WEST ACTS AS NURSE

GIVEN DIME TO GET FOOD

TENDS BABY AS MOTHER DINES

Governor of Oregon Cares for 18-month Old Baby for Four Days While on a Train Going East—Not Recognized.

Oswald West, governor of Oregon, acted as general nurse for four days for the 18-month-old baby of Mrs. F. G. Wing of 1205 Willamette street, according to word received by her husband, storemaster in the Oregon Power company plant, today. Mrs. Wing left Eugene a week ago Monday for the home of her parents in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. On the train out of Portland sat a man in the seat across the aisle who showed a marked interest in her baby. The baby did not resent the attention, and the two became friends. At Missoula, Montana, Mrs. Wing handed him a dime and asked him to run out and buy some graham crackers. Just as the train pulled out he rushed back breathless, almost missing the train, but without the crackers. He tried the next several towns until he got the crackers. He did not seem to mind being a messenger boy, so Mrs. Wing sent him for other things from time to time.

On the second day Mrs. Wing handed him the baby while she went into the diner for breakfast, and from then on he cared for the youngster at each meal while the mother was gone.

"By the way," asked the mother, just as the train was reaching Milwaukee, "where are you from?"

"Oh, I live in Salem, Oregon," he added, and he handed her his card. "Oswald West," it read.

Then he seized up the baby, Mrs. Wing's baggage and everything he could get into his arms as the train pulled into the Milwaukee station, and helped the Eugene woman off the cars. Mrs. Wing introduced him to her parents who were waiting at the station to meet her. As the train pulled out, he waved good bye to baby Wing.

"I have read all about Governor West and his pardon reform in the papers," writes Mrs. Wing's mother from Milwaukee, "but I had never expected to see him."

BOTH DIE IN AUTO

of the burgomaster, who was in the automobile with them.

As policemen seized Prinzipp the burgomaster shouted to the chauffeur of the archduke's automobile to make full speed for the palace. Weeping, the murdered archduke's wife clasped her husband in her arms and prayed over him as he breathed his last. She herself died, kneeling and still in prayer, as the car sped through the streets.

Physicians were waiting at the palace, but there was nothing for them to do.

Vienna's hidebound conventionalism was shown in the fact that the Gazette, the official organ, in describing the assassination, made no mention of his consort's death with that of the archduke. In another section of the paper an unofficial account was given of her assassination.

The bodies were embalmed. It was expected they would be brought to Vienna tomorrow and it was officially stated that the funeral would be July 10.

Francis Ferdinand was 51 years old. He married the Countess Chotek July 1, 1900, when he was 37 and she 33.

Fell in Love With Girl.

The countess was an attendant in the household of Archduchess Isabelle, one of whose daughters it was hoped the archduke would wed. It was there that he met and fell in love with her. Learning of the romance, the archduchess turned the countess out. She took refuge with her sister in Dresden, and there the archduke continued to see her frequently.

Tremendous pressure was brought to prevent him from marrying her, but he was adamant. The marriage, of course, wasmorganatic, but, unlike many other royalties, the archduke persisted in considering it binding for all purposes, and would not take another and an official wife.

Countess Is Ignored.

After the wedding the emperor met the countess and formed a high opinion of her. She was ignored, however, by other royalties, and this led to much hard feeling between the archduke and them.

The couple had several children and it was generally believed that, had Francis Ferdinand come to the throne, he would have risked everything to validate his marriage and establish his eldest son's title to succeed him. This unquestionably would have been desperately resisted by the rest of the family and might have meant civil war but it was not thought likely that the archduke, a man of tremendous determination, would have shrunk from even this.

His death undoubtedly will shut his heir out from any possibility of ever ascending the Austrian throne. Many predictions were made, however, that his claim to the throne of Hungary would be pushed, with every prospect of the gravest trouble between the two countries.

Was Physically Vigorous.

The archduke was physically and mentally extremely vigorous. He was generally considered a political reactionary, but strongly imperialistic views and was an ardent militarist. He was a devout Catholic.

Archduke Karl Francis Joseph, the new heir to the emperor, was born August 17, 1887. His father was Archduke Otto Francis Joseph, brother of the present emperor. Three years ago he was married to Princess Zita, daughter of Duke Robert of Bourbon-Parma. They have a son and a daughter. The families of both Karl and his wife are tainted by insanity.

Karl had a public school education and is generally supposed to hold somewhat democratic views.
