. Gray and Claude S. Belle, the popular proprietors of the place will keep open house and welcome the public to their new home.

"The Gray Belle" is to be a veritable palace of sweets, where everything this is delicious in refreshments will be served in the most fastidious manner. The location is at 440 State street, and for weeks time, money, taste and skill have been spent with a lavish hand to transform it into a miniature dreamland of delight.

The furnishings of "The Gray Belle" have been especially designed for it and will be rich in the extreme. The decorations are beautiful and uniquely suggestive of the name that has been chosen. The very latest ideas and inventions in equipment and machinery that will contribute to the excellence of the service and the quality of the dainty wares of "The Gray Belle" have been installed.

Both Mr. Gray and Mr. Belle have had long experience in the management of high class confectioneries and they propose to make "The Gray Belle" without a superior in Oregon.

W. S. Low & Co., real estate operators, have moved from their office in the Masonic temple to a ground floor location at 309 State street, where they are closer to the passing throng. They are now busy remodeling the interior of the building and will soon have a well-arranged office especially adapted to their business.

J. L. Burton, of Lebanon, has been in the city for several days on business.

GIRL FROM THIS SECTION IS ACCUSED OF FRAUD.

Medford, Or., April 11.—Miss Nellie McIntyre is in the county jail, having been bound over to the grand jury for passing bogus checks on the First National bank of Ashland. She presented eight drafts on her own account with the Hartman & Thompson bank in Portland, where it turned out that she had no money. The drafts amounted to $25 and were presented on March 31 and April 2. She was arrested at Grants Pass last Saturday. She was said to be from Independence, Or., where it is claimed she has well-to-do relatives. She has brothers living near near Salem and a brother and sister in Atlanta, Ga. They failed to come to her rescue.

Mrs. Homer Allen of Woodburn recently entertained the Misses Mary Phillips and Ivan Miller of Salem.

AN EASTER REUNION

HIGH in the church amphitheater hung the choir loft, and at its rail that bright Easter morning stood the church quartet.

The organ pealed forth the strains of the opening anthem—one of those divine compositions of Mozart which make the pulse of the righteous beat more quickly and cause the ungodly to think awry—and after it had been sung the singers took their seats, separating, the two higher voices to the right, the two lower to the left side of the organ.

Herr Steinbuch, the organist, retired behind the organ, drawing from his pocket as he did so a copy of a Sunday newspaper.

He was musical editor of the sheet and hastily scanned its pages for an article, "The Decline of the Fugue," which he had written the Friday previous—tolling far into the night that it might be concluded in time for the issue of Sunday.

The pastor began his Easter sermon, but the singers paid small heed; each was busy with his or her own thoughts.

In the eyes of Mateel Stuart, the contralto, came a faraway look as she sat beside her giant husband, the basso.

She was thinking that but three short years before she had gone from that church a bride, leaning proudly upon his arm.

And now? Yes, she was happy, she reasoned, though her stalwart husband had, unconsciously perhaps, dropped those little courtesies and attentions which usually play so delightful a part in newly wedded life.

Not that Stuart was discontented, but his lack of appreciation of the contralto was caused by a lack of thought, no doubt. Manlike, he was selfish, though it must be said of him that he had always proved what is known as a "good husband," in the commonly accepted meaning of the term.

For the first time in months Stuart thought that perhaps he did not place a sufficiently high value upon his wife when his attention was attracted to the other side of the choir loft. Something unusual was going on there apparently.

John Crayton and Marian Griffin were seated together, and the soprano was so interested in what Crayton was saying to her that she failed to note the gaze of the basso.

Marian had known Crayton for a number of years, but had never looked upon him as a suitor.

And now as she felt his breath upon her cheek, heard his earnest words, his appeal for a reply, she could only cast down her eyes until their long black lashes seemed to throw a shade over her face.

The tenor seized her hand at the conclusion of his passionate entreaty and was rewarded by a slight—a very slight—pressure, which told him that he had not pleaded in vain.

Then it was that Stuart placed his great hand upon his wife's arm and, leaning toward her, whispered gently: "My darling, I realize now that I have been neglecting you, but I have not meant to do so; it was only that I didn't think."

In the eyes of the contralto a bright love light burned, and she patted the hand of the big basso with a loving touch.

The droning of the minister suddenly ceased, and the rustling of the people below as they turned in the pews told that the sermon was at an end.

The closing hymn was announced, and when it was finished the singers walked from the organ loft arm in arm, while Herr Steinbuch exclaimed petulantly:

"Donnerwetter! The singers seem to be going to the dogs. That last hymn was given atrociously!"

But then perhaps Herr Steinbuch was annoyed because he had been unable to find "The Decline of the Fugue" in his Sunday newspaper—Virginia Harned in Philadelphia Press.

Live and Enjoy Easter. Easter, glad feast of life, belongs only to those who are alive in soul and heart and mind. Hearts buried in graves have but little share in its resurrecting thrill.

FRANK WARD ENJOYS GREAT SUCCESS WITH HIS NEW DRUG STORE

"Nothing succeeds like success." This fact has been amply demonstrated in the success which has attended the purchase by Frank L. Ward of the drug store on State street, formerly owned by J. C. Perry. Mr. Ward had many friends in the city when he purchased the Perry drug store about two months ago. He had been secretary of the Elks' lodge, and this fact in connection with his wide acquaintance owing to the many years he was previously in the drug business in Salem gave Mr. Ward an excellent start.

Mr. Ward has held responsible positions with some of the foremost drug firms in this city, and he was at all times regarded as a most valuable and competent employee. He has been a practical druggist for fourteen years, and he has at all times been alive to all things modern or progressive in the drug store line.

Mr. Ward is a native Oregonian and a graduate of the O. A. C. department of pharmacy of the O. A. C. Governor West was quick to recognize Mr. Ward's ability and appointed him a member of the State Board of Pharmacy, which position he has filled with much credit.

The Ward drug store presents a very neat appearance, Mr. Ward having made a number of improvements since he purchased the place. The line of goods carried is most complete. Besides a full line of patent medicines, Mr. Ward has a nice line of stationery, candy and many other things not carried by only the most modern of drug stores.

Mr. Ward makes a specialty of prescriptions, and his free delivery of all orders has already made his drug store most popular. On account of his location, his low rent, and because he does his own work Mr. Ward has been enabled to sell for less, and this fact has already been appreciated by all who have traded at his store and has aided materially in securing the large patronage which his drug store enjoys.
