Paris, June 4.—The new Chamber of Deputices, elected for the next four years, met today for the first time, the mandates of the old depaties expiring last night at midnight. The Socialists, with their 102 seats, a gain of 27 over the expiring period, held the whip hand, which fact, together with the presence of nearly 200, or 30 per cent, new members, caused Senator Georges ("Tiger") Clemenceau to remark that today "France stands face to face with the Sphinx." No one, even the professional political forecasters, can tell what will happen.
