Stump, her son Fred Stump, and the C. S. Hamiltons, at the splendid J. B. Stump farm, which comprises nearly 700 acres near Suver. The Salem contingent, filling numerous autos, motored to their destination early in the day, and at 1 o'clock circled tables arranged out of doors beneath magnificent oak and maple trees, that had witnessed 50 summers and winters. Following the serving of the several courses and remaining seated the guests were furnished an old-fashioned patriotic program, including an oration by Judge Burnett, toasts, songs and story-telling. ceived favorably by the general public as it will be one of the first practical steps in securing mountain water for Salem, though that result may require several years before it is finally realized. It is stated in the message that the gross revenue of the water company's plant is $74,000 per year, which would be sufficient to furnish a sinking fund for the payment of bonds and for the general running expenses, besides leaving a profit. The message of Mayor Steeves to the council follows:

The Mayor's Message.
To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Salem, Oregon: Gentlemen: The question of the City owning the water supply for Salem dates back a little more than five years. The question was almost settled in 1911 when the purchase of the plant of the Salem Water Company was nearly consummated.

Reviewing the matter briefly, Section 17 of the City Charter was amended August 15, 1910, by a vote of the people, authorizing the purchase of the plant which now supplies the City and the issue of bonds for that purpose, but the ordinance finally completing the transaction which passed the council May 1, 1911, failed of approval and the purchase was thus temporarily suspended. Since then the council has appointed committees and engineers from time to time and has spent considerable money in attempting to bring the matter to a successful outcome.

Conditions have materially changed during the last three or four months and additional information is available in the records of the Railroad Commission arising out of the hearing held by that body in March, 1914, upon complaint of the City. The appraisals made in 1910 by the engineers hired for that purpose have been carefully checked, complete new appraisements made by the Water Company and also by the engineers of the Railroad Commission and in addition to these re-evaluations the earnings of the Salem Water, Light & Power Company have been furnished to the Railroad Commission in detail. This information was not previously obtainable and in-

COMMERCIAL CLUB BANQUET WEDNESDAY

Dr. Smith, Democratic Candidate for Governor, to Talk on "Business of Running a State"—Others to Speak.

When members of the promotion department of the Salem Commercial Club meet Wednesday evening in the dining room of the Marion hotel for the regular assembly they will be treated to a first-class dinner, a snappy program and a general good time all around.

Ralph Moores, secretary of the promotion department, has been planning interesting things to be pulled off at this session, but will not reveal the details until the time comes to spring them on the unsuspecting guests. If everything works out as he plans, he will have some unique and surprising events to make the minutes seem like seconds and the hours like minutes.

Withycombe at Last Banquet.
"The Business of Running a State" is the subject that will be discussed by Dr. C. J. Smith, democratic candidate for governor of Oregon. At the last meeting Dr. Withycombe, republican candidate for governor, was present and spoke. It is expected that the address to be made by Dr. Smith will be of exceptional interest and that he will outline the policy he would follow should he be elected chief executive of the Beaver state.

J. H. Dengel, Salem representative for the Wagner Wholesale Fruit dealers of Chicago, will talk on the subject "The Fruit Market and Conditions." He is a competent authority to discuss the situation, as he is here in the thick of the buying and knows the situation.

O. M. Elliott, newly elected city superintendent of schools, who has recently arrived from Twin Falls, Idaho, will discuss "The Relation of the School System to the Industrial Development of the Community." This will be the first time that the new city superintendent will appear before the business men of Salem, and what he has to say will be listened to with more than usual interest. He is said to be an interesting talker with the ability to say things.

Trouble Begins at 6:30.
The session will begin at 6:30 sharp so that business may be cleared away while the dinner progresses. There will be an orchestra to furnish music during the early part of the evening, while other features of fun and amusement will be sprung at intervals. Max Buren, one of Salem's prominent business men, will be at the head of the table when the program begins and will introduce the speakers with remarks wise and otherwise.

Jack Crowe, manager of the Hotel Marion, who has served up many a elaborate dinner to the people of Salem, promises that he will do better than he has done in the past, for the good of the cause and the welfare of the inner man. He says he will set up such vintages that the cuisines of the metropolitan hotels cannot excel in quality and deliciousness.

All this fun, frolic, business, pleasure and dinner will cost each guest 50 cents. A large number of members of the promotion department are expected to be present at that price to help make things merry.

THE THIRD CASE WAS FROM "THE CASE"

Third Case to Come Before Industrial Accident Commission Was That of a Pressman in Portland Job Office.

The second case to come before the newly installed industrial accident commission was brought from this city, Dewey McKilrath, who resides at 982 South 21st street, and is employed as a helper on the cut-off saw by the Charles K. Spaulding Logging company, cut his thumb on the saw on July 2 and the complete blanks were filed with the commission this morning. It was a slight case and the report states that McKilrath lost but one day and four hours as a result of the accident and was back at his machine yesterday.

Case No. 3 was reported from Lane county where a pressfeeder in the employ of Yoran's printing house caught his hand in the press and smashed two fingers, necessitating the care of a physician. The proper blanks were sent to the employers to be filled out and returned to the commission.

In reporting the accident, J. H. Koke, manager of the printing house, says: "In twenty-one years experience in printing business it seems very singular to the writer that he has seen his first accident of any consequence in a printing office, and that it should happen on the first day that the Oregon law took effect, also on the first day of the month seems a queer coincidence."

That the financial condition of West Salem is good considering that it has never before ventured into the bond market, was evidenced yesterday when the West Salem sewer bonds sold to Morris Brothers of Portland for $57 premium. The bonds were issued for $10,900 and the city received $10,957 as a result of the sale. This is considered to be an excellent showing for so young a city as West Salem is.
