The march was participat-ed in by half of the student body, the excitement of the student election, which is on today, attracting an unusually large number to the morning chapel service. The march left the front door of

The procession then mrached down State street to High and back to the state street to high and back to the university campus, where numerous circling and cross-marches took place. As is the custom, the seniors lead the march, with the other classes following in order.
