The Markets

LOCAL MARKETS.

The prune question is still unsettled, though the generally accepted estimate is half a crop. It is probable it will be better than this. The habit of the Italian of dropping and thinning for itself always causes the belief that it will drop about all its fruit, but it generally comes to the front with a fairly good crop under any and all conditions. The mohair market in Oregon is done for this year, all clips but a few straggling ones having been brought up. The poultry and dressed meat market is depressed due to over-supply and prices are weak. The markets are still well supplied with California strawberries, but this week will see them out of the market as the Oregon berries are beginning to come in, and next week will be in quantity to supply all demands. There is a fair demand for hogs but prices are shrinking. A few small sales are reported, one at Gervais, where 85 hales changed hands at 13 1/2 cents.

CITY OF TIAHAUNACU ANTEDATES HISTORY

Indications of a Civilization More Advanced Than That of Old Egypt.

RUINS SLOWLY CRUMBLING TO DUST THROUGH TIME

Natives Use Beautifully Cut Stones in Constructing Adobe Huts.

A city so old that even the legendary lore of the Incas, who traced an unbroken line of kings back to the eleventh century, is dumb concerning the people who built it; a city which a thousand years ago had been so long dead that even song, story and tradition had forgotten every vestige of its history when Columbus discovered the "New World." Such is the ancient city of Tiahuanacu, whose ruins are crumbling surely, but very slowly, into dust not far from the southern shore of Lake Titicaca, in Bolivia.

"The little present-day village of Tiahuanacu is located on the railroad which connects La Paz, the modern capital of Bolivia, with the port of Guayaquil on Lake Titicaca, and may be reached in about two hours from the former place. The ruins of ancient Tiahuanacu, covering an area of about a square mile, are not over a half mile from the village," writes Edward Albes in the monthly Bulletin of the Pan-American Union, Washington, D. C.

"A traveler stopping in the little town, and ignorant of the proximity of the ruins, would be astounded to observe the number of beautifully cut stones built into parts of abode huts of the most primitive character, and sometimes forming portions of a squalid patio. A doorway to a dilapidated, thatched-roof hut, may have a lintel or jamb formed by an artistically carved stone. In the walls of the little Catholic church and in those inclosing its yard, and even in the paving, may be seen these smooth stones. The pedestal on which is mounted the stone cross in front of the church is made up of them, while on either side of the gateway to the inclosure stands a carved stone idol whose lines, marred by the ravages of time, still show the artistic skill of the ancient sculptors who wrought them."

Thus the ruins of the ancient city have furnished much of the material to build the village of today, and while the strict utilitarian may find no fault with this work of destroying the artistic monuments of a hoary antiquity to cater to present needs, to the student of archaeology it seems almost like desecration. The Bolivian government has recently enacted a law which forbids the carrying off or wilful destruction of that portion of the ruins which vandal hands have left intact.

The ruins themselves include the remains of temples, palaces, and great structures of what once must have been a large and densely populated city. Not a vestige remains of the dwellings and less pretentious houses in which this population must have lived. These were naturally of a more temporary character and the relentless agents of destruction, working through countless centuries, have obliterated all traces.

The question which confronts the archaeologist is, how could a population sufficiently numerous to accomplish the building of such a city have maintained itself in this region? The ruins are located 13,000 feet above the level of the sea on a vast plateau where the constant cold prevents the maturing of corn or other grain. At present potatoes, oca, and some other edible roots are grown, but the region sustains only a scanty mountain population. The city once covered a large area, the great structures were built by skilled masons. One stone is 36 feet long by seven feet wide and weighs 170 tons, another is 26 feet by 16, and 6 feet thick. Only the monoliths of ancient Egypt equal those found in Tiahuanacu. The movement and placing of such monoliths point to a dense population, to an organized government, and consequently to a large agricultural area with means of transportation from various directions. The only tenable explanation is that at the time when Tiahuanacu flourished the Andes were from 2,000 to 3,000 feet lower than at present. Geologists hold that in the Jurassic and even in the Cretaceous period there were no Andes and that through a gradual upheaval they have been formed in more recent geological times. The bones of a mastodon have been discovered in Bolivia at an altitude of 13,000 feet above the sea, and such an animal could not have existed at such an elevation. Skeletons of gigantic ant-eaters have been found in the deserts of Tarapaca, and these could only have existed in regions of arboreal vegetation. These, and other geological facts, support the theory that the ancient city of Tiahuanacu existed when the Andes were much lower than at present, perhaps when the cave man of Britain was fighting for his life with cave bear, wild boar, and mastodon, and sketching their rude pictures on the walls of his primitive, subterranean dwelling.

LIBERTY BELL WILL BE SHIPPER TO PANAMA FAIR

Philadelphia, May 7.—Convinced there would be no danger of further fissures by a trip to San Francisco, Mayor Blankenburg, of Philadelphia, declared today he favored sending the Liberty Bell to the Panama-Pacific exposition. He said he had consulted with numerous bell casters and they were agreed that the bell could make the trip without mishap.

A monster petition signed by thousands of persons west of the Mississippi river has been presented to the city council, and its members now are almost unanimous in favor of sending the bell to San Francisco for the opening of the exposition.

SHERIFF ESCH FINDS A REMEDY FOR ALL ILLS

Epomalts is a queer remedy for carache, toothache or ingrown toenails, but that is the reason Sheriff William Esch has found to be all efficient in treating some of the prisoners in the county jail who have a habit of complaining of being ill.

This secret of Sheriff Esch's was discovered this morning when an empty bottle that would contain about half a gallon was found to be labeled "Epomalts." Inquiry brought out the knowledge that this medicine was the "panacea" that cures all ills in the estimation of the sheriff. The bottle was empty and was about to be refilled.

"You see," advised the sage of the county jail, "all the prisoners have to do is to eat and sleep, and after they are in a few days they begin to get cross and restless and complain about being sick. They just ask for a doctor and imagine they are real sick. Why, they would have the county doctor running to the jail continually if all their requests were granted.

"All right," he says to the prisoners, continued the sheriff, "get your tin- cup. I'll give you something that will cure you."

"But I don't want that stuff," whines the prisoner, says the sheriff with grim humor looking about the corners of his mouth.

"This will fix that carache, says I," says the sheriff, "and I pour out about two table spoonful of the salts. Believe me, it is a great cure for whining and complaining, and saves a great many trips for the county doctor. Of course," the sheriff added, in closing, "when a prisoner is really ill he gets the best of medical care."

SAVE YOUR EYES

Marvelous Home Treatment Does It. HEADACHES BANISHED. TRY THIS FREE PRESCRIPTION

Do your eyes ache? Do they itch and burn? Would you like to dispense with your glasses? Are you troubled with headaches? If so, here's a free prescription for you.

A New York physician comes forth with the edict that glasses must go. These windows are, in many cases, merely crutches, and you might just as well expect crutches to cure rheumatism as to expect all trouble to be cured by glasses. Many wear glasses who would not require them if they took proper care of their eyes.

This simple home remedy will astonish you after a few applications. It is absolutely harmless in every way. You may use it in a baby's eyes without the slightest fear of injury. The eyes need a bath just as do other organs. The eyes are constantly throwing off poisonous matter, and unless it is washed away, weak, inflamed eyes are apt to result.

We publish this prescription so the readers of this paper may reap benefit. Persons having granulated lids will appreciate the comfort and relief this prescription gives. Inflamed, watery eyes, or eyes which look dull and glassy, will be greatly improved after a reasonable trial of this remarkable remedy.

Do not become a victim of neglect. Cut out this prescription and go to your nearest drug store and get a box of Optona Tablets; dissolve one in two ounces bottle of pure water and apply four times daily. Note how your eyes will clear up and how refreshed they will feel. Headaches due to tired eyes quickly disappear.

You will then thank us for calling your attention to this valuable prescription. In the package you will find a valuable, instructive booklet, which gives a vast amount of interesting information pertaining to eye disorders. It should be in every home. Many who are hopelessly blind put off eye protection until it was too late.

Though Sick and Suffering; At Last Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Richmond, Pa. — "When I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was in a dreadfully rundown state of health, had internal troubles, and was so extremely nervous and prostrated that if I had given in to my feelings I would have been in bed. As it was I had hardly strength at times to be on my feet and what I did do was by a great effort. I could not sleep at night and of course felt very bad in the morning, and had a steady headache.

"After taking the second bottle I noticed that the headache was not so bad, I rested better, and my nerves were stronger. I continued its use until it made a new woman of me, and now I can hardly realize that I am able to do so much as I do. Whenever I know any woman in need of a good medicine I highly praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. FRANK CLARK, 3146 N. Tulip St., Richmond, Pa.
